Our Bidders Mean Business

As of August, 2019 Auction House of Minnesota has access to over 320,000 online bidders which means more eyes on your assets, more competition, more bidding wars, and higher prices.

But, we don't stop there! Each and every auction is also marketed online through Craigslist, Facebook, email lists, niche marketing like ClassicCars.com, local car shows, collector clubs, and, when appropriate, through local and county papers and their websites.

Our goal is to team up with you, apply our 20 years of industry experience, and reach your auction goals.

Quality Equals Results

At Auction House of Minnesota, we believe (and the numbers prove) that professional, quality photos, videos, and descriptions are what bring the highest prices in our online auction format.

Because of this we make sure to research your items and ask a few questions to make sure that we provide our bidders with the right information to bid high with confidence.

And, we take multiple, high resolution photos of each item to give our bidders the feeling that they are right there looking at your item which, again, builds confidence and results in bolder bidders bidding higher.

The Process

Consignment Agreement is signed and your auction dates are chosen.

Organization, lotting, photography, research, and descriptions are completed.

Your auction goes live and bidders start bidding your items up!

Your auction closes, items are paid for and picked-up.

A complete list of each item and what it sold for is mailed to you along with your settlement check.
