Organ Works. - In the year 1867 G. F. Gartner & Son established the Organ Works for the manufacture of pipe and reed organs. He employed several hands, and being from Germany and a first-class workman, he manufactured all his work by hand. He found, after some five years, that this style of work did not suit the people any better than that manufactured by machinery, and also was not as profitable a business as was first supposed. He closed up his business in 1872. In these organ works there was a young man named D. F. Allmendinger, who had entered the works when first started, and mastered the business, and when Mr. Gartner closed his business he opened the Ann Arbor Organ Works. At first the business was but small and carried on in one part of his dwelling house, but in 1880 he built a frame factory 24x40 feet, and two-stories high. He has in his employ three workmen, and turns out 25 to 30 organs per year. His annual sales foot up $2,500. Mr. Allmendinger furnished three churches in Ann Arbor with pipe organs, and they gave general satisfaction. Although only doing a small business at present, yet he turns out pipe and reed organs of a good quality. The manufactory is situated on the northwest corner of First and Washington streets.

Notes for David Friederich Allmendinger:

History of Washtenaw County, Michigan : together with sketches of its cities, villages and townships...and biographies of representative citizens : history of Michigan. By Chas. C. Chapman & Co. Chicago: Chas. C. Chapman & Co., 1881.

Organ Works. - In the year 1867 G. F. Gartner & Son established the Organ Works for the manufacture of pipe and reed organs. He employed several hands, and being from Germany and a first-class workman, he manufactured all his work by hand. He found, after some five years, that this style of work did not suit the people any better than that manufactured by machinery, and also was not as profitable a business as was first supposed. He closed up his business in 1872. In these organ works there was a young man named D. F. Allmendinger, who had entered the works when first started, and mastered the business, and when Mr. Gartner closed his business he opened the Ann Arbor Organ Works. At first the business was but small and carried on in one part of his dwelling house, but in 1880 he built a frame factory 24x40 feet, and two-stories high. He has in his employ three workmen, and turns out 25 to 30 organs per year. His annual sales foot up $2,500. Mr. Allmendinger furnished three churches in Ann Arbor with pipe organs, and they gave general satisfaction. Although only doing a small business at present, yet he turns out pipe and reed organs of a good quality. The manufactory is situated on the northwest corner of First and Washington streets.

David F. Allmendinger House, 1890 at 719 West Washington Street, Ann Arbor. A 1-1/2 acre "Paradise on Washington Street," is how local journalist, Mary Hunt, summarized the David F. Allmendinger estate after reading in a 1905 newspaper article: "There is no prettier sight in Ann Arbor at this time of year than the magnificent grounds of David Allmendinger on West Washington ???_ Mr. Allmendinger has a little Belle Isle park of his own."

David Friedrich Allmendinger was a true American success story. Born in Waiblingen, Wurttemberg, Germany in 1848, he came to America with his parents in 1851. They joined a large extended family which had been immigrating to Washtenaw County from Swabia since 1829. In 1867, Almendinger was apprenticed to organ builder Gottlieb Gaertner, who taught him the art of organ making and wood carving. He founded the Allmendinger Organ Company in 1872, and his earliest commissions were for organs for the two German churches in town. His real success, however, lay in selling organs to German farm families throughout the county.

He began modestly in the back rooms of his house at the corner of Washington and First Streets. He later built his brick factory here and became Ann Arbor's second largest employer. In 1890 he was successful enough to build this house a few blocks to the west, in a still undeveloped part of town with creeks running through it. The house was a large, white rambling affair with a wrap-around porch and decorative wood trim in the front gable. Allmendinger needed a large house for his family of 13 children but did not believe in ostentation, so his house is simple by comparison with others from this era. He put most of his time and energy into creating his little "Belle Isle," his Garden of Eden.

Early 20th century photographs capture the idyllic lifestyle. The family posed together under a massive oak tree for a portrait in 1905. Allmendinger's interests in landscape gardening were second only to organ making and he created from that acre and a half a dining terrace, a grape arbor, a goldfish pond with water lilies, a larger pond for carp, a croquet lawn, a log cabin, and the rustic gazebo and bridge, not to mention vegetable gardens and fruit trees of many varieties including plum, cherry, pear and apple, and a chicken coop and barn. Most of this he did by damming the creeks that ran through the property, creeks that are now part of the Allen Creek storm drain system.

David Allmendinger died in 1916. His daughter Julia, and her husband, Judge William Murray, sold the house next door, which they had built in 1909, and moved in with her mother. Pat Haskell, a granddaughter of David Allmendinger, remembers Judge Murray as an imposing and portly gentleman, and a real character who smoked five cigars a day and cussed all the time. Murray was the developer of Murray and Mulholland Streets to the south and east of this property. The house continued to be occupied by descendants of the Allmendinger family until 1991.

Allmendinger Organ Factory - 1888, 1895, 1906, 1911 on 120-130 South First Street, Ann Arbor - This block-long group of brick buildings was built in four stages as a factory for the Allmendinger Organ Company. The company was founded in 1872 by David F. Allmendinger, who first worked from his frame house which stood on this site. A descendant of one of Ann Arbor's earliest pioneers, Allmendinger was apprenticed to master organ builder Gottlieb Gaertner in 1867. When Gaertner left for Ohio in 1871 to manage another factory, Allmendinger bought his equipment and married his daughter.

Allmendinger began modestly in the back rooms of his home where he hand-carved his earliest organs, sometimes using soup bones for the keys when ivory was unavailable. A conservative businessman, he preferred to peddle his finished organs personally by wagon, often trading them for flour, wood, and farm products. His earliest commissions were for church organs, but eventually he began to specialize in lightweight, affordable reed organs which many farmers proudly displayed (and played) in their parlors.

By 1888 he was successful enough to establish a stock company and build a four-story brick building (later reduced to two stories after a fire) on Washington Street. In 1895 the company began manufacturing Henderson Pianos as well as Ann Arbor Organs. They built a four-story brick building at the corner of Washington and First Streets, moving Allmendinger's house to a lot just beyond the railroad tracks. The company name was changed to the Ann Arbor Organ Company and a salesroom opened on South Main Street. In 1906 another two story brick section was added along First Street, and in 1911 the final two stories were added.

In 1915 competition from low-cost suppliers such as Sears Roebuck & Co had driven this company and many other small factories out of business. From 1916 to 1926 the buildings housed the Motor Products Company which made windshields for automobiles. By 1930 the buildings were empty and deteriorating.

Mr. Carroll Benz, a local real estate agent, purchased them around 1935 and remodeled various spaces for rent. In 1947 Benz moved his own real estate office into one of the buildings and for almost 40 years this complex was known simply as the "Benz Building," despite the fact that Benz sold the buildings to the University of Michigan in 1969. The University housed several research institutes here until budget cuts in the recession of the 1980s forced the sale of the buildings in 1984. The purchaser, William Martin, with the expertise of Architects 4, completely renovated the building, replacing original windows and creating a modern entry for the 1895 structure.

Except for these changes, the exterior remains much as it was at the height of its days as an organ factory, a time when 5,000 organs and 600 pianos a year were produced and shipped to every state in the Union and to England, Scotland, Australia, the West Indies, and South Africa. These simple brick structures, imposing in size, remain a fine example of utilitarian factory design, reminding us of the days when workers lived in nearby neighborhoods and walked to and from work. In the new lobby, a visitor will find an original Allmendinger Organ and display panels telling the story of the factory, its owner, and the organs he built.

Ann Arbor, Dec. 18, 2016 - An ornate pump organ made by the Allmendinger company in Ann Arbor more than 100 years ago has found a new home downtown. "After all these years, this Allmendinger organ is being returned to a location that is only two blocks from the place it was created," said Ray Detter, a local historian who is among those celebrating the occasion. The Ann Arbor News reports a crew from Michigan Piano Moving carefully relocated the antique instrument from a private residence in the Chelsea area to Hathaway's Hideaway, an event space at 310 S. Ashley St., on Tuesday morning, Dec. 6.

Based on its design, Detter believes the organ was manufactured in the 1880s, though the exact date is unknown. What is known is that it was made by David Allmendinger's company, which operated at the northwest corner of First and Washington streets from the late 1800s to the early 1900s. The old Allmendinger factory still stands today, now an office building owned by First Martin Corp. Rita Fulton, a retired Ann Arbor city housing inspector, said her husband, Ron, the former Ypsilanti Township building director, purchased the organ at a yard sale in Sterling Heights about 20 years ago. When he saw that it was made in Ann Arbor, he decided he had to buy it and “bring it back home.” Now two decades later, they’ve decided to part with the organ. Rita Fulton reached out to Detter for help finding a new permanent home for it. “It’s a beautiful piece and still plays very well,” said Fulton, who noted it comes with a stool and two pedestal oil lamps. “It’s very ornate,” she said, referring to the hand-carved designs popular of old Allmendinger organs. “It’s quite decorative.” First Martin already has multiple Allmendinger organs on display inside the old factory building, which was remodeled into office space in 1984. Other locations were briefly considered before Mary Hathaway, a longtime Ann Arborite and preservationist, agreed to make room for the organ.

“That’s wonderful,” Hathaway said on Tuesday morning, her eyes lighting up as the organ was set in place against a wall inside Hathaway’s Hideaway. “I think the spot is just perfect,” said Ellen Ramsburgh of the Ann Arbor Historical Foundation, who was present to witness the delivery. “I think it is,” too,” Hathaway responded. The organ’s new home is a building with a unique history of its own. Once known as the Second Ward Public Building, it was built by the city in 1901 as a polling place and meeting hall for the primarily German residents of the old 2nd Ward. Mary Hathaway and her late husband, John Hathaway, an attorney who served on City Council in the 1960s, bought the building in 1969 when the city was selling surplus property, and today it remains filled with artifacts relating to Ann Arbor history and serves as a space for special events and gatherings. “I think it’s a great addition,” Hathaway said of the Allmendinger organ, which now sits near an Allmendinger piano. “I wish John could see it.” Bill Martin, founder of First Martin Corp., covered the cost of the organ in the interest of preserving it as a piece of local history, and a handful of local preservationists pitched in to cover the rest of the moving costs. As their plan was executed Tuesday morning, some jokingly described it as a successful organ transplant, one of the musical variety.

The Allmendinger organ company was founded in 1872 by David Allmendinger, who first worked out of a house at First and Washington. He got his start as an apprentice to master organ builder Gottlieb Gaertner in 1867. The history of the site and the company are documented in “Historic Ann Arbor: An Architectural Guide” by Susan Wineberg and Patrick McCauley. They note the brick buildings that stand today at 120-130 S. First St. were built in four stages as a factory for Allmendinger’s company between 1888 and 1911. As the company grew and changed, it operated under different names over the years, including Ann Arbor Organ Works, the Ann Arbor Organ Company, and the Allmendinger Piano and Organ Company. According to Wineberg’s account, Allmendinger began modestly, hand carving his earliest organs in the back of the home, using soup bones for the keys when ivory was in short supply. He personally peddled his handiwork from a wagon and eventually gained a reputation for fine workmanship.

“His first customers were churches, but later he specialized in affordable reed organs that many farmers displayed and played in their parlors,” Wineberg writes in “Historic Ann Arbor,” noting examples of those organs can be seen at the Kempf House museum next to Liberty Plaza and in an exhibit in the entry of 130 S. First St., along with a history of the company and the family. “In its heyday, the factory made 5,000 organs and 600 pianos a year and shipped them all over the globe,” Wineberg writes, noting Allmendinger formed a stock company in 1888 as demand for his instruments grew. He expanded to build Henderson Pianos in 1895 and later Ann Arbor Pianos, and even had a retail shop downtown. Competition from phonographs and large companies such as Sears eventually caused the company to fold. In 1915, the Allmendinger building at First and Washington ceased functioning as an organ and piano factory. Detter expressed his appreciation to everyone who helped make Tuesday’s move possible.

Notes for Helena Sophie Allmendinger:

The passing of Helene Allmendinger last week at the venerable age of 95 deprives life in Ann Arbor of a measure of its sweetness. Miss Allmendinger lived in other places in America and Europe for over a half of century, but his town was home for her. She was born here, visited often, and homesick-returned to spend her last years in "dear little Ann Arbor." Her life spanned most of the history of the town, and she retained a sharp memory of people events of past years. Some of her favorite stories have been recorded on tape, enriching our community's fund of oral history. These memories will never grow dim.

Helene Allmendinger was born a long time ago, on May 8, 1878, one of thirteen children of David Frederick and Marie Gaertner Allmendinger. She was a month old when the first telephone and Ann Arbor Railroad rolled into town, a year old when the first telephone was installed in Ann Arbor. She was three when President Garfield was shot by Charles J. Guiteau, whose father had been a respected Ann Arbor merchant. Our town didn't have waterworks until 1885, when little Helene was seven. "They got the water from the Huron River," she recalled. One day I turned on the water. A minnow this big came out. So you know what tasty water we had."

The little girl showed early the gift of song that was to shape her life, leading her into a career as a teacher and performer in churches and concert halls across the land. She found it more natural to sing to her mother than to speak. Her grandmother, impatient, would ask. "Why must you sing? Can't you talk German yet?" In fact, German was the only language she could talk, until frequently run up through the hole above the pedals to chew on the leather bellows inside the instrument. "Day after day, many times each week. Teacher Fischer would say, "Helene, tell your father to come. Tje moce have which had been newly extended past the railroad tracks. Allen's Creek flowed on the surface then, so the low area was swampy.

"They bilt the street out, and then they built wooden sidewalks out. Allen's creek ran around a little hill, and that was what it made it soggy. The sidewalk had to go up over this hill. It was all wooden sidewalk, with railings on each side. It was about sixteen feet up in the air, so that was something interesting to walk on!"

Deprived of schooling for two terms when the Panic of 1893 slashed the income of the Organ Works. Helene finally borrowed money for books from a sister, and was able to regain the privilege she prized so dearly. In 1899, she graduated from Ann Arbor High School, then spent two years at the Normal School in Ypsilanti, earning a teaching certificate.

Meanwhile, her father's business had rebounded. Helene's voice training with teacher Pauline Kempf revealed a contralto of great promise. She continued with a Chicago master who taught her how to breathe way down inside. (In recent years, when friends urged her to forsake her apartment on the third floor of an old house on State Street, she brushed aside their concern: the long flights of stairs were no obstacle to one who had learn to breathe!).

Then her father sent her to Europe for more years of study. She was in Paris for nearly three years, in Cologne and Berlin. Just as she was preparing to return, Richard Wagner invited her to sing at Bayreuth. He hesitated, then declined. She had just enough money to get home. She had a brief fling at Wagnerian opera, but rejected it for concert, chour, and studio work. Her appearances on the stage brought her many applications from private pupils, and teaching them was the work she loved best. She opened a studio in Cleveland.

The new Hill Auditorium in Ann Arbor finished in 1913.

Notes for Reuben Henry Kempf:

Reuben Kempf was sent by his parents to Basel, Switzerland to study the ministry, but when started following bands around town, officials at the seminary suggested he switch to music. In 1890 Kemp and his wife, Pauline, opened a music studio in their home at 312 South Division (now the Kempf House for Local History). The Kempfs owned the first grand piano in town, a Steinway; the university borrowed it for concerts.

Notes for Julia Johanna Allmendinger:

David F. Allmendinger House, 1890 on 719 West Washington Street, Ann Arbor - A 1-1/2 acre Paradise on Washington Street," is how local journalist, Mary Hunt, summarized the David F. Allmendinger estate after reading in a 1905 newspaper article: "There is no prettier sight in Ann Arbor at this time of year than the magnificent grounds of David Allmendinger on West Washington ???_ Mr. Allmendinger has a little Belle Isle park of his own."

David Friedrich Allmendinger was a true American success story. Born in Waiblingen, Wurttemberg, Germany in 1848, he came to America with his parents in 1851. They joined a large extended family which had been immigrating to Washtenaw County from Swabia since 1829. In 1867, Almendinger was apprenticed to organ builder Gottlieb Gaertner, who taught him the art of organ making and wood carving. He founded the Allmendinger Organ Company in 1872, and his earliest commissions were for organs for the two German churches in town. His real success, however, lay in selling organs to German farm families throughout the county.

He began modestly in the back rooms of his house at the corner of Washington and First Streets. He later built his brick factory here and became Ann Arbor's second largest employer. In 1890 he was successful enough to build this house a few blocks to the west, in a still undeveloped part of town with creeks running through it. The house was a large, white rambling affair with a wrap-around porch and decorative wood trim in the front gable. Allmendinger needed a large house for his family of 13 children but did not believe in ostentation, so his house is simple by comparison with others from this era. He put most of his time and energy into creating his little "Belle Isle," his Garden of Eden.

Early 20th century photographs capture the idyllic lifestyle. The family posed together under a massive oak tree for a portrait in 1905. Allmendinger's interests in landscape gardening were second only to organ making and he created from that acre and a half a dining terrace, a grape arbor, a goldfish pond with water lilies, a larger pond for carp, a croquet lawn, a log cabin, and the rustic gazebo and bridge, not to mention vegetable gardens and fruit trees of many varieties including plum, cherry, pear and apple, and a chicken coop and barn. Most of this he did by damming the creeks that ran through the property, creeks that are now part of the Allen Creek storm drain system.

David Allmendinger died in 1916. His daughter Julia, and her husband, Judge William Murray, sold the house next door, which they had built in 1909, and moved in with her mother. Pat Haskell, a granddaughter of David Allmendinger, remembers Judge Murray as an imposing and portly gentleman, and a real character who smoked five cigars a day and cussed all the time. Murray was the developer of Murray and Mulholland Streets to the south and east of this property. The house continued to be occupied by descendants of the Allmendinger family until 1991.

Notes for William H. Murray:

Past and Present of Washtenaw County, Michigan by Samuel W. Beakes, Chicago: The S.J. Clarke Publishing Co., 1906:

William H. Murray, the senior member of the law firm of Murray & Storm, of Ann Arbor, was born in York Township, Washtenaw County, in 1875. His grandfather, Andrew Murray, was a native of Scotland and in early life joined an Irish regiment, which came to America in 1812. Together with other members of the military command he deserted the British ranks and joined the United States army, his sympathy being with the republic. Following the close of hostilities he settled in Monroe, Michigan, where he followed farming. Unto him and his wife Maria were born five children, of whom two are yet living, Daniel and Mrs. Ellen Roberts. Daniel Murray, born in Monroe, Michigan, removed from that place to York Township, Washtenaw County, in 1864 and has since been closely identified with agricultural interests there. He married Miss Catherine McInnes, a native of London, England, and they have become the parents of eight children, of whom seven are yet living, as follows: Mary A.; Donald, who married Louisa Wardell and follows farming in Augusta township; Andrew, a resident farmer of York Township, who married Hattie Blood; John, an agriculturist of Augusta Township, who married Elizabeth Wanty; Ella, the wife of Lucian Lock, M. D., a physician of Haverhill, Ohio; Edwin W., also a farmer of Augusta Township, who married Elizabeth Feldman; and William H., who is the youngest of the family.

In the township of his nativity William H. Murray was reared to manhood and after mastering the elementary branches of learning he completed a high-school course, being graduated with the class of 1893. Subsequently he entered the University of Michigan, where he won his degree of Bachelor of Laws, in 1895, and his degree of Master of Law, in 1896, having completed the literary and law courses. Between the two periods of his university courses he read law in the office of Edward Weeks, an attorney of Detroit, with whom he spent the summer months, and in 1897 he entered upon the practice of his chosen profession in Ann Arbor, where he has gained a creditable position. In 1901 he admitted Carl T. Storm to a partnership under the firm style of Murray & Storm, and this relation has since been maintained. Mr. Murray has been very successful and the recognition of his natural intellectual endowments, his laudable ambition and his strong determination lead the public to predict for him a successful future. His political allegiance is given to the democracy and for the past six years he served as circuit court commissioner, his term expiring in the fall of 1904. He is also one of the directors of the German American Savings Bank, one of the recently established financial institutions of the city, and has an office in the German American Bank Building at the corner of Liberty and Main Street, south.

In October, 1900, in Ann Arbor, Mr. Murray was married to Miss Julia J. Allmendinger, a daughter of David F. Allmendinger, an old resident of the city. They now have one son, Ralph A., born in Ann Arbor. The parents are prominent young people here, enjoying the hospitality of many of the best homes of the city. Mr. Murray belongs to the Masonic lodge and chapter and to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, with which he has been associated for five years and for three years as secretary.

Notes for Albert Washington (Lauby) Laubengayer:

Pioneer in the development of boron chemistry; grew crystals of elemental boron - this result made possible the determination of the X-ray structure of the material and contributed to the discovery of a unique form of bonding between boron atoms in polyhedral structures; prepared and studied novel boron hybrids, organoboron and heterocyclic boron-nitrogen compounds; developed the chemistry that laid the basis for the separation of boron isotopes; synthesized inorganic polymers containing boron-nitrogen and aluminum-nitrogen frameworks; studied the chemistry of glass.

May 12, 1966 - A. W. Laubengayer, Cornell professor of chemistry, has been named Professor Emeritus by the University's Board of Trustees. He is one of six faculty members who will retire July 1, to be appointed emeritus. In 1941, he discovered a method for producing single crystals of the element boron. Nine years later Laubengayer and H. C. Mattraw of the General Electric Co., Schenectady, announced that a chemical union of boron and certain organic substances could produce a new family of compounds to form new plastics, lubricants, aid waterproofing substances. Laubengayer received undergraduate and graduate degrees from Cornell before joining the faculty in 1928. While at Cornell, he has published more than 60 articles and reviews in the field of inorganic chemistry. He is the author of a textbook, "General Chemistry," and a "Laboratory Manual and Problems in Introductory Chemistry."

Laubengayer has been a consultant to many major U.S. industries, including Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, and E. I. du Pont de Nemours, Inc. From 1943 to 1945 he was a consultant for the Manhattan Project which developed the first atomic bomb. He is a member of the American Chemical Society, and of Sigma Xi, Alpha Chi Sigma, and Tau Beta Pi honorary societies.

Albert W. Laubengayer, 89, emeritus professor of chemistry at Cornell University, died Wednesday, June 15, 1988, at his home following a long illness. A resident of 235 Berkshire Road, he was born in Salina, Kansas, to Tabitha and Charles Laubengayer. Prof. Laubengayer received undergraduate and graduate degrees in chemistry from Cornell University, before joining the faculty in 1928. While at Cornell he published more than 80 articles and reviews in the field of organic chemistry. In 1941 he discovered a method for producing single crystals of the element boron and set the stage for a revolution in electronics and electronic devices. Nine years later, in collaboration with H.C. Mattraw, he announced that a chemical union of boron and certain organic substances could produce new plastics, lubricants, and waterproofing substances. Known to his friends and graduate students as "Lauby," he was a dedicated teacher as well as a scholar.

Prof. Laubengayer was well known for his rigorous 8 a.m. freshman course as well as for authoring an introductory chemistry textbook and lab manual. He also taught advanced inorganic chemistry and by the time he retired in 1956 he had trained some 90 graduate students. Prof. Laubengayer was a consultant to many major U.S. industries, including Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, and the Du Pont Co. He was a member of the American Chemical Society, Sigma Chi, Alpha Chi Sigma, and Tau Beta Pi honorary societies and was listed in "Who's Who in America." Prof. Laubengayer was also a master home wine maker and was one of the founders of the American Wine Society in 1967. He was the first president of the AWS, and served as executive secretary and historian as well. He also helped to found the Ithaca Oenological Union of Home Wine-makers. He was a member of the Ithaca Yacht Club, Cornell figure skating club, and Gradfax. He was active in local and national debates concerning fluoridation of public drinking water.

He was the husband of the late Grace Ware Laubengayer, who died in 1987. He is survived by two daughters, Susan L. Cowing, of Binghamton, and Nancy L. Smothergill, of Syracuse; five grandchildren; two nieces, E. Dorothy Laubengayer of Ithaca, and Majorie W. Formo, of Idaho; two nephews, Robert E. Laubengayer, of Ithaca, and Donald Watson, of Florida; and five grandchildren.

A memorial service will be announced at a later date. Donations may be made to the chemistry department at Cornell University co Earl Peters to benefit freshman students or to Cornell Plantations, 1 Plantation Road, Ithaca. Bangs Funeral Home of Ithaca is in charge of arrangements.

Patty was surrounded by her family at the time of her passing: husband Lorne, son Bruce, and daughter Pam were at her side at the time of her death. Patty was a sixth generation descendant of the Kempf/Staebler families of Ann Arbor. Her grandfather, Rueben Kempf, was the choir director and organist at St. Andrew's Episcopal church. Rueben and his wife, Pauline, lived in the Kempf House on Division Street. Patty's maternal grandfather, Fred Staebler, was the founder of the Staebler Oil Company, which later merged with her father's company to become the Staebler-Kempf oil company.

Patty was born in Ann Arbor on April 1, 1922. She attended high school at the Emma Willard School in Troy, New York and college at the University of Michigan, graduating with a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1945 and was a member of the Alpha Phi Sorority. After college she worked for the Staebler/Kempf Oil Company. Patty was baptized, confirmed and married in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church. She married Lorne Campbell Black, Jr. of Port Huron, Michigan on April 19, 1947. With her husband and two children, Patty traveled throughout the world. In the 1960's the family moved to Geneva, Switzerland and, later, to Dornholtzhausen, Germany. After returning to the United States, Lorne and Patty came back to Ann Arbor in 1984 and were members of the Barton Hills Country Club. Notes for David Kingsley Dalke:

David Kingsley Dalke, 84, died surrounded by his family, on December 18, 2014. Born in Battle Creek, Michigan, to Paul and Sarah Dalke, David was an iconic individual. The single event that would define so much of his life was joining the United States Navy, at age 17. He served for 20 years on submarines, and was privileged to serve on the initial crew as a sonar man on the first U.S. ballistic missile submarine, the U.S.S. George Washington. He served as Chief of the Boat of the U.S.S. Grenadier, and of the six boats on which he served, he earned the title of "Plank Owner" on two. His travels and adventures in the Navy and on water instilled a love of both in David. The sea remained a passion throughout his life.

After retiring from the Navy, he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Industrial Arts from the University of Missouri, Columbia. After many years as a shop teacher, he began a third career teaching Jr. high school, with specialties in math and remedial reading. While he was earning his Master's degree in Education from the University of Missouri, he met his second wife, Henrietta Nemitoff, who was also earning a Master's degree in Nursing Education. They married and moved to Miami, Florida.

After 17 years in the Miami-Dade school system, he retired and moved with Henrietta to Niceville, FL, and later they built their dream home in Viera, Florida. In their retirement, they traveled extensively, including two around-the-world cruises, and visited more than three dozen countries. His hobbies including sailing (his boats included "The Suzy" and "The Shayne Lady"), kite-flying, shell collecting, and creating driftwood sculptures. In 1978, David and Henri discovered and bought a piece of Sanibel Island. They returned twice a year, each and every year for 36 years, sharing that slip of paradise with their children, grandchildren, and friends. He was involved in the U.S. Submarine Veterans (Snub Harbor Base), and a member of the Holland Club. He was a Past Master of Oleeta-West Dade Masonic Lodge, a 32nd Degree in Scottish Rite, and was a Shriner.

David is survived by his wife, Henrietta Dalke; his daughter, Susan (and Paul) Stevens; his step-children, Tobi (and Ralph) Rettig, Rabbi Arthur (and Leslie) Nemitoff, Rita (and Ron Schonwetter), and Ethel (and George) Walsh.; his siblings, Arthur (and Sue) Dalke, Dorothy Myers, and Martha Lee Hindman. In addition, 11 grandchildren called him Zayde: Jacob Eichenbaum, Nathan Crews, Miriam (and Adam) Gold, Sara (and Oded) Shainin, Rachel Schonwetter, Elana Nemitoff, William Nemitoff, Jonathan Schonwetter, and Taylor Stevens.

Funeral services will be 1:00pm Sunday, December 21, at The Louis Memorial Chapel with burial to follow in Rose Hill Cemetery. His family and friends will gather to say farewell to an unforgettable character. As he was remembered, an echo of David's favorite saying was heard, "I am a curmudgeon, but my wife is nice."
