Short Bio (50 words)

Louis Halpern draws on 25 years in technology and business to deliver this urgent analysis. Navigating life with ADHD, bipolar disorder, and dyslexia gives him a distinctive lens to spot patterns others miss, honed through work with organisations including Nando's, BBC TVL, and Marks & Spencer.

Medium Bio (100 words)

Louis Halpern has spent over 25 years at the intersection of technology and business, working with organisations including Nando's, BBC TVL, and Marks & Spencer. A proud Londoner, he navigates the world with ADHD, bipolar disorder, and dyslexia—differences that have become strengths, enabling him to connect dots others miss. From this unique perspective, Louis sees the looming economic upheaval that most overlook. In The Coalescence – A World Without Jobs, he blends insider knowledge with lived experience to deliver both a warning and a roadmap for navigating the most significant economic transformation in human history.

Long Bio (250 words)

While many celebrate technological progress, Louis Halpern sees the patterns shaping our economic future.

His neurodivergent mind connects dots others overlook, exposing the crisis hiding in plain sight.

A Londoner navigating ADHD, bipolar disorder, and dyslexia, Louis has turned difference into strength. These perspectives enable him to anticipate developments long before more linear thinkers recognise them.

With 25+ years in technology and business, he has worked with organisations including Nando's, BBC TVL, and Marks & Spencer. From this vantage point, he has witnessed how technology transforms companies and disrupts industries—and why our collective response remains dangerously inadequate.

His mind works rapidly, peeling back complexity to reveal essential truths. In writing this book, he collaborated with the very AI technologies he critiques, showing how humans and machines can work together while maintaining a critical human perspective.

"You Are All Fired By An Algorithm – The Coalescence – A World Without Jobs" is born of Louis urgent conviction: society is unprepared for what's ahead. This is not another book about technological change—it is both a warning and a roadmap, written by someone uniquely equipped to guide us through the storm.
