

Wow, Ancient history. We never built any BOB's, and in fact never even got close to it, as I don't think the design ever worked. There were a handful of proto units, but that's about it. The history looks pretty accurate, at least as best as I recall. I have stayed somewhat in touch with only two of the people from the company: Jerry Karr, who was the corporate controllers, and Mark Jameyson, who worked for me as planning manager. That's about all I can add. Interesting web site, however. Brings back old memories, although not all of them good.
