Valentine Cards

A guy walks into a bar, sits at a table and orders a beer.

He then proceeds to pull out hundreds of pink valentine's day cards, write inside them and stamp them with "Love" stamps. He then pulls out a bottle of expensive perfume and spritzes each envelope.

The bartender finally can't contain his curiosity and approaches the man.

"You must have 500 or more cards there," the bartender says. "I've got to admit I'm curious what you're doing."

"Oh, every year at Valentine's Day I send out 500 cards, each one signed 'Guess Who?'" the guy says.

"But why?" the bartender asks. "I'm a divorce lawyer," the guy replies.

Collecting specialties

A worldwide collection would be enormous, running to thousands of volumes, and would be incredibly expensive to acquire. Many consider that Count Philipp von Ferrary's collection at the beginning of the 20th century was the most complete ever formed. Many collectors limit their collecting to particular countries, certain time periods or particular subjects (called "topicals") like birds or aircraft.

The first UK commemorative stamps, 1924

Some of the more popular collecting areas include:

Postage stamps – particular countries and/or time periods

Airmail stamps – stamps may be required for airmail, which is typically more expensive and has special postage rates.

Commemorative stamps – stamps to commemorate events, anniversaries, etc., on sale for a limited time.

Definitive stamps – the most common type of stamps

Postage due stamps are special stamps applied by a post office to mail bearing insufficient postage. The stamps were issued in several denominations to make up different amounts due.

"How about if we choose teams based on who has the coolest stamp collection."
