

It would take a teacher (Mr Ennis) at his Grade School (John XXIII) to finally show him that he was good enough to play baseball by naming him the starting catcher of the first ever grade school softball team in Grade 8, motivating him to try out with Erindale Little League. Those first couple of tryouts on mudding fields in March were a battle ground where he would try to (and make) his first organized team (outside of school). Baseball was becoming hot as the Blue Jays were about to win the first of their back to back World Series titles the same year he would be named MVP of his Erindale Team. He would go on to play until he was 19 with Erindale, conveniently being overlooked for all the Rep teams despite putting up great numbers both at the plate and on the mound.

Six years later, at the age of 25, along came a good friend (Gary DeSousa) asking if there was any interest to play baseball again in a Mens' League (The Mississauga Mens' Baseball League - MMBL for short). And with that, a new journey would start in 2003. Three years later, and after being told by the coach and Manager of the MMBL Phillies that he had no interest in adding coaches to his staff, Marco along with good friend Miso Radman, would create the expansion MMBL Marlins.

One of the first things Marco did as GM of the team was to change the team name to "Blue Jays" and colours to the hometown Blue Jays road blue jerseys. In 13 seasons in charge, the team has had peaks and valleys and now, going into his 14th season in charge, the team appears to have the core to be a contender having just set team records in Year 13 for Regular Season Wins (11), overall team Wins (12) and Runs Scored while having the team pitching staff finally come together to become a formidable group heading into 2027.
