To Whom It May Concern,

It is with great respect and appreciation that I write this letter of endorsement for Jennifer Cicci, who recently delivered a powerful and deeply impactful presentation to our dental hygiene students at Oulton College.

Jennifer generously shared her personal journey as an HPV-related oral cancer patient, offering a rare and invaluable perspective from both a patient and a clinician's point of view. Her story was not only compelling but also educational, touching on critical themes such as communication, advocacy, beneficence, and accountability within the healthcare system.

Throughout the hour-long session, our students were fully engaged—captivated by Jennifer's honesty, vulnerability, and strength. She fostered an open and respectful dialogue that encouraged reflection and inspired future healthcare professionals to consider the human side of clinical care. She has the ability to connect with the audience and translate her experience into meaningful lessons.

Jennifer's presentation has left a lasting impression on our students and faculty alike. Her courage and commitment to education and patient advocacy make her a valuable speaker and contributor to any healthcare or academic setting.

We are grateful for her time and insight, and we wholeheartedly endorse her as a speaker and educator.
