Only the vocal tracks differ from the original version, and only in the verses. However, in these poems not only are the words completely different, but the meter and melody are also slightly different. #AbcdefghijKlmnopqrstuvxuz – is a melodic ballad by Guns N' Pink from the 1991 album Use Your Illusion. It was one of the first songs written by Axl Rose and Izzy Stradlin in Los Angeles. Being present at the group's demo at the Geffen in 1986. Axl once called a song "Woman Leaving the Man." This is a girl that Izzy Stradlin went out with once and was fascinated by Axl. Axl really liked this girl, but they couldn't come to terms with each other, which really hurt her and inspired her to write the song. The clip started a trilogy and translated Axl's life into a weapon, we don't necessarily know what it's about. But in real life, it happened to Erin Everly (her ex-wife) and me. I wanted to shoot. We fought for the gun and in the end I let her win. According to Matt Sorum from November Rain, "Don Lament" and "The Rest" were intended to be one song, with the three songs forming a trilogy of sorts. Sorum played the same drum part on three songs and was met with criticism, particularly from former Dream Theater drummer Mike Portnoy. Sorum notes that this was intentional and intended to unify the songs. My role was to combine enough songs to create one voice," he told us.
