Election administration equipment

Select all that apply. Grant funds may be used for any purpose that falls under the broad categories listed above. After you receive your grant, you will be permitted to reallocate grant funds between the above purposes with notice to CTCL.

Will acceptance of this grant require a vote of approval by your local legislature, council, or board? *

Yes

No

In many jurisdictions acceptance of grant funds requires a local approval process. For example a county commission may vote to accept the funds and then distribute them to the election department. If you have questions about how this process works in your jurisdiction, we encourage you to consult your county or city attorney.

Title of Individual Signatory or Name of Signatory Body *

Center for Technology and Civic Life – CTCL (Zucker Bucks)

We connect Americans with the information they need to become and remain civically engaged, and ensure that our elections are more professional, inclusive, and secure.

CTCL is a team of civic technologists, trainers, researchers, election administration and data experts working to foster a more informed and engaged democracy, and helping to modernize U.S. elections.

Our founders – Tiana Epps-Johnson, a civic technologist, Whitney May, a former election official, and Donny Bridges, a civic data expert – joined forces in 2012 to get more Americans civically engaged. Bringing together their unique, individual areas of expertise offered a chance to break down the traditional siloes found in the civic data and election administration worlds.

They recognized an opportunity to lift up innovations and tackle challenges on a nationwide level – by highlighting best practices, creating easy to use resources for administrators, and developing infrastructure to better deliver information about elections.

Today, CTCL is a nationally-recognized nonprofit that partners with everyone – from rural election offices to the largest tech companies in the world.
