MY REMODEL STORY

Deb Morelli — INSPIRED DESIGN  PROSOURCE OF STAMFORD (CT)

Deb Morelli, founder of Inspired Design, has built a reputation for breathing life into her clients' visions and turning them into reality. Through years of experience in Norwalk, Connecticut, Morelli and her team have earned a loyal following by transforming homes into spaces that align with the homeowners' dreams.

This trust has led to repeat clients, as well as a long-standing partnership with ProSource Wholesale.

One of her recent projects involved remodeling the home of empty nesters who had lived in their house for over 20 years. After working with Morelli to revamp parts of the house, they decided to focus on their second-floor bathroom. The homeowners wanted the space to evoke the serene luxury of a Cape Cod vacation, where they had spent many relaxing years. Their goal was to create a spa-like, luxurious retreat in their own home.

"The homeowners had a strong passion for Cape Cod," Morelli said. "They wanted their bathroom to make them feel like they were on vacation every day."

Using this as her inspiration, Morelli crafted three distinct design concepts. Her collaboration with the ProSource of Stamford showroom was instrumental in bringing these ideas to life, even though her clients couldn't visit the showroom themselves. Morelli applied her "rule of three," a strategy she uses to present clients with three design options, allowing them to choose their favorite. In this case, the clients selected Morelli's top choice.

The trust between Morelli and her clients allowed her to focus on creativity and the overall vision, rather than getting bogged down in discussions about every minor detail. The bathroom had remained largely untouched since the 1980s, featuring outdated elements like a small vanity, a cramped shower, and a basic tub. The layout itself also needed rethinking to improve the room's flow and functionality.

"The bathroom had a standard tub, small vanity, and clunky tile work," Morelli said.

One of the key changes was the placement of the tub and vanity. From the bedroom, the homeowners used to see a cluttered vanity when the bathroom door was open. Morelli flip-flopped the vanity and tub, creating a more appealing view from outside the bathroom. Now, the first thing seen from the bedroom is a beautiful freestanding tub beneath a chandelier, which instantly elevates the space.

The transformation didn't stop there. Morelli chose stunning materials like Decorá cabinets for the new vanity, paired with elegant countertops. To further enhance the bathroom's luxurious feel, she selected concave hexagonal tiles for the walls and hexagonal tiles for the floor, all sourced through ProSource.

"With Alexis [Marrone], my account manager, and Judi [Stoogenke], my designer, I had such a great team at ProSource," Morelli said.

Together, they selected materials and designed the space to not only be beautiful but also highly functional. The result was a dramatic transformation. The homeowners were initially shocked by the changes, but in the best way possible. Morelli delivered exactly what they had envisioned: a calming and serene bathroom that still had that touch of "wow."

"By changing the layout and making the updates we did, you could feel the soft, serene, and sexy factor that we were looking for," Morelli said.

For Morelli, the emotional connection to a space is crucial. She believes that every remodeling project should begin with emotion and inspiration, not just functionality.

"No matter what the space is, you have to think about its function, but you have to go beyond that," she said. "Start with some emotion, because if you're going to spend money to create something, you want it to really connect to who you are."

Through her vision and deep connection to her clients' desires, Morelli turned an ordinary bathroom into an extraordinary oasis, making it a space that resonates with both beauty and personal significance. By blending inspiration with design and partnering with ProSource for top-quality materials, Morelli once again exceeded expectations and created a home her clients can truly love.

MY REMODEL STORY

Dana Leivian — DANA LEIVIAN ARTISTIC DESIGN  PROSOURCE OF WICHITA (KS)

Dana Leivian of Dana Leivian Artistic Design has built a reputation for transforming rooms by unlocking their potential through innovative design solutions. With decades of experience in redesigning homes, Leivian has earned the trust of homeowners, who often invite her back for additional projects.

A recent bathroom and closet remodel exemplified her skill, where the challenging layout called for an extensive overhaul.

“The bathroom had a small, hallway-like double vanity area with a wall and doorway leading into the closet, making it very awkward,” Leivian said.

Although it had been remodeled within the last 20 years, it didn’t meet her client’s expectations. Leivian proposed a bold plan to remove the wall between the closet and the master bath, raise the ceiling, and create a more spacious, cohesive master en suite. This kind of redesign required trust and cooperation, especially with Leivian’s long-standing partners at ProSource, a relationship she’s cultivated since 1998.

Steve Thomas, her account manager at the ProSource of Wichita showroom, played a key role in the project. With many previous projects for this particular client under their belt, Thomas and Leivian were able to easily identify the materials and products needed.

“Once I laid out my plans in the showroom, Steve and I agreed on the products and materials needed. It made things so simple,” she said.

The ease of their collaboration allowed Leivian to communicate her ideas to the client remotely, using texts, emails, and video conferencing to share sketches and material samples.

However, one of the biggest challenges in the project was ensuring that the materials were delivered and installed on time, especially given the homeowner’s tight deadline. He owned another property in California and gave Leivian just three months to complete the ambitious remodel.

“Getting the materials here, so that I could go through each step of the process and have all my ducks in a row, was a concern,” Leivian said.

Large-format tiles and other high-end materials needed careful handling and installation. Fortunately, ProSource’s attention to detail ensured the smooth delivery of all items, alleviating Leivian’s concerns. Despite the tight schedule, the project benefited from an unexpected stroke of luck: the homeowner’s return was delayed by two to three weeks, giving Leivian just enough extra time to perfect the details.

“Everything that could be high-end was high-end, and we needed that extra time to get every detail right,” she said.

Among the standout features of the remodel was the Lutron lighting system and the elevated ceilings, which enhanced the space’s luxurious feel. Leivian saw an opportunity to make the most of the room’s existing skylight by raising the ceiling further than originally planned, though it required the costly relocation of a gas line.

“That was a little costly, but it was worth every penny, because that skylight just brightens the space immensely,” she said.

Storage and organization were also top priorities in the new design. Removing the wall between the bathroom and closet allowed Leivian to install a central island, which helped organize the space efficiently. The island featured compact drawers and storage solutions, making the room more functional without compromising on aesthetics.

“Opening up the space by removing that wall between the closet and the bathroom allowed us to build an island,” Leivian said. This move not only improved traffic flow but also maximized the room’s potential.

When the homeowner returned, he was thrilled with the transformation, seeing his trust in Leivian rewarded once again with a stunning master bathroom and closet. The success of the project, Leivian emphasized, was due in large part to her long-standing relationship with ProSource.

“As a designer, coming up with visuals and images really helps a client understand what the room could be,” she said. “Being able to take clients to the ProSource showroom allows them to see possibilities they hadn’t imagined before. It’s incredible to have products that are so accessible and a showroom that I can be proud of.”

Leivian’s innovative approach, combined with the trust and collaboration of her partners at ProSource, resulted in a design that exceeded expectations, highlighting the potential of even the most challenging spaces.

MY REMODEL STORY

Jessie Morrow — AGAPE VINTAGE  PROSOURCE OF OKLAHOMA CITY (OK)

Jessie Morrow of Agape Vintage is known for transforming dark, neglected spaces into vibrant, light-filled areas. Her clients, who had lived in their home for over a decade, had long been dissatisfied with their sunroom and outdoor patio, which felt dim and uninviting. Morrow saw the potential in these spaces and was eager to help the homeowners achieve their goal of creating a brighter, more natural environment.

"Even though the sunroom had multiple windows, the whole room was covered in shade," Morrow said.

The space felt confined, with dark brick walls and a restricting partition. Her clients wanted to change that, and they gave her one clear objective: "I need more nature in my life. I want it to feel happier and bright in this room."

Inspired by this request, Morrow immediately set to work, formulating a plan to blend the indoor and outdoor spaces seamlessly while bringing in more light and openness. The first step was tearing down the wall that separated the spaces and installing an accordion door, which would allow the homeowners to easily connect the indoors with their outdoor firepit and patio. This new feature not only made the room feel larger but also allowed the homeowners to enjoy the outdoor view even when the doors were closed.

"Those doors helped draw in the nature that I was looking for," Morrow said.

The next step in her plan was to embrace nature indoors through her design choices, which led her to her partners at ProSource. She took her clients to the ProSource of Oklahoma City showroom, where they worked with account manager, Ryan Fast, to find the perfect tile to fit the concept.

“What I love about ProSource is that Ryan took the time to go through and find the exact tile that fit the concept,” Morrow said.

The tile they chose was not just a simple white but had distressed, natural details that gave it an outdoor feel while still being functional. It perfectly encapsulated the essence of nature that Morrow wanted to bring indoors, while also being durable enough for daily use. Once they had selected the materials, Morrow's husband, Keegan, installed the tile, allowing her to shift her focus to designing the layout and selecting the furniture for the space.

Morrow's design approach was centered around creating a versatile space that could be enjoyed both indoors and outdoors.

“I designed the layout of the furniture so that the couch doesn't have a back,” she said.

This design choice allowed the homeowners to either sit and watch TV or turn around to enjoy the view of the firepit outside. The flexibility of the space made it perfect for family gatherings, and the homeowners were thrilled with how it turned out.

Throughout the project, Morrow's main focus was on creating a room that would inspire happiness for her clients.

“When I meet with my client, I try to understand what they are missing in the space that would make them happier,” she said.

For these homeowners, the missing element was a connection to nature, and Morrow designed the space to fill that gap. By removing the walls and incorporating natural design elements, she not only brightened the room but also made it feel larger and more open without adding any square footage.

The transformation was celebrated with an unveiling party, a tradition Morrow enjoys with each of her projects. “We always do a big premiere, which is the best part of what I do,” she said.

The homeowners were awestruck by the final result, remarking how the room now felt like a breath of fresh air. Morrow reflected on the success of the project, saying, “It feels like I can breathe in this room. It feels happy and like a breath of fresh air all around.”

Through her thoughtful design and collaboration with ProSource, Jessie Morrow was able to turn a dark, confined space into a bright, joyful area that perfectly merged the indoors with the outdoors, creating a natural, serene atmosphere for her clients to enjoy.

MY REMODEL STORY

Mae Reedy — MAE REEDY DESIGN + BUILD  PROSOURCE OF ALLEN (TX)

Mae Reedy of Mae Reedy Design + Build excels at merging her clients' varied interests into cohesive, personalized spaces. Her expertise was especially crucial when her clients sought to remodel their kitchen, blending their love for the Mediterranean, wine tastings, socializing, limestone, and Texas architecture into one harmonious design.

Reedy recognized the complexity of uniting these elements, particularly when it came to cabinetry and countertops. To ensure the remodel reflected her clients' vision, she partnered with ProSource, a trusted resource for high-quality materials and expert guidance.

"ProSource was amazing during this job," Reedy said.

The homeowners were concerned about the quality of their new cabinets, as their old ones, though outdated, were high-end. Angie Rosengren, a kitchen and bath designer at ProSource, became an invaluable resource for navigating the myriad of options and features available.

Reedy relied on the ProSource showroom in Allen, Texas, for not only information but also cabinet samples and examples of specific elements the clients desired, like cove crown trim finishes, trash pullouts, and hydraulic lifts for the upper cabinets.

"As much as I love custom cabinetry, a lot of times it can feel like a surprise," Reedy said. "But for the client to go into the showroom and be guided through the options by someone way more knowledgeable than myself on these details was really great."

Beyond providing samples, ProSource played a key role in keeping the project within budget. Angie took time behind the scenes to understand the financial limits of the project.

“While you could be like a kid in a candy store in the showroom, she really did help steer us towards decisions that weren’t going to break the bank,” Reedy explained.

Angie’s experience helped streamline the process by creating a 3D rendering of the kitchen, giving the clients a clear visual of the final design before construction even began.

“It was so cool to get to see what the new kitchen would look like before it was remodeled,” Reedy said.

Angie also offered practical solutions for making specific sizes and products fit seamlessly into the layout.

This collaboration with ProSource made the remodel process smoother and ensured that all the finer details were in place. The result was a kitchen that blended all the clients’ preferences into a stylish and functional space. The perimeter featured wood-grain cabinets, complemented by white quartz countertops, while the kitchen island was highlighted with blue cabinetry—bringing Reedy’s vision to life.

The remodel’s success was evident when Reedy reflected on the transformation.

“After our styling day, I came home that evening and cried,” she said.

The combination of stress relief and satisfaction hit her as the adrenaline rush of the project settled.

“This kitchen pushed the character. It pushed the details. It had everything happening, and it just looked effortless. We know how hard it was behind the scenes, but it looked chic. It was beautiful.”

Ultimately, Mae Reedy’s ability to blend her clients’ diverse inspirations, paired with the expert support from ProSource, resulted in a stunning kitchen that reflected the homeowners’ unique style and interests. The finished space offered a seamless combination of Mediterranean elegance, wine country charm, and Texas warmth, delivering both functionality and beauty.

MY REMODEL STORY

Mike Purdy — ELITE CRAFT VISION  PROSOURCE OF FENTON (MO)

Mike Purdy, of Elite Craft Vision, knows that bathroom remodels often extend beyond just updating one element. This proved true with a recent project, where the homeowners, initially focused on selecting stone for the shower, decided to embark on a full bathroom remodel.

“We were just going through the color palettes and stone choices for the shower area,” Purdy said. “We commented on how fantastic the stone looked with the vaulted ceilings, and they decided to go for the full remodel. It turned out better than we thought.”

Having already worked on other parts of the house, Purdy had earned the homeowners’ trust. His work on bold black craftsman trim against contrasting grays and whites throughout their home set the tone for the bathroom’s design. He proposed extending the stonework to a vanity wall reaching the ceiling, even offering to cover material costs if the clients didn’t like it.

“They were so impressed with how it looked that they told me to go for it,” he said.

Purdy turned to ProSource of Fenton, a long time partner, for his materials for the project, including thin set, mortars, grout, cabinets, and underlayment.

“They’re my one-stop shop,” he said. “I can get just about everything I need from ProSource. Plus, they’re all really knowledgeable, and we’ve worked together for years, so it’s all fairly simple.”

This long-standing partnership allowed for seamless communication and quick decision-making, ensuring smooth project execution.

“We’ve developed a little lingo now,” Purdy said of his relationship with ProSource. “I can send them a few pictures, and we nail it pretty quickly. I don’t have to walk them through every detail. They know the price ranges and quality I’m looking for, and they deliver.”

With the decision made to remodel the entire bathroom, the homeowners aimed to replicate the muted elegance they’d recently introduced to their master bedroom. This included incorporating a luxurious walk-in, zero-entry shower with a hidden drain.

“It’s funny,” Purdy said. “We sent photos of the shower to the homeowners, and they thought we forgot to put the drain in. Once they realized what we’d done, they were thrilled.”

The bathroom featured 12-foot ceilings that extended up to the skylight, enhancing the open flow of the space. Purdy and his team carefully matched design elements from the bedroom to create a cohesive feel between the two rooms. One highlight was the cabinetry, with a center tower that became a focal point.

“The way we set up the cabinetry really draws attention to it,” he said. “The size of the mirrors and their placement allows someone to see almost everything as they walk into the room. It brought the space together beautifully.”

Purdy’s approach to remodels emphasizes the importance of patience and enjoyment throughout the process.

“Take your time,” he said. “Any of these projects should be fun. If at any time it starts getting stressful or anxiety-inducing, you’re probably working with the wrong people. Having your home remodeled should be a gratifying experience.”

The bathroom transformation, from initial shower update to full remodel, showcased Purdy’s attention to detail, his collaboration with trusted partners like ProSource, and his commitment to creating spaces that reflect his clients’ style and needs. The result was a sleek, modern bathroom that seamlessly blended function with elegance, much to the homeowners’ delight.
