

April 2026 Newsletter

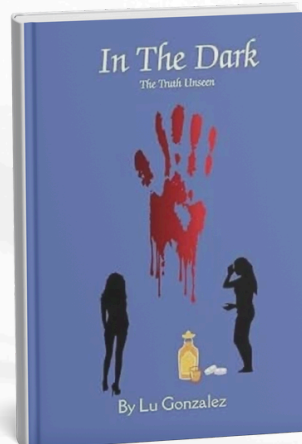

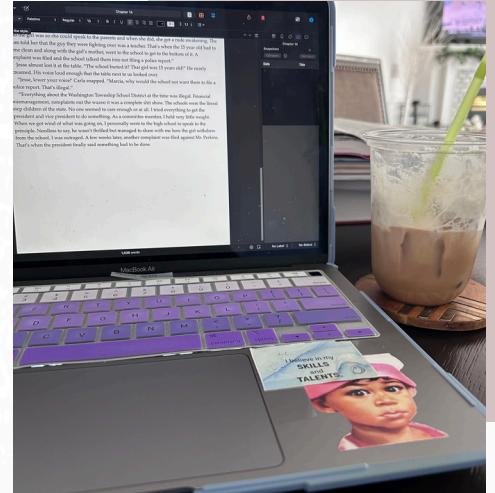

April is here and things are busy in the best way.

First things first...I am officially in the final quarter of writing book two in the Antonia series, and I am SO excited about how this story is coming together. The plot? So good. The characters? Doing what they need to do. Me? Slightly distracted by social media... but we're getting it together . It's time to lock in because this book deserves it.

This month is also going to be full of life outside of writing. I'll be spending time going on college tours with Jade (still can't believe we're here), enjoying spring break, and celebrating Easter. I'm really looking forward to Easter service at church there's just something so special about that time.

And can we talk about the weather?! Finally, some warmth! We've been sitting in that perfect 50s-60s range, with a few beautiful 70-degree days sprinkled in. It's been so nice that we even put our patio furniture back out, which just feels like the official start of spring.

Also, In The Dark is still doing well, which honestly makes me so happy. I'm so grateful for the continued support. And because we love to keep things fun (and let's be real keep the momentum going), I'm planning a giveaway this month... so stay tuned for that!

Another exciting update: I joined an online book club with readers from all over the world, and I LOVE it. We just finished our first book, Dear Debbie by Freida McFadden, and it was such a great read. If you're interested in joining or want more info, definitely let me know, I'd be happy to share!

So many good things happening, and I can't wait to see what May brings.

With love,
Lu Gonzalez
