Discipline pays off for Rosas

El Paso tennis ace
Notre Dame-bound

By Bill Knight
El Paso Times

Ronnie Rosas had his choice of 29 different colleges to continue his tennis career. The El Paso High standout chose Notre Dame because of its disciplined program — and its academic opportunities, too.

His father, Rene Rosas, laughed when he said, "I told Ronnie it was OK to go to Notre Dame as long as he stayed away from the football field. I don't want him going anywhere near there . . . they might put a helmet on him."

Before signing a letter-of-intent last week to attend Notre Dame on a tennis scholarship, Rosas narrowed his choices to five: San Diego State, San Diego University, Arizona, Southern Methodist and, of course, Notre Dame.

"I just liked the program and I felt like I could fit in right away there," said Rosas, who ranks in the top 10 percent of his senior class at El Paso High.

"It's a very disciplined program. Also, 100 percent of their athletes last year graduated in four years. That's my goal, too."

The 18-year-old Rosas has trained under Gene Stogner, a noted disciplinarian, at Santa Teresa Country Club for most of his tennis life.

"Ronnie is a good kid," Rene Rosas said. "But the framework of all this discipline was laid right here with Gene Stogner. Any kid who comes out of Gene's program is well-behaved, respectful and hard-working."

Stogner's guidance, and Rosas' hard work paid off again Saturday when the two-time defending District 1-5A champion won the regional championship. In the finals, the second-seeded Rosas de-

Rosas' road to success

■ High school: He won District 1-5A as a freshman, runner-up as a sophomore and was training in Phoenix during the '88 season. This year, he won 1-5A and the Region I championships, compiling a 34-1 record with

■ Age group: Nationally ranked since he was 12. He was 13th in the nation in boys 14-under. Last year he was No. 2 in the nation in doubles with Frank Salazar. Two years ago Rosas and Salazar reached the 16-under national doubles finals.

■ Rosas quote: "It was a great experience, being able to play in nationals, to reach himself when he was 14 — flying to nationals, handling everything. It's been good for him."

Rosas learned tennis from his mother, tagging along when he was only 5. He reached the finals of his first tournament at age 7 — playing against 10-year-olds.

Synopsis

Born in El Paso, Texas, Ron Rosas first picked up a tennis racket at the age of five. By his early teens, he was rising in the ranks as one of the top junior tennis players in the Southwest. Although he was recruited heavily by many schools nearby, he was determined to get a scholarship from his dream school, the University of Notre Dame. He wrote a letter to their head coach, Bobby Bayliss, and was able to get a chance to play in front of him at a national tournament. From there, Ron was able to secure a visit, and later a scholarship to play for Notre Dame.

He was a standout player at Notre Dame during one of collegiate tennis’s greatest underdog runs in the 1992 NCAA National Tennis Tournament. Beginning the tournament as the 10-seed, Ron, alongside notable teammates, such as David Dilucia, made a run all the way to the National Title Game. The run was not only historical for Notre Dame, but in the tennis world as a whole, as the Notre Dame squad was the first “Northern” school to reach the finals in Men’s Tennis.

When his career at Notre Dame concluded, Ron went on to play in several professional events in an effort to pursue tennis as a career. After an injury, Ron moved on to coaching and started his business career in Dallas, Texas.

Men’s tennis hopes to move closer to NCAA bid

By JENNIFER MARTEN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men’s tennis team will travel to Ball State this weekend hoping to move another step closer to an invitation to the NCAA tournament.

The Irish will use the same line-up that was successful against Michigan earlier this week. Junior Dave DiLucia will start at number-one singles. He will face Dan Kronauge who is ranked sixth in the Midwest this year.

Notre Dame coach Bob Bayliss described Kronauge as a “very strong and aggressive kid who can really hit.”

At number-two singles, sophomore Chuck Coleman will meet Curt Josselyn, a big player with solid groundstrokes.

Ball State’s Scott Campbell will challenge Will Forsyth at third singles with his powerful serve.

street-smart player.

Causing trouble for sophomore Andy Zurcher will be Doug Campbell. Campbell, a transfer from Ohio University, won the Mid-Atlantic Conference singles championships while he was there.

Completing the singles match-ups, sophomore Ron Rosas will face Paul Kruse, a transfer from Navy. Kruse has an aggressive serve and volley style that could be hard to handle.

Doubles competition could prove key to the final score. Ball State has a great doubles tandem in Kronauge and Scott Campbell and could give DiLucia and Coleman a run for their money.

Last year, the teams fought it out down to number-three doubles with the Irish victorious in the end by a score of 5-4.

Coach Bayliss has high regard for the Cardinals. “Ball State

El Pasoan playing in NCAA tennis finals

Three years ago, Notre Dame tennis coach Bobby Bayliss promised El Pasoan Ronnie Rosas and his other recruits a national-caliber team.

Today, the Irish could become only the fourth non-West Coast team to win the NCAA men's tennis title in the last 33 years. The tournament is being held at the University of Georgia in Athens.

Rosas has won all three of his No. 5 singles matches to help the No. 10-seeded Irish reach the finals of the team tournament against Stanford. On Monday, Notre Dame upset No.

1 ranked USC 5-1. Rosas beat the Trojans' Phil Whitesell 6-1, 6-1. Rosas is a 1989 graduate of El Paso High.

Rosas has a 16-3 record this spring. His biggest win of the season may have come on Sunday in a 5-4 quarterfinal win over Georgia. Georgia had beaten Notre Dame twice by 6-3 scores.

Against Georgia's Jack Frierson, Rosas pulled out a 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 win that gave the Irish a 4-2 singles lead. "Our first game went 19 minutes and the first set lasted an hour and 18 minutes," said Rosas. "I knew that we were up 3-2 as my match went into the third set."

Next Monday, Rosas leaves for Europe to attend a three-week business seminar for class credit. Then he plans to compete in a tennis tour in Spain.

"I couldn't imagine a day where I didn't play tennis"

It was in Dallas where Ron also became a father. Valuing faith and family most in life, Ron devoted his life to his family and sharing his love for tennis with them. With his wife Victoria, they created a beautiful life for their family.

Suddenly, everything changed. He was diagnosed with Pneumonia on December 29, 2022. Things took a turn for the worst quickly, and he was intubated and in a coma within 24 hours of feeling his first symptoms. The doctors didn't think Ron would make it. He was given his last rites early the next morning.

A blurry, dimly lit hospital room. A patient is lying in a bed in the center, partially covered by a white sheet. Medical equipment, including a stand with a bright light and various monitors and tubes, is visible around the bed. The room has a clinical, sterile feel with light blue walls and a tiled floor. The overall image quality is low, with significant motion blur or out-of-focus elements.

When Ron woke up, it was January 14, 2023.

While in a coma, Ron went into septic shock and had to undergo the use of Vasopressors, a drug that raises your blood pressure in order to help pump blood to your vital organs. This led to severe necrosis in his arms and legs. The unfortunate news that followed his awakening was something no athlete could ever imagine: amputation of all four limbs. Despite the life-altering news, Ron held strong. He immediately started preparing for the surgeries through rehab and research. But one thing prevented him from rushing into the operation - his need to play tennis again.

This is what led Ron to Ohio State University and his primary surgeon, Dr. Jason Souza. While local doctors in Dallas all told him they could operate and complete the amputations within the week of learning his fate, none had answers on what Ron's next steps would be post-surgery. That was until he met Dr. Souza on a Zoom call. While on the call, Dr. Souza did something no local doctor had done before - he asked Ron what he wanted and how he wanted to move forward. Ron had two answers to the question. First, he wanted to live a quality life without a lot of pain. Second, he wanted to be able to hold a racquet and play tennis again. Dr. Souza said he would do everything that he could to make those a reality. From there, Ron was all in, he was off to Ohio State.

Dr. Souza and his team completed Ron's surgery and were able to save his arms below the elbow and his legs below his knees, allowing for joint movement. Ron got his wish. If everything went right, he could play tennis again.

*But Ron doesn't just want to play tennis again.
He wants to compete for a Grand Slam Title.*

His first stop: The 2026 US Open.

Ron plans to compete in all four tennis majors in their "Quadriplegic Division". In this division, players who have lost 25% or more of their limbs are eligible to compete. Today, no athletes in the Quadriplegic Division have lost 100% of their limbs.

Ron is training to become the first.

Ron has begun training and rehabbing his body in order to get back on the tennis court. It's not an easy task.

He is working with a prosthetic team in Dallas, Texas to create the first fully prosthetic tennis arm, which will allow him to hold and play with a tennis racket.

Look & Feel

The Ron Rosas story is filled with color.. colorful people, places, and moments.

The look and location of the interviews will be consistent with who the person is.

We will create a set that separates the subject from the location.

Ron and his teammates will be on a tennis court in front of a backdrop with rich, warm, directional lighting.

The doctors will be at their hospitals with the same feel to the visuals.

A prosthetic leg is positioned on a light-colored wooden floor. The leg features a black, textured socket at the top, a silver-colored mechanical joint in the middle, and a white Under Armour sneaker with white laces at the bottom. To the left of the leg is a light-colored, tufted sofa with several cushions. The scene is dimly lit, with a soft light source from the left creating a gentle glow on the floor and the sofa.

Ron's family will be at home.

Our plan is to re-enact crucial parts of the story.

- Footage of a young Ron in El Paso learning the game of tennis.
- Signing letter of intent to Notre Dame
- Footage of college level players in a tournament
- Teaching his girls to play
- All emergency and hospital scenes
- Wheelchair tennis action shots

Act One: El Paso to Notre Dame

The first act will cover the early stages of Ron's life and his relationship with tennis.

Rene Rosas watches his 10-year-old son am a hard shot across the net, but his 7-year-old daughter returns it. "Way to daughter," he yells, adding, "that'll teach that smart-aleck kid."

The "smart-aleck" is a pretty good ten-player. Brother Robble had a good tennis career going until an injury fouled it up. And the biggest brother of them all, Rene Jr., doesn't play much tennis, but he's the only one in the family that's found other interests. His thing is music.

FOR THE FATHER, Rene, a dentist off the court, the game of tennis and what it

They don't make fun of his game though. Rene Rosas has become a pretty fair tennis player. It seems to run in the family.

"It's a good game to play for fun. I took some instruction and Joe Pennie taught me the right things to do. I found that tennis is a skill game, a finesse game.

Act Two: Sickness, Coma, Last Rights...Amputations

The second act will cover Ron's Diagnosis with Pneumonia and the aftermath that ensued.

- Ron's wonderful life with his family.
- Early hospitalization with Pneumonia.
- Intubated and put into a medically induced coma.
- Develops Sepsis & is put on Vasopressors.
- Effect on Victoria and the family.
- The decision to amputate all four of his limbs.
- Primary Surgeon Dr. Souza and the medical team at Ohio State University.
- Beginning of rehab and new daily routine.
- His goal to compete in the 2026 US Open.

"Theres a lot of people that would curl up and not want to get back to a certain level. But I still have a lot more life, so I want to live it all"

Act Three: Goal to Play Wheelchair Tennis in the 2026 US Open

The Third Act will follow Ron's journey to the US Open.

- His training and rehabilitation.
- Matches to qualify.
- Struggles.
- Ultimately, compete.

"From the mindset of an athlete, I took it one point at a time, one game at a time, one set at a time."

Closing

We hope that our presentation shows our deep commitment to make this documentary a success both creatively and financially.

Please consider joining us and become a part of Ron's journey.
