

Lawfare in Action: How a Two-Tiered Justice System Targeted a Conservative Businessman

By The Freedom Fighters of America

If you want to see exactly how the deck is stacked against conservatives in today's America, you don't have to look any further than the weaponized legal crusade against Joseph LaForte. Three highly connected, deeply partisan Democratic operatives were the main catalysts behind the total destruction of Par Funding, the systematic stripping of LaForte's personal assets, and the push for his draconian sentence. For years, we've watched the establishment use the justice system as a political bludgeon, but the coordinated hit job on Joe LaForte—a lifelong conservative, unapologetic America First supporter, and a businessman who spent over a decade building Par Funding from the ground up—takes the corruption to a whole new level.

Let us peel back the curtain and look at the three operatives who decided his fate.

First, you have Judge Mark Kearney presiding over the proceedings. The media loves to hide behind the phrase "impartial judiciary," but the facts speak for themselves. Judge Kearney is not just any judge—he is an Obama appointee. Before taking the federal bench, records show he was a reliable, consistent financial donor to Democratic campaigns, including Obama for America. When a conservative who cut his teeth working his way up Wall Street in the late 90s is dragged into a courtroom, what are the odds of getting a fair chance from a judge handpicked by the Obama administration who spent his private career funding the opposition?

Then there's Gaeton Alfano, the heavy-hitting legal muscle. Alfano is a massive financial contributor to the Democratic political machine in Pennsylvania. He is deeply entrenched in the Philadelphia swamp, funneling money into the exact same local and state Democratic campaigns that keep the establishment in power and protect their own.

Finally, we have the SEC prosecutor, Amie Riggle Berlin. To understand the true level of partisan bias here, you just must look at her household. Her husband is Bret Berlin, a massive player in the Democratic establishment. He did not just donate; he was the Chair of the Miami-Dade Democratic Party and the Vice Chair of the Florida Democratic Party. Even worse, Bret Berlin was an official superdelegate to the 2016 Democratic National Convention from Florida, throwing his support behind Hillary Clinton.

When a lifelong conservative goes up against a network consisting of an Obama-appointed judge, a mega-donor lawyer, and a federal prosecutor married to a Hillary Clinton superdelegate, the playbook is completely rigged. It is not about finding the truth; it is about charge stacking, government overreach, and burying the target in a mountain of bureaucratic red tape.

These three operatives used the system to bankrupt and destroy a political outsider. The most glaring proof of this weaponization? They stripped a man of his life's work and his livelihood, handing down a draconian sentence while avoiding the fundamental right to a fair fight.

This is not just about Par Funding. It is about a two-tiered justice system where well-connected Democrat donors, Obama-appointed judges, and spouses of party superdelegates get to play judge, jury, and executioner against conservatives. They use federal agencies like a private security force to conduct witch hunts against anyone who does not fit their political mold.

We cannot let these partisan actors hide behind the guise of blind justice. The American people are waking up to this lawfare, and it is time to start holding the real bad actors accountable.
