

#1 Basic, Solid Wedding Vows Script

Officiant: Welcome, family, friends and loved ones. We gather here today to celebrate the wedding of NAME and NAME.

You have come here to share in this formal commitment they make to one another, to offer your love and support to this union, and to allow NAME and NAME to start their married life together surrounded by the people dearest and most important to them. So welcome to everyone, who have traveled from near and far.

NAME and NAME thank you for your presence here today and now they ask for your blessing, encouragement, and lifelong support, for their decision to be married.

Definition of Marriage.

Officiant: Marriage is perhaps the greatest and most challenging adventure of human relationships.

No ‘ceremony’ can create your marriage; only you can do that—through love and patience; through dedication and perseverance; through talking and listening; through helping and supporting and believing in each other; through tenderness and laughter; through learning to forgive, learning to appreciate your differences, and by learning to make the important things matter --- and to let go of the rest.

What this ceremony can do is to witness and affirm the choice you make to stand together as life mates and partners.

Declaration of Intent.

Officiant: Will you, NAME, take this woman/person/man to be your wedded wife/spouse?

Groom: I will

Officiant: Will you, NAME, take this man/person/woman to be your wedded husband/spouse?

Bride: I will

Officiant: Outstanding and thank you both.

Readings.

Officiant: In the spirit of the importance of strong friendships to a marriage, NAME and NAME have asked {two friends/a person} to read selections about love that especially resonate with them.

Support of Community.

Officiant: Two people in love do not live in isolation. Their love is a source of strength with which they may nourish not only each other but also the world around them. And in turn, we, their community of friends and family, have a responsibility to this couple. By our steadfast care, respect, and love, we can support their marriage and the new family they are creating today.

Officiant: Now will everyone please rise. Will you who are present here today, surround NAME and NAME in love, offering them the joys of your friendship, and supporting them in their marriage? If so, please signify by saying "I will."

All: I will

Officiant: Thank you. Please, you may be seated.

Wedding Vows.

Officiant: We've come to the point of your ceremony where you're going to say your vows to one another.

But before you do that, I ask you to remember that the joys of marriage rest upon four great keystones: faith, trust, commitment, and acceptance. You should cherish these keystones and see to their care as the unshakeable foundation on which every day of your wedded life is founded.

Let's look at each keystone.

Love is rooted in faith – faith in each other, in your vows taken here, and in the institution and intent of marriage.

Love is also rooted in trust – trust of each other and of your personal, sacred commitment to the bonds of holy matrimony.

Love is also rooted in commitment – commitment to the offices of being a loving partner, a trusted advisor, of your commitment to each other, and of your personal, sacred commitment to the bonds of holy matrimony.

And love is also rooted in acceptance – acceptance of each other through the years, the joys, and the trials ahead.

So, attend to those four keystones — for they will be the foundation of an abiding and deepening relationship for all time.

No other ties are more tender, no other vows more sacred, than those you now assume.

If you are able to keep the vows you take here today, not because of any religious or civic law, but out of a desire to love and be loved by another person fully, without limitation, then despite all the ups-and-downs that everyday life can present, your life together, as one couple, will have great joy.

And the home you establish will be a place in which you both will find bliss in the direction of your growth as individuals, as a couple, and perhaps a family, and in your responsibility, and your love.

Please now read the vows you have written for each other.

Bride and Groom: I NAME/NAME, take you, NAME/NAME to be my husband/wife/spouse, my constant friend and partner, and my love.

I will work to create a bond of honesty, respect, and trust; one that withstands the tides of time and change and grows along with us.

I vow to honor and respect you for all that you are and will become, taking pride in who we are, both separately and together.

I promise to challenge you and to accept challenges from you.

I will join with you and our community in an ongoing struggle to create a world we all want to live in, where love and friendship will be recognized and celebrated in all their many forms.

Our home will be a sanctuary and a respite for us, for our families, and for those whom we cherish.

Above all, I will give you my love freely and unconditionally.

I pledge this to you from the bottom of my heart, for all the days of our lives.

Officiant: May I have the rings, please?

Please repeat after me:

I give you this ring...

As a daily reminder of my love for you.

And let its endless circle comfort you...

In the endless commitment I give you, to our marriage today.

Officiant:

By the power of your love and commitment.

And the power vested in me.

I now pronounce you husband and wife/a married couple/ a wedded couple.

You may now kiss each other!
