Updated COVID Protocols

Every parish in the Archdiocese recently received an update on protocols for the coronavirus. Mostly, these won't have an effect on anyone coming to worship. But they will take some of the burden from the volunteers who are cleaning.

Based on the new CDC guidelines, the church only needs to be cleaned once a day, not after every service. And the solutions used for cleaning no longer need to be sanitizers, but regular soapy water. This is a result of the CDC's investigation which found that the virus does not survive on hard surfaces. This will reduce the number of volunteers we need, especially on the weekends.

It is also important to remember that the rest of the protocols remain in place: wear a mask, get your temperature checked, sanitize your hands, and maintain social distance.

Finally, a reminder that everyone should be vaccinated for their own health and the health of anyone with whom they may come into close contact.

After the Pandemic

With the arrival of the nice weather and the spring blossoms, everyone wants to get out and find out how soon we can resume our normal activities. I am one of those "everyone."

But the unfolding of the pandemic in these past thirteen months was not just a battle of a virus versus humankind. It was also a very different way of working and playing, a different way of exercising and praying. It was, in a word, a different way of living.

Part of the vast difference most of us experienced was a slower pace, with a lot fewer unexpected interruptions. And I think conversations have already begun into what we have learned from this unique time, and how we can apply the positive stuff we learned into how we can choose to live our lives as we slowly progress out of the pandemic and into whatever the new reality is going to look like.

Organizations have begun asking certain fundamental questions such as do people need to be in a central office space in order to work well together? For many singles, and more than a few married or partnered people, the questions of how to deal with the experiences of being alone, working at home, and encountering the strong sense of loneliness that creeps in, uninvited and unwelcomed? It was often difficult before the pandemic to separate work life from home life, and now, working from home, it has become inseparable. These people have discovered they do not want to spend time "sheltering in place." They much prefer the distance that working anyplace but home provides. How can healthy boundaries be created so work can be "turned off" and home "turned on"?

Family life has been another area of conversation. While it is true that the pandemic brought families into more regular contact, for some families this was a surprise and a delight they do not want to lose. But for others, it was a new level of stress they were unprepared for and do not know how to stop or "fix." I have heard from many people who were delighted to discover they really like their family members! It wasn't so much they didn't like them before, as it was that they hadn't spent that much time together for such an extended period. They were pleasantly surprised by how much they enjoyed it. In many cases, this led some people to reconsider how many hours they are working each week. They enjoy their family time in a whole new way and don't want to lose that new awareness. But for some, it is very much the opposite.

Here in church, we also have had a wide breadth of experiences in these thirteen months. With protocols requiring shutting down many of the regularly scheduled activities, our focus became very clear. It is all about praying together in the best ways we possibly can -- for some virtually via live-stream, for others, actually being in church. With all meetings not allowed for health and safety reasons, the "traffic" at the Rectory door and on the phone has been greatly reduced. This, along with most of the rectory staff working from home, resulted in fewer office hours. All of which has caused me to wonder if perhaps this is an opportunity to consider what we are doing and what is it we think and feel we should be doing to live the gospel message? How can we best live out our mission as followers of Jesus?

I don't have the answer to that question. I just think this is the opportune time to begin addressing it. What I am certain of is that there are several dynamics that so many people have articulated in the past few months. The first is that they want to be able to worship God and receive Holy Communion. And the second is that they want to see their friends doing the same, and even if they don't know some names, they want to see the familiar faces in church that make this a community. And I am pretty certain a third dynamic would be that we find ways to reach out to those who are suffering, impoverished, hungry, lonely and alone, sick and suffering, victims of discrimination, the homeless, the unemployed, and others who are bearing an unbearable burden made more difficult because of the pandemic.

So, this is an invitation. I encourage you to have conversations about this with your family members, friends, and neighbors. The pandemic has broken the argument that "we have always done it this way." In fact, for the past year, we have done nothing the way we always did it. This can frighten us, or it can challenge us to find new and better ways of doing so many things. Questions that come to mind are:

- How do we want to do church as we begin to emerge from the pandemic?
- Or, to put it another way, IF we were designing this for the first time, what are the parts we want to be sure get included?
- And what are the parts that just don't seem all that important to the mission of living and spreading the gospel?

Please send me an email or a letter with your own insights, desires, and hopes for the future of this parish, for your family, and for your work. And I would appreciate it if you gave me permission to share some of those with the parish through our newsletter (which replaced the hard copy bulletin). Whether or not you want to be identified is up to you.

The pandemic has caused over a half million deaths in this country. It has forced us into ways of living that we could never have imagined and lots of other unpleasant things. But the pandemic has also been a masterful teacher. Does anyone still doubt that it is not a good idea to fool with Mother Nature? Fourteen months ago, had you ever considered your own internal strength and what you could put up with if you had to? Regardless of whether you consider yourself an introvert or an extrovert, when was the last time you were so aware of the importance of normal human interactions in your life?

Just as the pandemic has been a unique moment in our history, now we have a unique opportunity to challenge ourselves to be the best people we can as we reshape and renew and rehabilitate how "we are church."

Growing in Faith

The history of the early church, which we hear about in the accounts of Acts during the Easter season, vividly recounts the struggles and clashes of personalities at the time. This all makes the stories come alive for me and enhances my appreciation of what these early believers must have gone through.

In the first reading for this Sunday, we learn about Barnabas intervening on behalf of Saul, who becomes Paul after his conversion. The disciples know of Saul's reputation as an enemy and persecutor of the early Christians. So, their fear of him kept Saul at a distance and not welcome within the community of disciples in Jerusalem.

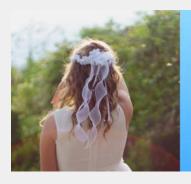

"Then Barnabas took charge of him..." What a great line! Barnabas becomes the great connector between the future Paul and the disciples of Jerusalem. Barnabas knew that the conversion of Saul was real and that he was one with the community and a true believer. And, thanks to Barnabas, the disciples embraced Saul and welcomed him into the fold.

In our time, perhaps we need more people who intervene and speak up for others, like Barnabas. People, who see the truth, recognize genuine faith and act on behalf of bringing forth a community that is more interconnected. People who "take charge" to ensure that others might be brought to spiritual insights and clarity in the face of skewed publicized stories and manufactured identities.

Barnabas shows us the way. Amen.

Catholic Charities Collection on Mother's Day

After spending years in a Nepali refugee camp, the Jha family arrived here with nothing. Catholic Charities met them at the airport and took them in hand, helping them learn English, find work, enroll in school, and get medical care. They were among the 469 refugees resettled last year.

Please give to Catholic Charities on Mother's Day to help refugees build a new and hopeful life. Learn more at www.catholiccharities.net.

Resurrection Compost Program

I am excited to inform you of a new composting/gardening project that we are starting at St. Gertrude this spring. Working in partnership with a composting team from St. Gregory, we will build three new composting bins. Parishioners can donate their composting materials to a specific bin before or after coming to church. The composting material then becomes a natural fertilizer, which we will use to grow a vegetable garden. Once the vegetables are ready for harvest, they will be donated to St. Thomas of Canterbury's soup kitchen to feed the poor and the hungry.

This is a win-win program in every facet and is a rooted in the principles of Laudate Sí. Pope Francis tells us, "As stewards of God's creation, we are called to make the earth a beautiful garden for the human family." The Resurrection Compost Program is a full circle project bringing new life to discarded debris and using that new life to grow food to help feed the needy and marginalized people in our community.

Of course, a program of this size will need many volunteers. I am hoping that some of the many gardeners in our parish will wish to lend their talents to this project. It will also be an ideal format for students looking for service hours.

In the coming weeks, there will be detailed instructions on how this program works and to what aspects parishioners can lend their talents. Please be on the lookout for these updates that will contain information on how to sign up and get involved. Information will be posted in our weekly e-bulletin and also on our parish website.

I look forward to implementing this program at our parish and bringing to life the ideas of Laudate Si.

Please email me at mbarker@stgertrudechicago.org if you'd like to be part of this initiative or if you have any questions.

Congratulations to St. Gertrude
Parishioner & Musician George Siegle

Congratulations to George Siegle for recently winning the inaugural Aspiring Artist Scholarship Award from Merit School of Music this year. George is currently a senior a Jones College Prep HS and has shared his abundant musical talents with the St. Gertrude community over the past eight years whether playing piano or trumpet.

When the pandemic and lock down began over a year ago, George used his extra time to practice two hours every day (and still continues to do so). He would frequently practice on the beautiful Bechstein concert grand piano in church while preparing for college auditions and treat the staff to a free concert with a gorgeous array of classical music from all periods.

His outstanding work ethic and discipline have garnered him this prestigious award from Merit. He is the only recipient of this award this year and will receive $1,000 to go towards further academic studies.

We applaud George and are extremely grateful for his many contributions to the music ministry programs at St. Gertrude. We know he will be a success wherever he goes.
