FEAR FREE TIP OF THE MONTH

Were you aware that altering your yard's landscaping can be unsettling for some dogs? Introducing a new tree or shrubs might surprise a dog when they are let outside for the first time after the change.

Dogs are creatures of habit and can be sensitive to changes in their environment. When introducing new elements to your yard's landscaping, it's important to consider your furry friend's reaction. To help ease any anxiety or confusion, you can gradually introduce them to the changes by allowing them to explore the new additions at their own pace. Providing familiar scents or toys in the updated area can also help them feel more comfortable and at ease. Remember, a little patience and understanding can go a long way in helping your dog adjust to the changes in their outdoor space.

WEDDING SEASON WITH DOGS

Wedding season is fast approaching, and we would all love a way to incorporate our dogs into our wedding plans, but how?

Including your furry friend in your wedding can be a heartwarming and memorable experience. One creative idea is to have your dog walk down the aisle as the ring bearer or flower pup. You could also include them in your engagement photos or have them participate in a special part of the ceremony, like a unity ceremony involving your pet. Just make sure to consider your dog's temperament and comfort level with crowds and noise to ensure they have a pawsitively perfect experience on your special day.

Did you know, that in some states your dog is allowed to officiate your wedding? Yes, in certain states, your pet can be a wedding witness. Your dog or even cat can sign the marriage license themselves. So have a destination wedding to one of the following states, and bring your four legged friend to help officiate:

- Colorado
- Illinois
- Kansas
- Maine
- Nevada
- Pennsylvania
- Wisconsin
- Washington, D.C.
