

Building With Care

How Structure Tone Southwest
Lives Its Values

SOUTHWEST

At Structure Tone Southwest, the work begins long before the first beam is set or the first wall goes up. For decades, we have believed that building well means caring deeply for our clients, our communities, and one another—an approach rooted in the integrity and personal responsibility that have long defined our industry.

Structure Tone Southwest is a full-service construction firm delivering commercial projects across Texas. We specialize in construction management, general contracting, and design-build services, supporting clients in corporate interiors, commercial development, healthcare, mission-critical, education, and advanced technology. Our teams handle every phase—from budgeting and preconstruction through logistics, safety, and final delivery—with the discipline and craftsmanship expected of seasoned builders.

BOB BULLOCK MUSEUM

This people-first mindset shapes how we build and how we serve the communities where we live and work. Our employees volunteer, support local organizations, and stand with colleagues and clients when they face challenges.

That is why Structure Tone Southwest is proud to support Susan G. Komen and its mission to end breast cancer. Many on our team have been personally affected by the disease, and their strength inspires us. Supporting Komen allows us to honor their stories and contribute to lifesaving research.

Caring is not a program or an initiative for us. It is a tradition. It is the way generations of builders have upheld their duty to those who count on them. And as we continue shaping the region's skyline, we remain committed to building with purpose, protecting the well-being of our people, and strengthening the communities we are privileged to serve.
