

Jonathan Wright is an accomplished business operator with 25+ years of experience, including as a Board Member, Founder and CEO of a technology enabled health services company, and a C-level legal and compliance executive of highly technical software, healthcare, renewable resource and NASDAQ-listed biotechnology companies.

Over the course of his career, Mr. Wright has served as CEO and Founder of Opya, EVP - General Counsel of Kosan Biosciences (acquired by Bristol Myers Squibb), General Counsel of Targeted Genetics (acquired by AmpliPhi Biosciences Corporation), General Counsel of Dexterra (acquired by Antenna Software), General Counsel of Widevine Technologies (acquired by Google) and Corbis Corporation (acquired by VCG) as its Corporate Counsel during its efforts to transform to digital product delivery and consolidate the stock photography industry. Mr. Wright has been an integral part of teams that have raised billions of dollars of investment capital in public and private markets.

In addition, he invested in early stage companies as a member at the Sand Hill Angels Fund for 7 years. He also served on the BIO General Counsel Committee for four years. Mr. Wright regularly speaks at industry and governmental conferences, including on panels before the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission on capital raising.

Prior to becoming an entrepreneur and in-house counsel, he practiced business and transactional law at a large international firm in their life sciences and corporate finance practice group. He has a J.D. from Columbia University School of Law and a B.A. from the University of Washington.