Happy new year!

I've been a little MIA with posting my monthly newsletter and that's with good reason. The month of December, I spent being very present with my friends and family. Celebrating my birthday and the holidays.

But, that doesn't mean that I haven't been hard at work with my latest project. The writing has been going extremely well. I am really enjoying the process and I'm definitely feel my creative juices flowing. Don't worry, book 2 of City Roots: The Neighborhood is still in the works. I just put it on pause for the time being. Creatively, I was being led in a different direction and I wanted to pursue it.

It's been so much fun I have to say. When I decided to follow this passion and become a writer, I wanted to do it in a way that would be fun and an escape from my reality. I know a lot of writers do this as a career and while that might be a dream of mine, I don't want this to feel like a job. I want to enjoy the process of writing a book. And with this story, I'm having so much fun writing it. I wake up every morning, excited to carve out time to write. My hope is that when this book gets published, you will enjoy it as much as I am, writing it.
