

Effective Transfer of Life Lessons?

At roughly 13 years old I read the first book ever that I credit for setting me on the path of “a seeker”. One of the aphorisms in that book said (my translation from the original German) “When a book and a head impact, but the sound is merely hollow, is it always the fault of the book?” Written by Lichtenberg

The same is true when a seeker is conversing with or just listening to a conveyor. If you are in the default listening mode that most people operate in, then there are a whole lot of things that can derail proper transfer of the information. However, as you get wiser, the factors that can derail a message go down substantially. In this essay I will discuss the issues and resolutions of effective message transmittal.

More to come in the next few days.
