

Exit Routes, EAPs, FPPs and Fire Protection

Course Description

This course is part of OSHA's General Industry training.

The course begins with an in-depth examination of essential aspects and protocols of workplace exit routes, preparing employees with the crucial understanding needed for conducting safe and effective emergency evacuations.

Then this course will explore how to effectively implement, understand, and maintain Emergency Action Plans in the workplace, ensuring an environment that is secure, well-prepared, and equipped to handle emergencies affecting all staff members.

Further, you will learn the essential components of a Fire Prevention Plan, outlining practical strategies of methods for hazard identification, safety equipment management, and the promotion of a culture dedicated to readiness and proactive responses, thereby safeguarding the workplace against fire hazards.

Finally, this course will go through critical fire safety practices, preventative strategies, and emergency response techniques, all designed to enhance your knowledge and skill set for a safer working environment.

Online training is flexible, efficient, and cost effective, so candidates can progress through the modules at their own pace in their own time, making it easy to fit the training around their work and personal life.
