"Vic's combination of leadership, dedication, and strong communication skills will allow her to succeed as an EP. She worked on Good Morning Emerson and in that time she not only devoted an incredible amount of time to her show editor position but also took the initiative to come into the studio, make suggestions to improve the quality of the show and constantly offer to assist with other aspects of production. She was knowledgeable on the different positions she encountered because of her experience from her high school Film/TV club in which she took on many leadership roles, and so she wasn't afraid to jump in and help on set when she could. In the past, Good Morning Emerson had struggled with post production but Vic held herself to a high standard and managed to exceed every expectation. She even delivered each show the day it aired because she truly prioritized the show. Despite working on post production for the majority of the day, she would never complain about the work she was doing and it was clear she is willing to put in the work to see GME succeed. Good Morning Emerson was lucky to have her and will be even stronger with her as an EP."
