Q - How does a royalty interest get transferred if an owner dies?

A –

1) If the decedent died testate (with a will) and the will is being probated, the following must be submitted for our review:

- Death certificate
- Letters testamentary
- Will

Order admitting the will to probate (or its equivalent depending upon the state in which the proceedings were conducted)

If probate proceedings were conducted in a state other than where the property is located, we will accept, for the limited purpose only of issuing our amended division orders or declarations of interest, a copy of these proceedings displaying the volume and page number of their recording in the county(ies) in which the property is located.

To comply fully with the various state statutes, it is strongly suggested that you consult an attorney familiar with the laws of the state in which the property is located to open ancillary probate proceedings.

2) If the decedent died intestate (without a will) or if the will is not being probated, the following must be submitted for our review:

- Death certificate
- In the event administration proceedings were necessary,
 - (1) a copy of the Order Appointing Administrator; and
 - (2) an Affidavit of Heirship, which must be completed by a disinterested party familiar with the facts (not an heir), notarized, and filed of record in the county or counties where the property is located.
- Please keep the completed file-stamped original for your records. The copy submitted to our office must display the recorded data. A blank Affidavit of Heirship form acceptable for our purposes can be mailed upon your request.
