Notes for Johann Michael Buehl:

With a party of their friends and neighbors, the Beals came down the Rhine to a secluded seaport and on June 9, 1804, embarked on a sailing vessel, the Margaretta, for America. They were tossed on the waves of the Atlantic for two and one-half months before they reached their safe haven, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

From Philadelphia the party proceeded to Germantown and in the following spring went on their way to the point for which they had started, Williamsport, in Lycoming County. There they built a roughhewn edifice which they dedicated to church purposes, in 1828, and the little building still stands. There Conrad F. Haller expounded the Scriptures to them as a lay reader, being a man of some learning.

In 1833 a part of the colony came on to Crawford County with a view of improving their material condition, and from the favorable reports received from them, the Ohio lands were fertile and desirable. This information led to a part of the Beal family coming to Crawford County in 1842 and the remainder in 1843.

They purchased land situated about three and one-half miles southeast of Bucyrus and a part of this is still in the possession of the Beal family. The original purchase of 200 acres was made for $3,000. while this same land at the present time could not be purchased for $100 per acre.

Johann Michael (Buehl) Beal's wife and daughter died in Pennsylvania. His sons became farmers in Crawford County and all have been noted for good citizenship. A few of the older members of the family have always subscribed to the doctrine of the Pietist community, that being the name given the religious colony, while others have become identified with more liberal sects.

Notes for Jakob Friedrich Stollsteimer:

In 1830, Jakob Friedrich Stollsteimer arrives as the first Stollsteimer with his wife and four children. He was born in the village of Oberaichen on May 18, 1782, which can be found south of Stuttgart. He was baptized in the Evangelical Church in the larger village of Musberg about 2 kilometers away. His parents were Johann Michael Stollsteimer, a farmer and mason, and Anna Barbara Reimold and he was the seventh of eight children. He was married September 1, 1806 to Christina Katharina Staebler and had 11 children all born in Oberaichen. I have not found any record at this time, but based on other information I have, my best educated guess is they left the port of Le Havre, France and arrived at the port of New York City. As land records show he purchased 80 acres of government land for $1.25 an acre in section 28 in Scio Township in Washtenaw County, Michigan on November 6, 1830. The following year, on May 2, 1831 he purchased an additional 80 acres of government land for $1.25 an acre in section 28 in Scio Township in Washtenaw County, Michigan (described in the Detroit, Michigan land office document #3839 for W1/2SE Michigan-Toledo Stripe #2S-5E-28). On January 26, 1836 purchased 40 acres in section 33 in Scio Township in Washtenaw County, Michigan. On May 1, 1837 he purchases 40 acres of land in section 33 in Scio Township in Washtenaw County, Michigan (described in the Detroit, Michigan land office document #17278 for NW1/4 of the NE1/4 Michigan-Toledo Stripe #2S-5E-33).

Before leaving Germany, he develops skills as a carpenter. But, while living in the Michigan his occupation was a farmer. He applies and becomes a nationalized citizen on November 21, 1833. Of the eleven children: his oldest child, Christina Katharina born August 22, 1807 and married Johann Karl Hornung on February 3, 1829 in Musberg, immigrated to the United States at the same time as her parents, and purchased government land on November 5, 1833 in section 13 in Freedom Township in Washtenaw County, Michigan and had ten children; his sixth child, Adam Friedrich born February 13, 1814 and married Magdalena Armbruster on October 20, 1839 in Scio Township, immigrated to the United States at the same time as her parents, and purchased government land on January 21, 1832 in section ___ in Scio Township in Washtenaw County, Michigan and had nine children; his seventh child, Karolina born April 16, 1816 and married Alexander Boyden on March 31, 1835 in Scio Township; purchased property in section 5 in Marion Township and later in section 32 in Howell Township in Livingston County, Michigan and had ten children; and lastly the eighth child, Gottlieb (sometime referred to as Fred) born July 18, 1819, never married, initial lived in Scio Township and later in Marion Township.

His younger brother, Johannes born January 29, 1785 in Oberaichen, arrived with his wife, Christina Barbara Stierlin, and eight of his nine children in 1831. They left the French port of Le Havre and arrived at the port of New York City. Before coming to the United States sometime after 1819 moved temporarily to the village of Vaihingen, which is about 4 kilometers north of Oberaichen. As land records show he purchased 80 acres of government land for $1.25 an acre in section 30 in Scio Township in Washtenaw County, Michigan on September 7, 1831 (described as the E1/2 of the NE1/4 township 2 South range 5 East). The following year, on August 30, 1832 he sold the 80 acres for $300. On August 31, 1832 purchases 120 acres in section 32 and an additional 40 acres on October 28, 1833.

There is a story written that tells of Johannes Stollsteimer leaving Wurtemberg and traveling by cart and oxen to the port of Le Havre, France. There were so many people with carts and oxen, that the sale of the oxen occurred and they could not find anyone to purchase the cart, so it was load on the ship and it came with them to the United States.

It should clearly be understood that they were not the only relatives coming to the United States. Others such as: Christian Staebler born February 5, 1727 and wife, Anna Fritz, left the port of Rotterdam on September 23, 1752 and via the port of Plymouth arrived in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and settled first in Lancaster County and later York County, Pennsylvania; Christina (Stierlin) Buehl born January 19, 1729 with son Johann Michael Buehl born September 3, 1759 and his family left the port Amsterdam, Holland June 9, 1804 on the ship 'Margaretta' after a trip of 68 days arrived at the port of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, initially settling in Germantown for a year and then moving on to Williamsport, Lycoming County, Pennsylvania; Johann Michael Renz born April 14, 1797, immigrated to the United States June 16, 1816 and settling in Wilcox County and Marengo County, Alabama; Casper Herthneck born February 25, 1779 in Echterdingen married to Christina Barbara Renz immigrated arriving in the United States March 22, 1831 and settled in Liverpool Township, Medina County, Ohio; Johann Andreas Renz born December 10, 1794 in Echterdingen left by way of the Le Havre port on the ship 'Tamerlane' and arrived in New York September 17, 1833 and settled in Medina County, Ohio; are only a few that came earlier.

Other family relatives (other than Stollsteimer's) that arrived from Oberaichen, Unteraichen, Musberg, Leinfeld and Echterdingen to Washtenaw County, Michigan on or before 1831 are: Auch, Gross, Heimerdinger, Hornung, Koch, Luick, Maeyle, Mueller, Renz, and Staebler.

The question is always asked, why did they leave and come to the United States. In 1828-1831, the area around Oberaichen, Wurtemberg, Germany experienced droughts. Several key events opened the door for our relatives to come to Washtenaw County, Michigan. The completion of the Erie Canal in 1825 opened a new route to Michigan via the Great lakes and Detroit, and by 1833, federal Indian policies had removed most Native Americans to west of the Mississippi, which paved the way for government land surveys and, thus, for increased agricultural settlement. The land office in Detroit, Michigan opened in 1818, originally selling an acre for $2 on an installment plan. In 1820, due to the "cost and difficulties of collecting arrears" and "to check speculation," the policy was changed to that of the sale in 80 acre plots at $1.25 per acre, for cash.

The most important factor to accessing Michigan was the Erie Canal which facilitated the movement. Transportation to Michigan by water was "dangerous, unreliable, and fraught with discomfort." Navigation on Lake Erie was regarded as more dangerous than on the Atlantic. Accommodations for passengers were poor. To reach Detroit from the south by land it was necessary to cross the Black Swamp in northwestern Ohio. In rainy periods the swamp was virtually impassable.

In 1816 troops in the Detroit garrison began building roads. By 1827 land transportation was greatly improved from Ohio to Detroit with bridges and a new road. The first road westward from Detroit followed the path of the Old Sauk Trail (later known as US-12 "Michigan Avenue").

I believe the Ernst Peter Schilling born May 16, 1776 in Oberaichen that immigrated 1817 arriving at the port of Baltimore, Maryland and initially settling in Lycoming County, Pennsylvania and later moved on to Scio Township, Washtenaw County, Michigan had a major influence on others. He purchased 80 acres of government land on June 3, 1829 in section 29 of Scio Township.

The Stollsteimer's as did other relatives that resided in Washtenaw County before 1831, influenced the petitioning by Jonathan Heinrich Mann for a pastor for Washtenaw County from the Seminary in Basel, Switzerland. In June 1833 Friedrich Schmid born September 6, 1807 in Walddorf, Calw, Wurtemberg arrived and greatly influence the community.

The population of Michigan grew from 8,896 in 1820 to 31,639 in 1830 to 212,267 in 1840. The county of Washtenaw grew from 1,500 in 1825 to 4,042 in 1830 to 23,571 in 1840.

The relatively large German population and common bonds of language and traditions kept this community cohesive in Washtenaw County, at least until World War I. From that time onward, two world wars fought with Germany encouraged the local German-speakers to mostly abandon their language and fully integrate into American Society. For many decades, sons of German immigrants tended to marry daughters of German immigrants, so that many Washtenaw County families can count themselves as being of full German parentage, even after 5 or 6 generations. This fact attests to both the size and cohesiveness of this group of settlers.

Although mostly forested, the Indians did create some openings in the wilderness, known then as "prairies". This was often done by igniting forest fires in the right places and right seasons. Explorers told of occasional dangerous encounters with hostile Indians (the most common local tribes were the Wyandotte and Pottawatomie), although the roving bands were largely friendly and traded regularly with the settlers. Pioneers were also forced to keep guard over their livestock from marauding packs of wolves. As late as 1834, wolves were still present in the county, as attested by the loss of 20 sheep to a wolf pack during a single night in Freedom Township.

Untouched forests stood everywhere, broken by a few animal-and Indian-trails. The area of Washtenaw was used as a hunting ground by the Indians, who were the only human occupants. The woods were full of deer, bear, wolves, turkey, partridge, and other animals in abundance; early settlers mention the wolves as particularly vicious, and there are no longer any wolves or bear in this part of the state. The only means of travel which had been tried by Europeans was by canoe on the rivers. The trees, which of course had never been cut, grew to sizes now unknown, and early settlers mention six foot diameter trees as the largest on their property. The surveying crew which was sent into Michigan's Lower Peninsula wrote their report and said that the land was not worth surveying, between swampy land, fevers and disease, and wild animals, the land was not desirable. Many if not most of the early settlers came down with a form of malaria, locally termed "ague" with its characteristic crippling chills and fever; generally no medicines were available for treatment. Nowadays the swamps have been drained, and the fever that one finds in account after account of pioneer life no longer even exists in the living memory of Michigan residents.

The first settler of the land that came to be Scio Township arrived in October of 1825, and stayed a few years, alone in the wilderness; the second settler came in 1826, followed by a few more in that year. Scio Township itself was not organized until it was set up by the Territorial Council on March 25, 1833. Freedom Township was first settled in June of 1831, followed by five more families in the fall season of 1831. Lodi Township had a settler at least as early as 1826, and by 1831 an organized community existed there. The Township of Lodi was, however, not organized until March 7, 1834.

One can only speculate today, but after a sea voyage from Europe of weeks on a sailing ship, they would arrive on the East coast of the United States. Proceeding to Albany, perhaps with a pair of oxen, he could make his way by the Erie Canal from Albany to Buffalo, transported on a barge pulled by draft animals walking down a towpath beside the canal; numerous locks would be negotiated to make up for differences in level.

At Buffalo they would have to make a decision to go by land through Canada or south through Ohio and the third option by ship (steam or a sailing vessel) across Lake Erie to Detroit, Michigan. Detroit, a city of several thousand, is the only settlement of any size in Michigan Territory. The last thirty miles or so, it would be necessary to follow a rutted path through the woods, and by now he really needed his team of oxen, because without them he would have difficulty travelling, and the oxen would be a great assistance in clearing the land and plowing.

A story provided by Mrs. Harriet Row, describing the trip from New York to Washtenaw County , Michigan:

We began our trip on board a sloop on the Hudson River, and the next night arrived at Albany, then we were on the canal boat, I think, nearly two weeks before we reached Buffalo; then a long rough passage across Lake Erie. Twice we had to put back a long ways on account of the "head winds. There was but one lady on board except myself who did not suffer from sea-sickness. The captain took us on deck to see some places of interest and said we would make good sailors.

"Arriving in Detroit we bought a yoke of oxen for which we paid one hundred dollars. They were very large ones, and one thing I especially remember about them-they were terribly afraid of Indians. They always had to be chained to a tree when any Indians were passing. The brothers brought a wagon with them which they put together at Detroit and loaded up with their chests of beddings, clothing, etc., their wives and children on top, and started for (Saline or) Lodi as there they had a cousin.

The men walked most of the way as the road were nearly impassable, often having to unload the livestock and pry the wagons out of the mud holes, the hand-spikes laying quite thick along the way where other teamsters had used them. But they kept up good courage making cheerful comment on the little log huts that began to appear along the way, and especially the women had plenty of time during that long, slow ride to make a great many calculations for the future, which, of course, were not all realized.

Jakob's arrival in Ann Arbor, at that time there was a few log cabins and a general store. Here he would have to be taken in with one of the local families for a time, as there are no other accommodations, while he obtained the services of a surveyor. He would now head into the pristine wilderness, hacking a path for family and oxen, until the surveyor located his eighty acres of land and marked the boundaries. The trees which he finds all around him now occupy the space which he wants to use as farmland. First, however, he needed some kind of shelter-generally a log cabin-and he has, certainly plenty of trees to use for the purpose! In fact, he will have to clear stumps from his cabin floor area. While he could have built a rude three sided shelter with a roof for his family at first, the raising of a log cabin meant enlisting the cooperation and help of such neighbors as he can find. With neighbors likely to be anywhere from a half mile to several miles away, gathering three or four of them to assist in cutting and lifting logs for a cabin was a problem in logistics. Everyone on the frontier would be glad to pitch in and help, as they knew how much they needed each other's assistance. But they must be notified, and a day chosen when all can come.

The early log cabin would most likely have been a simple square structure from fifteen to twenty feet on a side, made of logs fitted at the corners. Split logs could serve as a floor, and much of the furniture such as table and chairs was likely made of split log with legs made of straight pieces of branch fitted into holes in the wood. A fireplace was an absolute necessity, as it furnished heat for cooking and for survival, and light at night, and could be relied upon in some instances to keep wild animals from entering the cabin. The very earliest structure a family might put up might have lacked a proper door, as metal for hinges and a blacksmith were not available. An animal skin hung across the doorway kept the interior warmer and discouraged animals from entering. It is also dubious that glass for windows would have been brought in hundreds of miles from the nearest glass works; a piece of heavy, greased paper filling a window frame would let in some light by day.

The fireplace was usually made up by cutting green sticks of a size to make a chimney rectangle, then stacking them up with a good quantity of ordinary mud added to the structure, so that when it dried it approximated a chimney. The fireplace part was similarly made. These chimneys' could of course dry out and catch fire, and a close watch had to be kept on them.

Cooking was done in, or over, the fireplace. Baking was done in cast iron kettles, often made with three legs and a heavy cover, and was simply pushed into the coals. Those who later remembered those days and saw the transition to the invention of the cast iron cook stove of later years, said that the food prepared over the fire was at least as good as made on a stove; they did not say how convenient it was! The log cabin may have a second floor, or simply a sleeping loft. Even with a 20X20 foot cabin, the entire family spent their waking indoor days in a single room, and families in those days often took in travelers!

The settler now finds himself living in a dense forest of various types of oak, cotton wood, bass wood, ash, black walnut, butternut, sugar maple, soft maple, elm, sycamore, hickory, and other trees. His land is generally gradually sloping toward Lake Erie, thirty miles or more away, and the soil is rich with a few cobble stones; excellent for farming.

The first task is to cut trees, and cut more trees. The land must be cleared of stumps and plowed in order to plant useful crops such as corn, wheat, or potatoes. This will be back breaking and dangerous work, dodging the trees as they are felled by ax; it will take many years to clear all the trees from eighty acres.

This is not the only danger the settlers encounter; in Freedom Township, in 1832, two young men got lost in the winter walking home from helping raise a mill, miles away in the trackless woods. One struggled home; the other died before he was found. A similar death occurred in Lodi Township when an older son was out hunting and became lost; he died before being found. Another settler brought a flock of sheep to try his hand at that pursuit, and the wolves killed twenty of them in one night.

One can imagine also that, having arrived to an area which must be made fit for farming, the first few harvests were scanty. There were reports of hunger and outright starvation in Freedom Township in 1833. In 1827 a survey was made to determine the total amount of money, in cash, that the population of Washtenaw possessed. It came to seventy two or seventy three dollars. We must realize that the dollar of those days was worth much more than now; for example, Horace Greeley, writing in the 1830 period, mentions an all-you-can eat buffet dinner when he stopped over at an inn, for the sum of eighteen and three quarter cents. The government land, at $1.25 an acre, was probably a difficult sum to pay for many; the reason people came, is that it was available at all.

People often bartered things, or worked on shares, lessening the need for money to change hands. For example, a small grist mill was usually one of the first businesses to spring up in an area open to settlement. The general rule was, to grind whatever grain was brought in, corn, wheat, rye, etc, for one tenth of the flour produced. The first mill in the area under consideration was in the village of Dexter, named for Mr. Dexter, founder of the village. Likewise, if a settler's land was not cleared sufficiently to plant enough crops for his family, a deal could be struck with a neighbor who had excess land, to plant on his land and give a portion of the harvest to him.

Once the early days had been behind them, more land cleared, and more income produced, the temporary arrangements of the first few years' housing (and furniture) might be improved upon. But one had to survive the first years ..... and in the 1830 decade, in fact by 1840, all the land in Washtenaw was gone to settlers, and neighbors could be found with ease.

Surprisingly enough, transportation became much easier after the early days were over also. After several railroad company failures, the "Detroit And St. Joseph" railroad was completed through to Ann Arbor in October of 1839, and many of the early settlements, including Monroe, Ypsilanti, and others were soon accessible by rail. With the arrival of settlers in numbers, roads were built and improved. By 1840, Washtenaw was beginning to show signs of civilization.

The local Indians, who were not friendly, but generally not a threat either, remained on in Washtenaw for a considerable time. Gale Stollsteimer recalls that Lucinda (Stollsteimer) Birchfield (daughter of Ruben Stollsteimer) related being forbidden to play in the woods behind their house when she was about ten years old (1894) due to the Indians still present in the area.

Perhaps greater solace has come to these people from the work done in connection with their churches than from any other source. The first few who came worshipped in the village with other Protestant people. But by 1832 feeling was strong for a church of their own. In that year, therefore, Jonathan Henry Mann, representing German settlers in and near Ann Arbor, sent a petition to the Evangelical Missionary Institute of Basel, Switzerland, asking that a pastor might be sent here.

In answer to that petition, the Reverend Frederick Schmid was sent to America, arriving in Ann Arbor August 20, 1833. He immediately announced that a service in the German language would be held in a little log schoolhouse in Scio Township, about four miles west of the Court House Square. When this service opened, nearly all the German people in Scio and Ann Arbor were there. This was the first religious gathering of Germans in Michigan Territory. Before the devotionals were over steps had been taken to perfect a church organization, and a date was set upon which more formal action was to be taken. During the last week in August a meeting was held in the home of Daniel F. Allmendinger, about two miles west of the village, and a religious organization created under the name of "The First German Evangelical Society of Scio." It was decided that a church building should be erected at the earliest possible moment. Mr. Allmendinger presented the society with an acre of ground, and on it, at a total cost of $265.32, a small frame building was erected. The list of members and non-members who contributed to the building fund offers accurate information as to the names of these early German settlers and at the same time it tells us who helped to perfect the organization of this pioneer society.

Among the nonmembers were David F. Allmendinger, Ludwig Mayle, John G. Koch, George

The members of the church who contributed to the building fund were Daniel F. Allmendinger, Jonathan Henry Mann, George Straatmen, Jacob Markle, George Mayle, Christian Prussia, Abraham Kroman, Josiah Kroman, John Kroman, John Beck, Jacob Steffe, John M. Schneider, Jacob Stollsteimer, and the minister, Frederick Schmid. Twenty dollars were also given by the Josenhans family, who were still living in Stuttgart, and ten dollars were given by "a friend" living in Philadelphia. On the third of November, members of the "Evangelical Society" again met at Mr. Allmendinger's home and trustees of the society were chosen. The men so honored were Christian Prussia, John Beck and Abraham Kroman. They were to be known as the "Trustees of the First German Evangelical Society of Scio." After some discussion, it was decided to incorporate, so a record of the proceedings was filed in the Court of Washtenaw County under date of December 16, 1834.

Past and Present of Washtenaw County, Michigan by Samuel W. Beakes, Chicago: The S.J. Clarke Publishing Co., 1906.

THE BETHLEHEM CHURCH - The elder Mann early wrote to the Basel Evangelical Missionary society for a missionary. Frederic Schmid was commissioned in the spring of 1833 for this service, and arrived on the ground in August following. He held his first public worship on August 26th, in a schoolhouse, four miles west of the initial village. As early as November 3rd, next following Pastor Schmid's arrival, measures were taken for building a house of worship. At a meeting held on that day, 15 members were present, as follows: J. H. Mann, George Stattman, Jacob Maerkle, George Mayle, Charles Brusche, Abraham Cromann, John Beck, Jacob Steffe, John M. Schneider, Jacob Stollsteimer, Johann Cromann, Jesaja Cromann, Joseph Cromann, D. F. Allmendinger and Frederic Schmid, the new pastor. Of these, Messrs. Mann and Allmendinger were chosen as trustees and the work of the building was at once determined upon, for which a lot, two miles west of the site of the Ann Arbor courthouse, was given by Mr. Allmendinger.

History of Washtenaw County, Michigan: together with sketches of its cities, villages and townships...and biographies of representative citizens: history of Michigan. By Chas. C. Chapman & Co. Chicago: Chas. C. Chapman & Co., 1881. Page 356:

The following is from the pen of Emanuel Mann, whose father was one of the first German settlers in the county: It was in the autumn of 1829 that Frederick Schilling, of Weinsberg, and Jonathan Henry Mann, of Stuttgart, in the kingdom of Wurtemberg, in South Germany, crossed Lake Erie together in search of a new home in the Territory of Michigan. Schilling was accompanied by his family, consisting of wife, son and daughter. (Both son and daughter are still living at Sebewaing, Huron County. J. H. Mann left his family at Reading, Pennsylvania, with a view to move in the following spring in case he found a desirable location in Michigan. They were advised by Daniel F. Allmendinger, also a native of Wurtemberg, living near Dansville, New York, who had visited Michigan a short time before, to go to Washtenaw County, where said Allmendinger had already purchased Government land in the Township of Lodi. As there was some good Government land in the Township of Scio, Frederick Schilling purchased 80 acres on section in said township. J. H. Mann, a tanner by trade, concluded to settle in the village of Ann Arbor, and to move his family the following spring. On his return to Pennsylvania, he wrote a letter to his brother-in-law, Emanuel Josenhans, in Stuttgart, giving a very favorable account of what he saw of the new Territory and the route by which it could be reached by immigrants from Germany, from New York via Erie Canal and Lake Erie. Mr. Josenhans circulated the letter amongst the peasantry in the neighborhood of Stuttgart. The consequence was that numerous immigration was started for Michigan by a class of small farmers and mechanics who had very limited means.

J. Henry Mann with his family arrived at Ann Arbor in the first days of June, 1830, where he purchased a tannery of Harvey Austin. Said tannery was situated at or near where the present depot of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad is situated. During the following summer and fall the families of Jacob Paul, Jacob Stollsteimer, Carl Horning, Jacob Gross, Christian Auch and Daniel F. Allmendinger settled in Scio. George Mayle, a shoemaker, and Emanuel G. Wildt settled in Ann Arbor. In the winter of 1830 to 1831, Professor Gottlob Nordmann from Berlin, Prussia, arrived with his family. Mr. Nordmann, was Professor of Mathematics in a military academy and lost his place on account of his liberal political views. Mr. Nordmann moved in the spring of 1831 to Lima and became a farmer. During the year 1832, the following Germans arrived: William F. Osius, from the Grandduchy of Hesse, who immigrated to Pennsylvania in 1825, settled in Freedom. Mr. Osius was born March 21, 1797, served in the Germany army against the First Napoleon. He was for nine years Supervisor for the Township of Freedom and Justice of the Peace for 20 years.

John Schneeberger, John Hoberger, Thomas Roth, Jacob Haab, Jacob Haas and Martin Grauer settled in Freedom. Andrew Beck, with his sons, Jacob and Godfrey, David Luick, Frederick Staebler, Michael Kaercher, Jacob April, Frederick Laubengaier and Ulrich Laubengaier, Johannes Stollsteimer, Jacob Wild, Conrad Bissinger, were some of the first settlers in Scio.

In the summer of 1833, the Evangelical Mission Institute of Bale, Switzerland, sent Rev. Frederick Schmid as a missionary to the German Protestants in Michigan. A Church was organized and incorporated as the First German Evangelical Society of Scio. The first church building which the Germans in the Territory erected, was built by this society on an acre of land donated by Daniel F. Allmendinger for this purpose and as a burying ground. This building is still standing about two miles west of Ann Arbor, on the so-called territorial road. Rev. Frederick Schmid was for many years the only German Protestant minister in Michigan. He organized Churches in Detroit, Monroe and Waterloo in Jackson County. The foregoing were the pioneers of the German element, which now constitutes at least 30 per cent, of the population of Washtenaw County. In point of intelligence, in wealth, in all that goes to make up good citizens, those representing this nationality will compare favorably with others. In every station of life, as business or professional men, as office-holders, none bear a better reputation.

Notes for Michael Kunkel:

The Birth and Baptismal Records of Shuster's Union Church indicate that the sponsors of Michael were his aunt and uncle, Michael and Justina Kunkel. The 1810 Census Index lists a Michael Kunkle living in Hopewell Township of York County. It shows both he and his wife's age as between 26 and 45, and two sons under the age of ten. This would indicate that he and Elizabeth had two sons in addition to Henry, who was not born until 1814. (M252, roll 57, p.170).

York County Deed Book 3B, page 435 shows that on 28 February 1817, Michael Kunkle of Hopewell Township and his wife Katharine sold to Peter Sentz for $3,000 a tract of 167 acres and 94 perches in Hopewell Township. It was the same tract purchased 24 March 1810 from Conrad Miller. Deed Book 3F, page 146, shows that on 6 April 1821, Michael Kunkel of Shrewsbury Township and wife Catharine granted to Peter Ehrman in trust for the grantor's minor issue Michael, Elizabeth and Samuel: (a) 10 acres 32 perches, (b) 10 acres 73 perches and (c) 1 acre 5 perches, all in York Township, sold to Michael and Catharine on 16 February 1821 by the estate of Michael Riley.

Michael Kunkle moved to Richland County, Ohio, in about 1825; perhaps earlier as he is not listed in the 1820 Pennsylvania Census Index. There he purchased a tract of unimproved land and through his efforts and well directed energies the same was soon transformed into a splendid piece of real estate.

A York County, Pennsylvania deed (Deed Book 3K, page 154) notes that Michael Kunkel of Richland County, Ohio, legatee of Henry Kunkel, executed a release to the decedent's executors. Later, on 22 October 1832 (Deed Book 3N, page 105), Michael Kunkle of Richland County, Ohio, executed a power of attorney to George Heise to collect sums due from the estate of Michael Klinefelter.

His death occurred in Crawford County in 1846, when he was past 70 years of age. His personal property was valued at $97.47 by an inventory performed on December 30, 1846. His most valuable possession was "one black mare" inventoried at $35. Next were a cow and a bureau at $6 each. A gaggle of geese was itemized at ten cents each. His estate was recorded and filed on June 22, 1847 and listed him as late of Jackson Township, Crawford County, Ohio. Grain and meat valued at $60.32 was let off for the support of Cathrine Kunkle, his widow, and Polly Dianah and Rebeca, his minor children.

Michael and Cathrine Kunkle were active members of the Lutheran Church and their lives were ever in harmony with the faith which they thus professed. Although the place of his burial has yet to be found, since his will listed him as from Jackson Township, it would appear that he must have been interred somewhere in that area. Jackson Township, Crawford County, borders Richland County. Thus the cemetery may be somewhere in the vicinity of Crestline, Ohio.

Notes for Adam (Stabler or Stavely) Stabley:

Landmark History of the United Brethren Church. By Daniel Eberly, Isaiah H. Albright, Commodore, United Brethren Publishing House, - Dayton, Ohio, 1911.

Stabley's Church

Winterstown class is the oldest class in the county. Stabley's or Zion Church is the first church that our people built in the county. Before the church was erected here our people worshiped in private houses, at Adam Stabley's, who lived a few hundred yards west of where the church stands; also at John Smiegh's, and at the Grimms'. The church was built in 1843 on Adam Stabley's land, principally by Mr. Stabley himself and his neighbors. After the church was completed the following brethren were elected trustees of the church October 23, 1843: Frederick Grove, Levi Neff and Charles Neff. At this conference it was decided to name it "Zion Church." The lot, containing 107 perches, with the church upon it, was then bought by these trustees June 1, 1844, for the sum of $2.00. The church was a frame building and was dedicated to God by Rev. John Russell, presiding elder.

During the summer of 1881 this church was torn down and a new one was built in its place under the pastorate of Rev. G. W. Lightner. The pastor drew the plans for the new building and superintended its erection. It was built of the best material and has a slate roof. It was dedicated to God September 11, 1881, by Rev. D. D. DeLong, D.D., President of Lebanon Valley College, assisted by Rev. C. T. Stearn, D.D., and Rev. E. Light. During the year 1895, the church was thoroughly repaired, repainted inside and outside, furnished with new carpet, lamps and pulpit. A tower seventy feet high was also built to its front, and a good bell was placed upon it, all at a cost of $600. Rev. J. W. Grimm was the pastor then. The church was reopened November 10, 1895, by Rev. C. A. Burtner, Ph.D., presiding elder, assisted by the pastor.

A small log parsonage was also built by the side of the church about the year 1850. It was very small and had a very low ceiling, so low that when one of the preachers moved into it he had to saw a part of the legs of his bedsteads off to enable him to set them up. It was torn down some years ago, and the pastors of the charge now live in Red Lion.

Many of the fathers of this church have gone to their long home and their remains lie buried in the adjoining graveyard, but their descendants are still with us and are filled with the same zeal and piety that made their fathers the heroes of their day. No one man among them all, however, stands forth so prominently as does Rev. Frederick Flinchbaugh, whose long and useful life merits more than a mere allusion. He worshiped at the Union Lutheran and German Reformed Church, located several miles east of Zion Church, and was a member of one of these congregations. He led the singing in this church for many years, and all who knew him called him a Christian, as Christians were rated in the neighborhood. Nor was he of a different opinion. He did try hard to be good. He enjoyed the confidence of his preacher and of his fellow church-members, as his life among them was above reproach.

But something happened and the Spirit of the Lord arrested him in his career. It was the custom in the community to have corn-husking parties, after the corn had been gathered in from the fields. On such occasions the neighbors were usually invited to spend an evening at the husking, and after a certain amount of work had been done, a great supper would be ready, when all the huskers would be invited to partake before leaving for their homes. To such a husking Mr. Flinchbaugh went. He failed to get to the first table. While waiting for his turn a party in an adjoining room were making merry with a violin. He listened for a while, but he became uneasy, and moved by some impulse that seemed almost irresistible, he left and went home. He could not sleep that night. The music of that "fiddle" and the merry-making noises of the people were in his ears all night. He arose in the morning with a feeling of sadness. And yet he could hardly tell why he was depressed. He had often been present before when such music and enjoyments were had. An arrow had pierced his heart, and he knew it not as of the Lord. Soon after this a violent disease broke out in his family, and in a short time carried two of his children to the grave. He now became greatly concerned for the salvation of his soul. For many years he had been "fore-singer" (leader of song) in his church, was a member of it in good standing, but he had great unrest within. How to find rest he knew not, nor was there any one in all the neighborhood, not even his pastor, who could give him the proper counsel at this time. He earnestly sought God in prayer for direction and deliverance. After a long struggle he was led into the glorious liberty of the people of God. His conversion was clear and powerful. This was so new in his community, and to him so satisfying, that he felt a strong motive within him to tell his neighbors and friends about it. When by himself working in the fields he would tell the story of his salvation to imaginary audiences. Thus the spirit of God was gradually leading him into the Christian ministry. He began his work with the holding of prayer-meetings, where he took the liberty to read a portion of scripture and give an exhortation. Invitations for such services in the houses of his neighbors showed that his work was taking effect. His heart-stirring words on these occasions revealed the nature of the pent-up fires in his own heart. Having gained confidence in himself and God, he gave the gospel trumpet no uncertain sound. He knew everybody in the community. The evil ways and the godless lives of the people were no secret to him. He laid bare their wickedness, held up their sins before their eyes and exhorted them with all tenderness of heart and often with his eyes streaming with tears, to repent and turn to Christ for salvation.

"Truth from his lips prevailed with double sway,
And fools who came to scoff, remained to pray."

The results of these earnest and faithful efforts were soon apparent. The Haneys, the Strayers, the Stableys, the Smieghs, the Grimms, and many others were converted to God, and identified themselves with the revival movement.

These prayer-meetings, which were an unexpected innovation on the settled methods of the neighborhood, were held from house to house, and the walking of a distance of from two to six miles to these gatherings was a matter only to be lightly considered. "Brother Flinchbaugh, taking his perforated lantern, with a stub of tallow-candle, would call everybody old and strong enough, to him, and then through woods, underbrush, over rocks and hills, would lead them to prayer-meeting, regardless of the toil in the summer or the cold of the winter. Such devotion cannot fail to win. These meetings were attended with about the usual outward demonstrations of shoutings, clapping of hands and leaping for joy. Such a departure from the regular methods of worship as conducted in the church had the double effect of drawing the people to see and hear, as also of stirring up opposition." The leaven of revival by this time pretty thoroughly permeated the community, so that many were not slow to express a preference for the meetings held after this fashion than for the services in the church. This gave rise to warm discussion among the several adherents. During all this time Brother Flinchbaugh was still the leader of the singing in the church, in which he had worshiped from his youth. His revival services, in common with all reform movements, awakened active opposition. But he was one who could meet his neighbors in friendly discussion and prove by scripture that his views and practices harmonized with the Word of God. Being defeated in argument by the superior wisdom of Brother Flinchbaugh, they finally prevailed on the preacher to take the controversy into the pulpit, and silence these troublesome people. "Accordingly on a Sabbath morning, after the introductory services, the pastor arose and announced that in all probability he would preach longer this morning than usual, but they should have patience and hear him, as he had a special subject to bring before the congregation. He at once entered into the subject and began to denounce all revival effort, and especially the noise and shouting that was tolerated in such meetings. While he was striking out with vehemence Brother Flinchbaugh arose, and with his trumpet voice said to the preacher, 'El der Heiland gebiet es jo (why, the Lord commanded it so)' The preacher seemed confused, stammered out a few words, and abruptly closed the services. The unusually long sermon ended in about ten or fifteen minutes."

About this time it became apparent that to maintain their spiritual life they must sever their connection with the church of their early choice and identify themselves with such as encourage a change of heart and life. This was done about the year 1829, shortly after the first class in the county was organized, with which they became identified. What Rev. John Haney was to the Winterstown Church Rev. F. Flinchbaugh was to Stabley's Church, especially in their early history.

Soon after Brother Flinchbaugh had connected himself with our church, the annual conference gave him license to preach. He traveled a few years as an itinerant, but served mostly in a local relation with great efficiency. It was no unusual thing for him to walk ten miles on a Sunday morning, preach and then walk home again. "And there were giants in those days," and Brother Flinchbaugh was one of them. His most enduring monument is erected in the hearts of a large number of grateful people, who under God owe their conversion directly or indirectly to him. Many of his descendants are still battling for the same religion and the same church. He died January 14, 1866, at a ripe and honored old age. His wife, Mary, died January 20, 1866. His memory is a precious legacy to the church he loved so well. Longfellow has well said:

"When a great man dies.
For years beyond our ken,
The life he leaves behind him
Lies upon the paths of men."

And so Rev. F. Flinchbaugh has not been forgotten. The life he lived so long and well will continue to lie "upon the paths of men," brightening their way to the kingdom of heaven.

Notes for Charles William Dotterer:

Harper, Kansas, August 20, 1914 - Harper people were shocked yesterday August 19, 1914 when the news reached town that Charles Dotterer had been run into and killed by the south bound Orient passenger train at a crossing one mile north east of town. Mr. Dotterer had been in the country and was returning home He was driving a team hitched to a low wheeled wagon. The accident occurred at the crossing west of Dan Billig's farm. At this point a clear sight of the track can be had for nearly a mile both ways and no one knows how the train happened to hit him. The team had crossed the track and the engine evidently hit the wagon squarely. Mr. Dotterer was thrown several feet and death resulted instantly from a deep hole in the right side of his head. It was the only mark on him. The wagon was completely demolished but the horses were unhurt.

The train crew brought the body to the Orient depot and the county officials were at once summoned. Judge Rowell held an inquest but it is not completed as he wishes to give the engineer and fireman a hearing and this cannot be done until this evening. Mr. Dotterer was hard of hearing and it is believed that he did not hear the warning of the whistle or see the train until it hit him. His death is a particularly, sad one, and doubly so as only two years ago his wife was killed by being thrown from a buggy when the horse, she and her husband were driving became frightened. Mr. Dotterer was nearing seventy years of age. He was born in Germany and came to this country when only six years of age. He has been a resident of Harper county for the past twenty-six years.

Mr. Dotterer was nearing seventy years of age. He was born in Germany and came to this country when only six years of age. He has been a resident of Harper county for the past twenty-six years.

Harper, Kansas, September 12, 1914 - Charles R. Dotterer was born in Ohio over 43 years ago. In 1882 he with his parents moved to Rice Co., Kansas where they lived until 1889 when they came to this county and settled on a farm north west of town in Grant Township. Here he grew to manhood and remained until a little over two years ago, when he went to Holly, Colorado which place was his home for the remainder of his life. Not long after taking up his residence in Colorado he became troubled with a mental affliction that gradually clouded his mind. Medical skill of the highest order was consulted but to no avail. At last it became necessary to remove him to a Sanitarium at Pueblo, Colorado, where he lingered on till Sunday, September 8, 1918, when death came.

The remains were sent to this place, and arrived on Tuesday, September 10. The funeral services were held in the M. E. church at his place where a large number of friends and relatives gathered to pay the last tribute to the dead. Rev. Von Schrittz delivered a short discourse upon the character of the deceased and spoke of the Christian life with its hopes of life eternal and he solace given to those who mourn that loved ones departed shall be met over yonder. Beautiful (and suitable) music was rendered by the choir. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. Interment was made in the I. O. O. F. cemetery here.

He married Miss Roberts in 1904 to this union were born one child, a daughter. Both of them survive him. He also left four brothers, Daniel and Edward of Burlington, Oklahoma, Andrew of Stafford, Kansas and Theophilus of this place, and five sisters, Mrs. F. A. Maninger, Mrs. L. D. Renollet and Mrs. Ernest Bear of this place and Mrs. Joseph Smith and Miss Bertha Dotterer of Goodwell, Oklahoma. All were present at the funeral.

A few years ago he was converted and ever afterwards lived the consistent Christian life. By the death Charles Dotterer there has been removed a good father, husband and neighbor. He was quiet, unobtrusive, very sincere in his friendship, and very honest. There are many here who will mourn his departure and cherish a recollection of him and his sterling qualities.

Notes for Johann Michael Buehl:

With a party of their friends and neighbors, the Beals came down the Rhine to a secluded seaport and on June 9, 1804, embarked on a sailing vessel, the Margaretta, for America. They were tossed on the waves of the Atlantic for two and one-half months before they reached their safe haven, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

From Philadelphia the party proceeded to Germantown and in the following spring went on their way to the point for which they had started, Williamsport, in Lycoming County. There they built a roughhewn edifice which they dedicated to church purposes, in 1828, and the little building still stands. There Conrad F. Haller expounded the Scriptures to them as a lay reader, being a man of some learning.

In 1833 a part of the colony came on to Crawford County with a view of improving their material condition, and from the favorable reports received from them, the Ohio lands were fertile and desirable. This information led to a part of the Beal family coming to Crawford County in 1842 and the remainder in 1843.

They purchased land situated about three and one-half miles southeast of Bucyrus and a part of this is still in the possession of the Beal family. The original purchase of 200 acres was made for $3,000. while this same land at the present time could not be purchased for $100 per acre.

Johann Michael (Buehl) Beal's wife and daughter died in Pennsylvania. His sons became farmers in Crawford County and all have been noted for good citizenship. A few of the older members of the family have always subscribed to the doctrine of the Pietist community, that being the name given the religious colony, while others have become identified with more liberal sects.

Notes for Georg Friedrich Gross:

Frederick Gross, a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, where he was born about 1765, immigrated to America in 1804. He secured 160 acres of land in Lycoming County, Pennsylvania, cleared and improved the same, and resided thereon until his death in 1820. In his native country he married Barbara Graff, and they were the parents of six children: Michael, deceased; Barbara, deceased; John, deceased, who married Dorothea Wagner; Christina, who married Jacob Scherer; Margaret, deceased, and Joseph, who married Christina Ulmer. Mr. Gross was a member of the Dunkard Church

History of the German Dunkards who Settled in Blooming Grove, Lycoming County, Pennsylvania in 1804 and 1817.

In the development of Christian civilization the doctrines of the reformers came into conflict with the demands of military service, and made outcasts of multitudes of the most intelligent and most useful of the inhabitants of Germany. The people of southern Germany have always possessed strong powers of endurance, great determination and patient, plodding perseverance. Harassed and tormented until the land of their ancestors became intolerable, they fled to a strange country. Here they hoped to "live apart from the world and its wickedness, and worship God with joy and fervor unmolested." The topography and climate of this part of Germany resembles in a marked degree the conditions in central Pennsylvania, so there has been a natural drifting toward this part of our country by early settlers.

The German Baptist Brethren denomination was organized in 1708 near Schwarzenau, Germany. Its members refused to go to war, would take no oath, were noted for their modesty of clothing, plain speech and distinguished hospitality. Because of this belief, John and Gottlieb Heim were imprisoned in 1803 for refusing to bear arms in the levies being made for Napoleon at that time. After a year in prison they were released upon their promise to emigrate to America. They at once joined a large company who thru religious scruples or dread of military service, were preparing to go to America.

They left Moehringen on June 9th, 1804, spending the first night in Vaihingen on the Enz. On the 10th they passed through Bruchsal to Langen Bruecken, on the 11th they reached Saxheim, the 12th Aller Heilige, and on the 13th Frankfort on the Main. They remained here until the 16th, when they took ship for Muinden. They set sail at 7 a. m., spending the night at Elsfeld, and continued on until noon of the 20th, when they arrived at Arnheim, Holland. After many delays they set sail on the morning of July 12th in the ship LULU, and landed at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, September 18th.

The story of the journey and voyage is briefly told by George Kiess, Sr., one of the parties, who kept a diary. It will be noticed in the record that the company of men, women and children were on the way for one hundred and one days, sixty-eight of which were spent huddled together on an overcrowded emigrant ship at sea. It can be safely inferred that they paid their passage including food, for they complained that "the food was poor, the water bad and the beer sour." In spite of this unsanitary situation and the terrorizing experiences, there were but two deaths, small children, and one child was born.

It is related that during the tedious days of the voyage, religious discussion occupied much of the time, often becoming very animated and intensely earnest. The result of this was a splitting into two groups with two distinct lines of thought. The division was over the adoption of celibacy as soon as it should become practical.

The party separated upon landing. The group favoring celibacy selected a leader and went to Butler County, and after considerable moving about founded what is the present town of Ambridge.

The second group spent the winter in Germantown while deciding upon the location of their colony. Their pastor and leader was Doctor Conrad Haller, who during his stay in Germantown the year before had become a Dunker, and although his company were Reformed Lutherans (but called Pietists), they were easily persuaded to accept this form of faith and practice, which was an easy transition, so that they came to Lycoming county known as Dunkers.

The colony of 1804 comprised the following named persons:

- John and Gottlieb Heim, bachelors
- Leonard Ulmer and family
- Leonard Staiger and family
- John George Waltz and family
- John George Kiess and family
- David Young and family
- Wendel Harmon and family
- Frederick Gross and family
- Michael Biehl and family
- Ferdinand Frederick Scheel and family
- Michael Burghardt and family.

In 1806 came:

- Christopher Kiess
- George Kiess
- Michael Waltz, and their families.

From this time emigration was prohibited for ten years, after which time John Heim returned to Germany and brought out the following families:

Christian Heim, Jacob Heim (these two were brothers of John and Gottlieb), Frederick Schafer, John Wagner, Jacob Guinther, Abraham Schiedt, Jacob Streile, Jacob Kurtz, John Kurtz, Ulrich Stabler, Abraham Wolf and Michael Stroble.

Other families came from time to time. Some became converts with the Dunkers, but many settled nearby and inter-married.

During the winter of 1804-05, Dr. Haller, Wendel Harmon and a number of the unmarried men began to look for land to purchase. Wendel Harmon was the financier in the group and the deed was made in his name. (This original deed is now in the possession of L. J. Ulmer.)

These men got in with Quaker land speculators, who abounded around Philadelphia at that time, and one Jesse Willits persuaded Harmon to buy a tract of about 422 acres called "Hopewell." This was located in what is now Loyalsock Twp., Lycoming County. Willits had bought the tract in 1794, paying four dollars. He deeded it to Harmon January 31, 1805, for about $1,500 ($3.65 an acre). Later a fair price for land in the same vicinity was $1.50 an acre. Those named in the title purchase were: John Heim, Gottlieb Heim, Leonard Ulmer, Michael Bertsch, Leonard Staiger, George Waltz, George Kiess and Ferdinand F. Scheel.

Harmon remained in the community until 1840. By this time he was in disrepute with several of his neighbors because of financial matters and was forced to leave.

It is interesting to note that these people had their choice of either river bottom or hill land, such as they chose. The river land was not heavily timbered, while the other was covered with dense stands of white pine towering from 100 to 150 feet (the last of these may still be seen just over the hill to the right of the cemetery). They were used to the hills in Germany and the lower ground did not seem as healthful to them. As a result they chose the hill lands and with them much hard work in clearing and farming.

The route taken by these early settlers from Germantown led through Reading and what is now Pottsville, Mt. Carmel and Bears Gap to Danville, the Indian trail was followed up to Mahoning Creek, after crossing the Susquehanna at Danville, through the Muncy Hills to the Loyalsock Creek. From there they followed the Sheshequin path to the end of their journey (some 12 or 15 miles). May 20, 1805, the colonists reached the summit of Quaker Hill hence they could look down into the valley where they were to make their homes. The sight they saw (it seemed an almost impossible one to some) was a valley turned almost white by the dogwood and rhododendron blossoms in full bloom. The almost spontaneous exclamation, "A Blooming Grove!" has remained the name of the community ever since.

These families built a long log hut where they lived together while the men cleared their own land and built cabins. This was very hard work and slow, with nothing but oxen and the axe to work with. First the trees were girdled and then cut. However, they found that their work was easier if the trees were cut green. The trunks were cut into lengths that could be handled by an ox team, put on piles and burned. Had these logs been sawed, boards three feet wide and twelve to sixteen feet long would not have been uncommon. Picking stone, clearing of underbrush and preparation for planting all took many days before the ground was finally ready for the seed. About this same time a rude hut of round logs was built on the lower side of the road from the present old Church building, in which Dr. Haller lived and served them as doctor, preacher and schoolmaster.

It was not long before the smoke of civilization was curling up through the trees from the fireplaces of the cabins. But work as they might, the frost came so early they could hardly realize that summer was over. The winter was so long and severe that the strongest hearts quailed for the sake of their loved ones. With a ready axe and plenty of trees they could easily keep the fireplace stocked, and their single-room houses comfortable. But sufficient clothing had not been provided for such hardship and exposure: The food supply became exhausted and starvation hovered over them for many long days.

After the season had settled in this, their first spring, so that men could be about, some of the strongest went by way of Indian trails (for there were no roads for many years) across the hills to Williamsport in search of food for their people. They did not come back empty-handed, but with liberal response to their appeal went also the information of the fishing grounds at the foot of Hepburn's Lane and also at Jaysburg (Newberry). Here each spring, the people from Blooming Grove came to lay in their annual supply of shad and other fish, which they salted down or smoked, for future use. They did not use firearms because of religious scruples until they were finally forced to or be destroyed by the wild beasts.

In that early day the streams would freeze to the bottom, the snow fell to a depth of several feet. Then hunger and thirst would drive the wild animals ravening for food, to capture or terrify the domestic animals, or even themselves. The panthers would scream from the treetops. (The story is told that one man, hearing such a scream, thought it was a fellow settler in need of help and answered several times before he realized what it really was and, just in time, shut his door and darkened the window, remaining quiet until the panther went away.) The wolves howled around their cabins at night, and in the daytime carried off the sheep. The bears would catch young pigs and upset the bee scaps for the honey. The foxes, owls, hawks, crows, minks, weasels and skunks would ravage their poultry yards. So, besides for protection, the use of the gun became indispensable in furnishing their supply of meat for many years.

What crushing toil consumed that first spring and summer a year after their arrival, and indeed many succeeding years, the people of today cannot comprehend. To cut down those great forest trees, with logging and hauling, burning and grubbing of timber that would now be worth a fortune. But then its prompt destruction was imperative that they might scratch up the ground between the stumps and scatter a little rye or barley (they knew nothing of corn), and so grow some grain for their families. The second winter was not much more comfortable than the first, though previous experience had taught them to prepare for what they might expect. But from that time on, their industry and frugality began to yield their reward.

The spinning wheel and loom became fixtures in each cabin. The women raised flax, which eventually came from the wheel as yarn or "fine twined linen." The wool from the sheep was fashioned into homespun garments or yarn for knitting.

There were, of course, many deprivations. Sugar was almost unknown. Once a year someone would come from Blockhouse with maple sugar. Each family purchased a pound or two. One of the sources of salt was from two wells about 20 feet deep, located on Wallis Run, west of Lycoming Creek. It was found that the brine from these wells yielded about one tablespoon of salt to eight quarts of water. The people went to the mouth of Lycoming Creek (about 10 miles) to get their grain ground. Pure white flour was a luxury to be used only when company was present. Other times whole-wheat flour and rye flour were used. The problem of footwear was a serious one. There were tanneries at Williamsport, and later at Warrensville (a distance of four miles). The settlers would take a load of bark and some hides to the tannery. They would leave these hides to be tanned for the half. The process took one year. During the winter the traveling shoemaker would go around to the different homes and, for 50c a day and board, make the family footwear.

As they had been accustomed to worshipping in secret in Germany, so in the early history of the colony they naturally gathered at each other's houses or barns for worship on the Sabbath. In harvest time they would go to Dr. Haller's on Sunday, take in his crops for him, and afterwards conduct a religious service at his house or barn, an incident that attracted no adverse comment. Dr. Haller was permitted to give his services to his people until they were settled bodily and spiritually. Then he was stricken with cancer of the throat and went to his reward.

About this time (1828) a new and larger house of worship was erected, against the slope of the hill opposite the old cabin. Its dimensions were, 30 feet wide, 40 feet long and 12 feet high in the square. It is built of flat hewn logs, with joints "chinked and daubed." The girders are counter hewn and the lumber all worked out by hand. It remains today just as it was when built, with the exception of the weatherboards, which were put on for the sake of preservation. The interior, however, has not been changed, even to the table used by Dr. Haller. Such splendid pine trees as afforded these logs extending the entire length of the building, with their broad hewn surfaces polished by time, are unknown to the present generations.

The long plain benches without back supports, testify to a race vigorous and robust, and who scorned any show of comfort or ease. To this building the people would walk, sometimes as far as six miles, carrying those children who were not able to walk, to the Sunday afternoon service. The older people would occupy the seats next to the wall; the women would occupy the section to the left of the speaker and the men to the right. After listening to a sermon that lasted over an hour, they retraced their steps back home. If the children went to sleep during the service they were laid on the floor under the benches until it was over. It was only very rarely that evening services were held. Then the candle holders hanging to the posts contained the candles supplying the light.

After the death of Dr. Haller in 1828, Gottlieb Heim was chosen to the sacred office. After him, in 1844, David Young was selected, then Christian Reisch; Frederick Weinman and Christian "Christly" Heim, who served many years until his death in 1878. After him, Dr. Adams, John Schaefer, Gottlieb Heim and Abraham Beidelspacher led in worship.

These Dunker people had no official organization, and kept no records; never united with any established body of believers, nor sent delegates to the Conferences. In fact, their preachers were not ordained at all, but acted on the united wish of the people, as their spiritual leaders, succeeding each other as they became too old and enfeebled to discharge their duties. Their purity of life and fidelity of spirit marked them as the highest type of Christian character to be found anywhere. So, as the old Dunker fathers gradually passed away, and not having provided the means for keeping the young people together, the followers have now joined other congregations, mostly the Baptists and Evangelicals.

CONTRASTS

Following generations of dwellers in Blooming Grove, born to the new dispensation, can contrast their present environment with that of their ancestors.

In 1804 there was but one public road in the West Branch Valley, and that ended at Newberry. All others were Indian paths brushed out enough to allow a horse to be led by the rein, and so called "bridle paths." There were no bridges over the streams. Many hairbreadth escapes and many drownings occurred in fording through the swift water. There were no railroads anywhere in the country for twenty-four years. There was no canal in the valley for 30 years. The settlers before them came up in canoes or on foot, as they did.

Their mechanical tools consisted of a clumsy pole axe, a sickle and a mattock, with which they cleared the land and harvested their crops. For a long time they did their cooking by an open chimney place in winter, and by a stump in summer. They heated large quantities of water, when required, by casting red-hot stones into sections of trees containing water. It was a day of luxury when the crane was first put into the fireplace, and another when the first iron kettle was brought into the settlement.

They used wooden platters until they could buy pewter or, as a luxury, German silver. The earthenware, made of common red clay, glazed with lead, was made in Jaysburg by Joseph King, and was used for platters, bowls, crocks, etc., for 50 years. They had no matches for 50 years, using the tinder box, flint and steel. They used pitch pine splints for light, and only the well-to-do had iron lamps for burning lard or other grease. They had no envelopes or postage stamps for 50 years. They had very few bake ovens for a long time. They carried their unbaked bread as far as two miles to an oven. It is remembered of the late Joseph Gross, that when a young man, he was sent with the dough to an oven, and in climbing a fence he lost his balance, and also his dough, which fell to the ground. He gathered it up, brushed off the dirt as well as he could, and took it on to the oven.

They had no horses for many years, using Oxen or hand work altogether. It is not a great while since the days when the mother would leave her children, and with a great basket of butter, eggs and produce balanced on her head, would walk the 15 miles to and from town to serve her customers or barter for the few store necessities which they required. Neither is it so long since the ox-teams brought in great loads of cordwood and piled it along the railroad track. Men armed with bucksaws, would cut it in two for the locomotives on 'the Williamsport & Elmira railroad, after the strap road and horses had been abandoned. It was not known then that coal could be used in locomotives.

The spinning wheel, the loom, the flax hackle, the sickle, the flail, iron lamp, steelyards and other household appliances are now exhibited as curiosities. The use of the sickle was supplanted by the grain cradle, invented by their ingenious English neighbor, Samuel Ball, in 1847. He first hunted in the woods for the naturally crooked sticks for the snathe and fingers, but when the demand for his contrivance became so great, he bent them by a steam box and form. These grain cradles are yet manufactured by the Balls and shipped to various parts of our land. It was a great day when the first yoke of oxen was trained to the plow, and thus gave rest to the mattock for loosening the soil.

To the next generations the speech and the written dialect will be obsolete, though a few still can speak it and read it. With their passing it will be gone.

EVOLUTION OF THE HOME

In Blooming Grove the first homes built were small, round log huts, the joints chinked and daubed; with puncheon floors or just the hard packed earth. A clapboard roof, held down with poles, open fireplace, the rude chimney built outside the hut. From a thinly hewn piece of white oak, set on edge, and resting on projecting stones within the jambs, they suspended their long hooks and trammels to hold their pots and kettles. The hot ashes and coals alone furnished means for cooking and heating. They had but one window, which was alongside the door, and was made of greased paper. The door itself was often the hide of some animal or a blanket hung on wooden pins.

As they became settled in some degree of comfort, they built new houses. These were larger than the first, with aloft, reached by means of a ladder inside, or in some cases, outside. After the walls were up, the irregular surface within was hewn flat, the joints closed by chunks of wood and clay mortar, then whitewashed, The more prosperous now introduced the swinging crane with hooks and trammels, as well as skillets, "Dutch ovens," etc. They now began to use "bull's eye" glass in their window, hung their doors on wooden hinges, with great wooden latches, "with the string always out," as was said in a spirit of hospitality. They would twist straw into rope and make bread baskets, bee hives, baby cradles, etc., by working the straw rope into different forms with white oak splints. Farming implements made of oak and mounted with iron, now came into use. Well made sleds and coopers' vessels supplanted the natural crook and dugout forms. When their log cabins were being built by the men, the women would walk several miles to the saw mill and carry on their heads or backs, the boards needed for the gables, floors, doors and other purposes.

The next advance was shown in the house of two or more rooms, chimney inside, board floors and shaved shingle roofs, hinges for doors and other iron work, such as stands for their stoves, nails, etc., all made by the blacksmith; also cellar and spring house of stone; the tin plate stove for heating in winter. In very small families they were used altogether and the fireplace abandoned. After a time the people began to cover their log houses with "weather boards." The new structures were made of hewn timber frames and sawed lumber, with store hardware. The log barn gave way to buildings on the same plan as the house.

Both men and women braided rye straw and made their hats for summer. They reckoned twenty-four yards of braid for each hat, which was formed over a block. In winter the men wore a long, conical knit cap of colored wool, with a tassel, which on special occasions, such as going to church or to town, was covered with a fur hat, such as were made then in Williamsport. Fred Biel, a cripple, is remembered as a straw hat maker.

SCHOOLS

The greater portion of the men who comprised this colony had the courage of their convictions, even unto death. They were deep thinkers, and extremely well educated. Many of them had been taught in the higher institutions of learning in Germany. As a result, they required their children, here in this sparsely settled community, to get an education, sometimes at great cost. Many of the children walked four miles morning and evening each day of the three months term in the bitter winter weather.

The first school in this region was established by the Quakers, on Quaker Hill, about the beginning of the 19th century. There was a school at Hepburnville in 1805, and later one on Christian Hill, east of Warrensville. But these were English schools and not sectarian. The Germans built their first school house as a mere hut, with open fireplace and oiled paper windows, near the present church, where Dr. Haller taught.

Dr. Haller was a highly educated man. Besides his native German, he spoke French, Latin, Greek and Hebrew. He not only taught this first school and served many years as the minister of their Church, but also administered to their medical needs. He was a severe disciplinarian. One day all the boys in school were soundly flogged because they played during the noon hour while he was absent.

Later a better building of hewn logs was erected near Wendel Harmon's, and afterwards called "Klump's School," from the name of the blacksmith nearby. It was arranged with the desks along the wall, with the pupils facing the wall, the boys on one side, the girls on the other, and the little children around tables in the center. The teacher's desk was at the rear of the room. The smallest children had a Primer from which they learned their letters, and the simplest combinations. They were then promoted to the "spelling class," then to the "Psalm class," next to the "Testament class," and finally to the "Bible class," after which their education was completed. The teacher would set them "sums to do," and write "copies" for them on foolscap paper, to be laboriously imitated with the goose quill pen. Three months in winter was the usual term of school.

These people were opposed to the school law of 1834. They believed the result would be an inferior school. They were afraid of the taxation that would come and also because it was designated that the English language was to be used. However, the law went into effect and an English teacher was put in charge. The Germans did not like this teacher and so started a school of their own at one of the farm houses. This was on the farm now owned by Fernando Heim. The cost of the school was divided among those using it.

Among those teachers who followed Dr. Haller were Michael Biel, Joseph Gross, "Christly" Heim and Gottlieb Heim.

This, then, was Blooming Grove, a community-homes, church and school-founded by sturdy, religious and well educated Germans, located in a valley between Quaker Hill on the east, Ball's Mills on the west, parallel with the West Branch Valley, and seven miles from Market Square, Williamsport, to the Dunker Church, "as the crow flies," north.

SPINNING AND WEAVING - (Written by Elma Heim Larimore)

Since weaving seems to have been one of the main occupations of the first Heims in this country. John, Gottlieb and their married brother Jacob all being weavers, I feel that perhaps a little about that art would be of interest. Jacob Heim was the last one of the Heim men to do weaving. His youngest daughter, Mary Heim Shafer, of Ridgeway, Ontario, still remembers how it was done. Also one of his grandsons, Jacob S. Heim, remembers a great deal of it. From these I have gotten the information for this story.

The flax seed was "broadcasted" over the ground in May and raked in with the hand rake. It grew from 12 to 24 inches tall, depending on the season, and had many pretty, pink blossoms. In September it was pulled in bunches called "wrists," because each bunch was to be about the size around of a person's wrist. These were tied and shocked up in little shocks till partly dried. Then they were taken to the house and kiln dried in a sort of oven of rocks out of doors, just as it was needed to work on, not all of it at once. When it was quite brittle, the seeds were removed by pulling the bunches of stems through a long toothed, steel comb. This was called a "heckle." All the flax seed was sold for making paint, except that needed for the next year's crop.

The stems were then put through a homemade machine called a "flax break." This breaks up the center core of the stem and leaves the long, tough fibers. These fibers were then pulled through a series of steel toothed combs, coarse, medium and fine, the teeth of which were about three or four inches long. This was done in order to separate out all but the very best long fibers. These were spun into thread and yarn. The thread was used for weaving and sewing and the yarn for knitting summer hosiery.

The spinning was usually done in the evenings by the girls and women. Some of the spinning wheels were handmade and many are still in the possession of the various families in Pennsylvania and Nebraska, though the art of spinning is lost. The weaving looms were sometimes handmade and some were bought. Jacob Heim did weaving whenever he had time to spare from his farm work. He did custom weaving for anyone in the settlement. In later years when cloth could be bought in the stores at reasonable prices he wove only the rag carpet. They often left the linen cloth the natural color, but sometimes bleached it. Also brown checked and blue checked cloth was woven, walnut bark being used for brown dye and indigo for blue. They never faded.

For the wool, they started by washing the sheep. The sheep were penned near a stream and were taken one at a time into the running water. The wool was rubbed and squeezed to get the dirt and burrs out of it. This was done in late May. When they were thoroughly dry again, the sheep were sheared. The wool was carded by hand at first and later was taken to the carding mill at Hepburnville. The wool was spun on a large wheel made for that purpose, not on the same one used for the flax. After spinning it was dyed and used for knitting stockings, socks, mittens and scarfs, and for weaving blankets and cloth for men's and women's winter clothing.

Jacob Heim's loom is now being used by Helen S. Fisher, daughter of Charles F. and Hannah Heim Fisher of Warrensville, Pennsylvania, and a great granddaughter of Jacob Helm. She uses it for making rugs and shopping bags.

APPLE BUTTER MAKING IN BLOOMING GROVE, PA. DURING THE 80's AND 90's.

When we see in the stores today the small jar with its fancy label marked "Home Made Apple Butter," we think, "What do you know about REAL homemade apple butter such as we had stored away in large gallon crocks in our childhood days," and a memory picture comes to me! How was it made?

Well, there was, of course, preparation for the making of it. First of all, the apples were gathered for cider and taken to a cider press, sometimes five or six miles away. Other times a hand press was used for small amounts. If possible, only sweet apples were used, the best ones being put aside for cutting into "snitz" for the apple butter. There were the "Rambos," the "Sheep hose" or "Gilly Flower," the "Seek-No-Farther," the "Smokehouse," and the "Bellflower."

For a large kettle of apple butter a barrel of cider was used, which was boiled down about one-third, until it was strong and clear. Usually this was done in a large copper kettle, placed over a furnace in the basement or wash-house on the same evening while the apples were being cut. If there was no furnace, it was done out in the open, in a kettle hanging from chains in a frame over the fire, and many smoky tears were shed till the work was done.

The evening of the apple cutting was enjoyed, especially by the young people. It was a social event in the neighborhood. Early in the evening, relatives who lived near, and neighbors came in to help. Grandfather and grandmother never missed one such gathering. They did their full share of work, as well as adding to the general fun of the evening. At our house we had a long table in the kitchen and all sat around it with dishes for the apples in front of them. For one barrel of cider they used two and a half bushels of pared and quartered apples, always saying, "five half bushels of snitz." We had what was then considered quite a modern convenience, an apple-peeler. Now this same peeler is found in the museum as an antique. The peeling was done by the older boys, my brother and a cousin. The girls who were old enough to cut apples usually gathered about one end of the table, while the older folks had the other end, and conversation of a more serious nature. Sometimes there was singing and the new songs then were, "Twilight Is Stealing," and "Over the Garden Wall." When we could sing "Nellie Was a Lady," and "Tavern In the Town" we were considered quite modern. Hymns too, were sung, such as "Bringing In the Sheaves," and "In the Sweet Bye and Bye." The younger girls, I among these, were kept busy bringing the peeled apples to the table and emptying the "snitz" into tubs out on the porch.

When enough apples were cut, it was nearing midnight. By this time the smaller children were asleep in the bed room, and grandfather and grandmother went home to bed. Then came the midnight lunch, bread, butter, coffee, new cider, gingerbread and of course, pie. After this came the real work of boiling. When the apples had been washed they were put into the boiling cider, just a few at a time. Then began the stirring, with abroad stirrer having a long handle. This had to be kept up steadily till the apples were all boiled fine and smooth. When it was nearly done it was rather hard work and it required two people to use the stirrer. And I think some of the young couples rather enjoyed this opportunity for a little chat. From midnight on I can't say I was an eyewitness, for we too, were sent to bed. But in the early morning the apple butter was done. Sometimes they waited till morning to begin boiling, and worked most of the day. The last thing, just before taking it from the fire, spices were added, and an expert knew just how much cinnamon, cloves or "fennil" to use. When apples were not sweet enough, sugar was added. It always tasted the same, and we knew the taste all too well, for it was a regular dish on our tables and found its way into school lunches. After the apple butter was pronounced done, the fire was drawn out and gallon crocks brought out to be filled. Whenever I see an old gray and blue crock marked with the trade-mark, "Cowden & Wilcox," or "Sipe & Son," it suggests "apple butter" to me. These crocks, too, find their way to the museum.

Next day, when they were cool enough, they were covered with white paper and stored away. It was common to make 20 or 30 gallons in a season if apples were plentiful. One boiling, such as I have described, would make from twelve to fourteen gallons. Some was sold to customers in Williamsport, for as much as fifty cents a gallon! This was one of the common practices in the Blooming Grove settlement. Not a family but what boiled its apple butter every fall. A few details might differ in the various families, but in general this would fit any of the Heims, Ulmers, Shafers and any of the others in this history who lived in Blooming Grove.

Gone are those days, gone the methods and gone many of those who were with us then. But we linger on and memory weaves many happy recollections for us which we want to share and pass on to those coming after us.

Notes for Georg Friedrich Gross:

Frederick Gross, a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, where he was born about 1765, immigrated to America in 1804. He secured 160 acres of land in Lycoming County, Pennsylvania, cleared and improved the same, and resided thereon until his death in 1820. In his native country he married Barbara Graff, and they were the parents of six children: Michael, deceased; Barbara, deceased; John, deceased, who married Dorothea Wagner; Christina, who married Jacob Scherer; Margaret, deceased, and Joseph, who married Christina Ulmer. Mr. Gross was a member of the Dunkard Church

History of the German Dunkards who Settled in Blooming Grove, Lycoming County, Pennsylvania in 1804 and 1817.

In the development of Christian civilization the doctrines of the reformers came into conflict with the demands of military service, and made outcasts of multitudes of the most intelligent and most useful of the inhabitants of Germany. The people of southern Germany have always possessed strong powers of endurance, great determination and patient, plodding perseverance. Harassed and tormented until the land of their ancestors became intolerable, they fled to a strange country. Here they hoped to "live apart from the world and its wickedness, and worship God with joy and fervor unmolested." The topography and climate of this part of Germany resembles in a marked degree the conditions in central Pennsylvania, so there has been a natural drifting toward this part of our country by early settlers.

The German Baptist Brethren denomination was organized in 1708 near Schwarzenau, Germany. Its members refused to go to war, would take no oath, were noted for their modesty of clothing, plain speech and distinguished hospitality. Because of this belief, John and Gottlieb Heim were imprisoned in 1803 for refusing to bear arms in the levies being made for Napoleon at that time. After a year in prison they were released upon their promise to emigrate to America. They at once joined a large company who thru religious scruples or dread of military service, were preparing to go to America.

They left Moehringen on June 9th, 1804, spending the first night in Vaihingen on the Enz. On the 10th they passed through Bruchsal to Langen Bruecken, on the 11th they reached Saxheim, the 12th Aller Heilige, and on the 13th Frankfort on the Main. They remained here until the 16th, when they took ship for Muinden. They set sail at 7 a. m., spending the night at Elsfeld, and continued on until noon of the 20th, when they arrived at Arnheim, Holland. After many delays they set sail on the morning of July 12th in the ship LULU, and landed at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, September 18th.

The story of the journey and voyage is briefly told by George Kiess, Sr., one of the parties, who kept a diary. It will be noticed in the record that the company of men, women and children were on the way for one hundred and one days, sixty-eight of which were spent huddled together on an overcrowded emigrant ship at sea. It can be safely inferred that they paid their passage including food, for they complained that "the food was poor, the water bad and the beer sour." In spite of this unsanitary situation and the terrorizing experiences, there were but two deaths, small children, and one child was born.

It is related that during the tedious days of the voyage, religious discussion occupied much of the time, often becoming very animated and intensely earnest. The result of this was a splitting into two groups with two distinct lines of thought. The division was over the adoption of celibacy as soon as it should become practical.

The party separated upon landing. The group favoring celibacy selected a leader and went to Butler County, and after considerable moving about founded what is the present town of Ambridge.

The second group spent the winter in Germantown while deciding upon the location of their colony. Their pastor and leader was Doctor Conrad Haller, who during his stay in Germantown the year before had become a Dunker, and although his company were Reformed Lutherans (but called Pietists), they were easily persuaded to accept this form of faith and practice, which was an easy transition, so that they came to Lycoming county known as Dunkers.

The colony of 1804 comprised the following named persons:

- John and Gottlieb Heim, bachelors
- Leonard Ulmer and family
- Leonard Staiger and family

John George Waltz and family
John George Kiess and family
David Young and family
Wendel Harmon and family
Frederick Gross and family
Michael Biehl and family
Ferdinand Frederick Scheel and family
Michael Burghardt and family.

In 1806 came:

Christopher Kiess
George Kiess
Michael Waltz, and their families.

From this time emigration was prohibited for ten years, after which time John Heim returned to Germany and brought out the following families:

Christian Heim, Jacob Heim (these two were brothers of John and Gottlieb), Frederick Schafer, John Wagner, Jacob Guinther, Abraham Schiedt, Jacob Streile, Jacob Kurtz, John Kurtz, Ulrich Stabler, Abraham Wolf and Michael Stroble.

Other families came from time to time. Some became converts with the Dunkers, but many settled nearby and inter-married.

During the winter of 1804-05, Dr. Haller, Wendel Harmon and a number of the unmarried men began to look for land to purchase. Wendel Harmon was the financier in the group and the deed was made in his name. (This original deed is now in the possession of L. J. Ulmer.)

These men got in with Quaker land speculators, who abounded around Philadelphia at that time, and one Jesse Willits persuaded Harmon to buy a tract of about 422 acres called "Hopewell." This was located in what is now Loyalsock Twp., Lycoming County. Willits had bought the tract in 1794, paying four dollars. He deeded it to Harmon January 31, 1805, for about $1,500 ($3.65 an acre). Later a fair price for land in the same vicinity was $1.50 an acre. Those named in the title purchase were: John Heim, Gottlieb Heim, Leonard Ulmer, Michael Bertsch, Leonard Staiger, George Waltz, George Kiess and Ferdinand F. Scheel.

Harmon remained in the community until 1840. By this time he was in disrepute with several of his neighbors because of financial matters and was forced to leave.

It is interesting to note that these people had their choice of either river bottom or hill land, such as they chose. The river land was not heavily timbered, while the other was covered with dense stands of white pine towering from 100 to 150 feet (the last of these may still be seen just over the hill to the right of the cemetery). They were used to the hills in Germany and the lower ground did not seem as healthful to them. As a result they chose the hill lands and with them much hard work in clearing and farming.

The route taken by these early settlers from Germantown led through Reading and what is now Pottsville, Mt. Carmel and Bears Gap to Danville, the Indian trail was followed up to Mahoning Creek, after crossing the Susquehanna at Danville, through the Muncy Hills to the Loyalsock Creek. From there they followed the Sheshequin path to the end of their journey (some 12 or 15 miles). May 20, 1805, the colonists reached the summit of Quaker Hill hence they could look down into the valley where they were to make their homes. The sight they saw (it seemed an almost impossible one to some) was a valley turned almost white by the dogwood and rhododendron blossoms in full bloom. The almost spontaneous exclamation, "A Blooming Grove!" has remained the name of the community ever since.

These families built a long log hut where they lived together while the men cleared their own land and built cabins. This was very hard work and slow, with nothing but oxen and the axe to work with. First the trees were girdled and then cut. However, they found that their work was easier if the trees were cut green. The trunks were cut into lengths that could be handled by an ox team, put on piles and burned. Had these logs been sawed, boards three feet wide and twelve to sixteen feet long would not have been uncommon. Picking stone, clearing of underbrush and preparation for planting all took many days before the ground was finally ready for the seed. About this same time a rude hut of round logs was built on the lower side of the road from the present old Church building, in which Dr. Haller lived and served them as doctor, preacher and schoolmaster.

It was not long before the smoke of civilization was curling up through the trees from the fireplaces of the cabins. But work as they might, the frost came so early they could hardly realize that summer was over. The winter was so long and severe that the strongest hearts quailed for the sake of their loved ones. With a ready axe and plenty of trees they could easily keep the fireplace stocked, and their single-room houses comfortable. But sufficient clothing had not been provided for such hardship and exposure: The food supply became exhausted and starvation hovered over them for many long days.

After the season had settled in this, their first spring, so that men could be about, some of the strongest went by way of Indian trails (for there were no roads for many years) across the hills to Williamsport in search of food for their people. They did not come back empty-handed, but with liberal response to their appeal went also the information of the fishing grounds at the foot of Hepburn's Lane and also at Jaysburg (Newberry). Here each spring, the people from Blooming Grove came to lay in their annual supply of shad and other fish, which they salted down or smoked, for future use. They did not use firearms because of religious scruples until they were finally forced to or be destroyed by the wild beasts.

In that early day the streams would freeze to the bottom, the snow fell to a depth of several feet. Then hunger and thirst would drive the wild animals ravening for food, to capture or terrify the domestic animals, or even themselves. The panthers would scream from the treetops. (The story is told that one man, hearing such a scream, thought it was a fellow settler in need of help and answered several times before he realized what it really was and, just in time, shut his door and darkened the window, remaining quiet until the panther went away.) The wolves howled around their cabins at night, and in the daytime carried off the sheep. The bears would catch young pigs and upset the bee scaps for the honey. The foxes, owls, hawks, crows, minks, weasels and skunks would ravage their poultry yards. So, besides for protection, the use of the gun became indispensable in furnishing their supply of meat for many years.

What crushing toil consumed that first spring and summer a year after their arrival, and indeed many succeeding years, the people of today cannot comprehend. To cut down those great forest trees, with logging and hauling, burning and grubbing of timber that would now be worth a fortune. But then its prompt destruction was imperative that they might scratch up the ground between the stumps and scatter a little rye or barley (they knew nothing of corn), and so grow some grain for their families. The second winter was not much more comfortable than the first, though previous experience had taught them to prepare for what they might expect. But from that time on, their industry and frugality began to yield their reward.

The spinning wheel and loom became fixtures in each cabin. The women raised flax, which eventually came from the wheel as yarn or "fine twined linen." The wool from the sheep was fashioned into homespun garments or yarn for knitting.

There were, of course, many deprivations. Sugar was almost unknown. Once a year someone would come from Blockhouse with maple sugar. Each family purchased a pound or two. One of the sources of salt was from two wells about 20 feet deep, located on Wallis Run, west of Lycoming Creek. It was found that the brine from these wells yielded about one tablespoon of salt to eight quarts of water. The people went to the mouth of Lycoming Creek (about 10 miles) to get their grain ground. Pure white flour was a luxury to be used only when company was present. Other times whole-wheat flour and rye flour were used. The problem of footwear was a serious one. There were tanneries at Williamsport, and later at Warrensville (a distance of four miles). The settlers would take a load of bark and some hides to the tannery. They would leave these hides to be tanned for the half. The process took one year. During the winter the traveling shoemaker would go around to the different homes and, for 50c a day and board, make the family footwear.

As they had been accustomed to worshipping in secret in Germany, so in the early history of the colony they naturally gathered at each other's houses or barns for worship on the Sabbath. In harvest time they would go to Dr. Haller's on Sunday, take in his crops for him, and afterwards conduct a religious service at his house or barn, an incident that attracted no adverse comment. Dr. Haller was permitted to give his services to his people until they were settled bodily and spiritually. Then he was stricken with cancer of the throat and went to his reward.

About this time (1828) a new and larger house of worship was erected, against the slope of the hill opposite the old cabin. Its dimensions were, 30 feet wide, 40 feet long and 12 feet high in the square. It is built of flat hewn logs, with joints "chinked and daubed." The girders are counter hewn and the lumber all worked out by hand. It remains today just as it was when built, with the exception of the weatherboards, which were put on for the sake of preservation. The interior, however, has not been changed, even to the table used by Dr. Haller. Such splendid pine trees as afforded these logs extending the entire length of the building, with their broad hewn surfaces polished by time, are unknown to the present generations.

The long plain benches without back supports, testify to a race vigorous and robust, and who scorned any show of comfort or ease. To this building the people would walk, sometimes as far as six miles, carrying those children who were not able to walk, to the Sunday afternoon service. The older people would occupy the seats next to the wall; the women would occupy the section to the left of the speaker and the men to the right. After listening to a sermon that lasted over an hour, they retraced their steps back home. If the children went to sleep during the service they were laid on the floor under the benches until it was over. It was only very rarely that evening services were held. Then the candle holders hanging to the posts contained the candles supplying the light.

After the death of Dr. Haller in 1828, Gottlieb Heim was chosen to the sacred office. After him, in 1844, David Young was selected, then Christian Reisch; Frederick Weinman and Christian "Christly" Heim, who served many years until his death in 1878. After him, Dr. Adams, John Schaefer, Gottlieb Heim and Abraham Beidelspacher led in worship.

These Dunker people had no official organization, and kept no records; never united with any established body of believers, nor sent delegates to the Conferences. In fact, their preachers were not ordained at all, but acted on the united wish of the people, as their spiritual leaders, succeeding each other as they became too old and enfeebled to discharge their duties. Their purity of life and fidelity of spirit marked them as the highest type of Christian character to be found anywhere. So, as the old Dunker fathers gradually passed away, and not having provided the means for keeping the young people together, the followers have now joined other congregations, mostly the Baptists and Evangelicals.

CONTRASTS

Following generations of dwellers in Blooming Grove, born to the new dispensation, can contrast their present environment with that of their ancestors.

In 1804 there was but one public road in the West Branch Valley, and that ended at Newberry. All others were Indian paths brushed out enough to allow a horse to be led by the rein, and so called "bridle paths." There were no bridges over the streams. Many hairbreadth escapes and many drownings occurred in fording through the swift water. There were no railroads anywhere in the country for twenty-four years. There was no canal in the valley for 30 years. The settlers before them came up in canoes or on foot, as they did.

Their mechanical tools consisted of a clumsy pole axe, a sickle and a mattock, with which they cleared the land and harvested their crops. For a long time they did their cooking by an open chimney place in winter, and by a stump in summer. They heated large quantities of water, when required, by casting red-hot stones into sections of trees containing water. It was a day of luxury when the crane was first put into the fireplace, and another when the first iron kettle was brought into the settlement.

They used wooden platters until they could buy pewter or, as a luxury, German silver. The earthenware, made of common red clay, glazed with lead, was made in Jaysburg by Joseph King, and was used for platters, bowls, crocks, etc., for 50 years. They had no matches for 50 years, using the tinder box, flint and steel. They used pitch pine splints for light, and only the well-to-do had iron lamps for burning lard or other grease. They had no envelopes or postage stamps for 50 years. They had very few bake ovens for a long time. They carried their unbaked bread as far as two miles to an oven. It is remembered of the late Joseph Gross, that when a young man, he was sent with the dough to an oven, and in climbing a fence he lost his balance, and also his dough, which fell to the ground. He gathered it up, brushed off the dirt as well as he could, and took it on to the oven.

They had no horses for many years, using Oxen or hand work altogether. It is not a great while since the days when the mother would leave her children, and with a great basket of butter, eggs and produce balanced on her head, would walk the 15 miles to and from town to serve her customers or barter for the few store necessities which they required. Neither is it so long since the ox-teams brought in great loads of cordwood and piled it along the railroad track. Men armed with bucksaws, would cut it in two for the locomotives on 'the Williamsport & Elmira railroad, after the strap road and horses had been abandoned. It was not known then that coal could be used in locomotives.

The spinning wheel, the loom, the flax hackle, the sickle, the flail, iron lamp, steelyards and other household appliances are now exhibited as curiosities. The use of the sickle was supplanted by the grain cradle, invented by their ingenious English neighbor, Samuel Ball, in 1847. He first hunted in the woods for the naturally crooked sticks for the snathe and fingers, but when the demand for his contrivance became so great, he bent them by a steam box and form. These grain cradles are yet manufactured by the Balls and shipped to various parts of our land. It was a great day when the first yoke of oxen was trained to the plow, and thus gave rest to the mattock for loosening the soil.

To the next generations the speech and the written dialect will be obsolete, though a few still can speak it and read it. With their passing it will be gone.

EVOLUTION OF THE HOME

In Blooming Grove the first homes built were small, round log huts, the joints chinked and daubed; with puncheon floors or just the hard packed earth. A clapboard roof, held down with poles, open fireplace, the rude chimney built outside the hut. From a thinly hewn piece of white oak, set on edge, and resting on projecting stones within the jambs, they suspended their long hooks and trammels to hold their pots and kettles. The hot ashes and coals alone furnished means for cooking and heating. They had but one window, which was alongside the door, and was made of greased paper. The door itself was often the hide of some animal or a blanket hung on wooden pins.

As they became settled in some degree of comfort, they built new houses. These were larger than the first, with aloft, reached by means of a ladder inside, or in some cases, outside. After the walls were up, the irregular surface within was hewn flat, the joints closed by chunks of wood and clay mortar, then whitewashed. The more prosperous now introduced the swinging crane with hooks and trammels, as well as skillets, "Dutch ovens," etc. They now began to use "bull's eye" glass in their window, hung their doors on wooden hinges, with great wooden latches, "with the string always out," as was said in a spirit of hospitality. They would twist straw into rope and make bread baskets, bee hives, baby cradles, etc., by working the straw rope into different forms with white oak splints. Farming implements made of oak and mounted with iron, now came into use. Well made sleds and coopers' vessels supplanted the natural crook and dugout forms. When their log cabins were being built by the men, the women would walk several miles to the saw mill and carry on their heads or backs, the boards needed for the gables, floors, doors and other purposes.

The next advance was shown in the house of two or more rooms, chimney inside, board floors and shaved shingle roofs, hinges for doors and other iron work, such as stands for their stoves, nails, etc., all made by the blacksmith; also cellar and spring house of stone; the tin plate stove for heating in winter. In very small families they were used altogether and the fireplace abandoned. After a time the people began to cover their log houses with "weather boards." The new structures were made of hewn timber frames and sawed lumber, with store hardware. The log barn gave way to buildings on the same plan as the house.

Both men and women braided rye straw and made their hats for summer. They reckoned twenty-four yards of braid for each hat, which was formed over a block. In winter the men wore a long, conical knit cap of colored wool, with a tassel, which on special occasions, such as going to church or to town, was covered with a fur hat, such as were made then in Williamsport. Fred Biel, a cripple, is remembered as a straw hat maker.

SCHOOLS

The greater portion of the men who comprised this colony had the courage of their convictions, even unto death. They were deep thinkers, and extremely well educated. Many of them had been taught in the higher institutions of learning in Germany. As a result, they required their children, here in this sparsely settled community, to get an education, sometimes at great cost. Many of the children walked four miles morning and evening each day of the three months term in the bitter winter weather.

The first school in this region was established by the Quakers, on Quaker Hill, about the beginning of the 19th century. There was a school at Hepburnville in 1805, and later one on Christian Hill, east of Warrensville. But these were English schools and not sectarian. The Germans built their first school house as a mere hut, with open fireplace and oiled paper windows, near the present church, where Dr. Haller taught.

Dr. Haller was a highly educated man. Besides his native German, he spoke French, Latin, Greek and Hebrew. He not only taught this first school and served many years as the minister of their Church, but also administered to their medical needs. He was a severe disciplinarian. One day all the boys in school were soundly flogged because they played during the noon hour while he was absent.

Later a better building of hewn logs was erected near Wendel Harmon's, and afterwards called "Klump's School," from the name of the blacksmith nearby. It was arranged with the desks along the wall, with the pupils facing the wall, the boys on one side, the girls on the other, and the little children around tables in the center. The teacher's desk was at the rear of the room. The smallest children had a Primer from which they learned their letters, and the simplest combinations. They were then promoted to the "spelling class," then to the "Psalm class," next to the "Testament class," and finally to the "Bible class," after which their education was completed. The teacher would set them "sums to do," and write "copies" for them on foolscap paper, to be laboriously imitated with the goose quill pen. Three months in winter was the usual term of school.

These people were opposed to the school law of 1834. They believed the result would be an inferior school. They were afraid of the taxation that would come and also because it was designated that the English language was to be used. However, the law went into effect and an English teacher was put in charge. The Germans did not like this teacher and so started a school of their own at one of the farm houses. This was on the farm now owned by Fernando Heim. The cost of the school was divided among those using it.

Among those teachers who followed Dr. Raller were Michael Biel, Joseph Gross, "Christly" Heim and Gottlieb Heim.

This, then, was Blooming Grove, a community-homes, church and school-founded by sturdy, religious and well educated Germans, located in a valley between Quaker Hill on the east, Ball's Mills on the west, parallel with the West Branch Valley, and seven miles from Market Square, Williamsport, to the Dunker Church, "as the crow flies," north.

SPINNING AND WEAVING - (Written by Elma Heim Larimore)

Since weaving seems to have been one of the main occupations of the first Heims in this country. John, Gottlieb and their married brother Jacob all being weavers, I feel that perhaps a little about that art would be of interest. Jacob Heim was the last one of the Heim men to do weaving. His youngest daughter, Mary Heim Shafer, of Ridgeway, Ontario, still remembers how it was done. Also one of his grandsons, Jacob S. Heim, remembers a great deal of it. From these I have gotten the information for this story.

The flax seed was "broadcasted" over the ground in May and raked in with the hand rake. It grew from 12 to 24 inches tall, depending on the season, and had many pretty, pink blossoms. In September it was pulled in bunches called "wrists," because each bunch was to be about the size around of a person's wrist. These were tied and shocked up in little shocks till partly dried. Then they were taken to the house and kiln dried in a sort of oven of rocks out of doors, just as it was needed to work on, not all of it at once. When it was quite brittle, the seeds were removed by pulling the bunches of stems through a long toothed, steel comb. This was called a "heckle." All the flax seed was sold for making paint, except that needed for the next year's crop.

The stems were then put through a homemade machine called a "flax break." This breaks up the center core of the stem and leaves the long, tough fibers. These fibers were then pulled through a series of steel toothed combs, coarse, medium and fine, the teeth of which were about three or four inches long. This was done in order to separate out all but the very best long fibers. These were spun into thread and yarn. The thread was used for weaving and sewing and the yarn for knitting summer hosiery.

The spinning was usually done in the evenings by the girls and women. Some of the spinning wheels were handmade and many are still in the possession of the various families in Pennsylvania and Nebraska, though the art of spinning is lost. The weaving looms were sometimes handmade and some were bought. Jacob Heim did weaving whenever he had time to spare from his farm work. He did custom weaving for anyone in the settlement. In later years when cloth could be bought in the stores at reasonable prices he wove only the rag carpet. They often left the linen cloth the natural color, but sometimes bleached it. Also brown checked and blue checked cloth was woven, walnut bark being used for brown dye and indigo for blue. They never faded.

For the wool, they started by washing the sheep. The sheep were penned near a stream and were taken one at a time into the running water. The wool was rubbed and squeezed to get the dirt and burrs out of it. This was done in late May. When they were thoroughly dry again, the sheep were sheared. The wool was carded by hand at first and later was taken to the carding mill at Hepburnville. The wool was spun on a large wheel made for that purpose, not on the same one used for the flax. After spinning it was dyed and used for knitting stockings, socks, mittens and scarfs, and for weaving blankets and cloth for men's and women's winter clothing.

Jacob Heim's loom is now being used by Helen S. Fisher, daughter of Charles F. and Hannah Heim Fisher of Warrensville, Pennsylvania, and a great granddaughter of Jacob Helm. She uses it for making rugs and shopping bags.

APPLE BUTTER MAKING IN BLOOMING GROVE, PA. DURING THE 80's AND 90's.

When we see in the stores today the small jar with its fancy label marked "Home Made Apple Butter," we think, "What do you know about REAL homemade apple butter such as we had stored away in large gallon crocks in our childhood days," and a memory picture comes to me! How was it made?

Well, there was, of course, preparation for the making of it. First of all, the apples were gathered for cider and taken to a cider press, sometimes five or six miles away. Other times a hand press was used for small amounts. If possible, only sweet apples were used, the best ones being put aside for cutting into "snitz" for the apple butter. There were the "Rambos," the "Sheep hose" or "Gilly Flower," the "Seek-No-Farther," the "Smokehouse," and the "Bellflower."

For a large kettle of apple butter a barrel of cider was used, which was boiled down about one-third, until it was strong and clear. Usually this was done in a large copper kettle, placed over a furnace in the basement or wash-house on the same evening while the apples were being cut. If there was no furnace, it was done out in the open, in a kettle hanging from chains in a frame over the fire, and many smoky tears were shed till the work was done.

The evening of the apple cutting was enjoyed, especially by the young people. It was a social event in the neighborhood. Early in the evening, relatives who lived near, and neighbors came in to help. Grandfather and grandmother never missed one such gathering. They did their full share of work, as well as adding to the general fun of the evening. At our house we had a long table in the kitchen and all sat around it with dishes for the apples in front of them. For one barrel of cider they used two and a half bushels of pared and quartered apples, always saying, "five half bushels of snitz." We had what was then considered quite a modern convenience, an apple-peeler. Now this same peeler is found in the museum as an antique. The peeling was done by the older boys, my brother and a cousin. The girls who were old enough to cut apples usually gathered about one end of the table, while the older folks had the other end, and conversation of a more serious nature. Sometimes there was singing and the new songs then were, "Twilight Is Stealing," and "Over the Garden Wall." When we could sing "Nellie Was a Lady," and "Tavern In the Town" we were considered quite modern. Hymns too, were sung, such as "Bringing In the Sheaves," and "In the Sweet Bye and Bye." The younger girls, I among these, were kept busy bringing the peeled apples to the table and emptying the "snitz" into tubs out on the porch.

When enough apples were cut, it was nearing midnight. By this time the smaller children were asleep in the bed room, and grandfather and grandmother went home to bed. Then came the midnight lunch, bread, butter, coffee, new cider, gingerbread and of course, pie. After this came the real work of boiling. When the apples had been washed they were put into the boiling cider, just a few at a time. Then began the stirring, with abroad stirrer having a long handle. This had to be kept up steadily till the apples were all boiled fine and smooth. When it was nearly done it was rather hard work and it required two people to use the stirrer. And I think some of the young couples rather enjoyed this opportunity for a little chat. From midnight on I can't say I was an eyewitness, for we too, were sent to bed. But in the early morning the apple butter was done. Sometimes they waited till morning to begin boiling, and worked most of the day. The last thing, just before taking it from the fire, spices were added, and an expert knew just how much cinnamon, cloves or "fennil" to use. When apples were not sweet enough, sugar was added. It always tasted the same, and we knew the taste all too well, for it was a regular dish on our tables and found its way into school lunches. After the apple butter was pronounced done, the fire was drawn out and gallon crocks brought out to be filled. Whenever I see an old gray and blue crock marked with the trade-mark, "Cowden & Wilcox," or "Sipe & Son," it suggests "apple butter" to me. These crocks, too, find their way to the museum.

Next day, when they were cool enough, they were covered with white paper and stored away. It was common to make 20 or 30 gallons in a season if apples were plentiful. One boiling, such as I have described, would make from twelve to fourteen gallons. Some was sold to customers in Williamsport, for as much as fifty cents a gallon! This was one of the common practices in the Blooming Grove settlement. Not a family but what boiled its apple butter every fall. A few details might differ in the various families, but in general this would fit any of the Heims, Ulmers, Shafers and any of the others in this history who lived in Blooming Grove.

Gone are those days, gone the methods and gone many of those who were with us then. But we linger on and memory weaves many happy recollections for us which we want to share and pass on to those coming after us.

Notes for Johannes Stollsteimer:

Perhaps greater solace has come to these people from the work done in connection with their churches than from any other source. The first few who came worshipped in the village with other Protestant people. But by 1832 feeling was strong for a church of their own. In that year, therefore, Jonathan Henry Mann, representing German settlers in and near Ann Arbor, sent a petition to the Evangelical Missionary Institute of Basel, Switzerland, asking that a pastor might be sent here.

In answer to that petition, the Reverend Frederick Schmid was sent to America, arriving in Ann Arbor August 20, 1833. He immediately announced that a service in the German language would be held in a little log schoolhouse in Scio Township, about four miles west of the Court House Square. When this service opened, nearly all the German people in Scio and Ann Arbor were there. This was the first religious gathering of Germans in Michigan Territory. Before the devotionals were over steps had been taken to perfect a church organization, and a date was set upon which more formal action was to be taken. During the last week in August a meeting was held in the home of Daniel F. Allmendinger, about two miles west of the village, and a religious organization created under the name of "The First German Evangelical Society of Scio." It was decided that a church building should be erected at the earliest possible moment. Mr. Allmendinger presented the society with an acre of ground, and on it, at a total cost of $265.32, a small frame building was erected. The list of members and non-members who contributed to the building fund offers accurate information as to the names of these early German settlers and at the same time it tells us who helped to perfect the organization of this pioneer society.

Among the nonmembers were David F. Allmendinger, Ludwig Mayle, John G. Koch, George Kleindop, Frederick Traver, Charles Schmid, John George Allmendinger, Emanuel Wild, Howard Eyley, Jacob Paul, Karl Hornung, George Gutekunst, Andreas Beck, Christian Auch, John Stollsteimer, Gottlieb Nordmann, Frederick Laubengayer, George Prussia, Salome Schweizer and Elizabeth Katherine Allmendinger.

The members of the church who contributed to the building fund were Daniel F. Allmendinger, Jonathan Henry Mann, George Straatmen, Jacob Markle, George Mayle, Christian Prussia, Abraham Kroman, Josiah Kroman, John Kroman, John Beck, Jacob Steffe, John M. Schneider, Jacob Stollsteimer, and the minister, Frederick Schmid. Twenty dollars were also given by the Josenhans family, who were still living in Stuttgart, and ten dollars were given by "a friend" living in Philadelphia. On the third of November, members of the "Evangelical Society" again met at Mr. Allmendinger's home and trustees of the society were chosen. The men so honored were Christian Prussia, John Beck and Abraham Kroman. They were to be known as the "Trustees of the First German Evangelical Society of Scio." After some discussion, it was decided to incorporate, so a record of the proceedings was filed in the Court of Washtenaw County under date of December 16, 1834.

History of Washtenaw County, Michigan: together with sketches of its cities, villages and townships...and biographies of representative citizens: history of Michigan. By Chas. C. Chapman & Co. Chicago: Chas. C. Chapman & Co., 1881. Page 356:

The following is from the pen of Emanuel Mann, whose father was one of the first German settlers in the county: It was in the autumn of 1829 that Frederick Schilling, of Weinsberg, and Jonathan Henry Mann, of Stuttgart, in the kingdom of Wurtemberg, in South Germany, crossed Lake Erie together in search of a new home in the Territory of Michigan. Schilling was accompanied by his family, consisting of wife, son and daughter. (Both son and daughter are still living at Sebewaing, Huron County. J. H. Mann left his family at Reading, Pennsylvania, with a view to move in the following spring in case he found a desirable location in Michigan. They were advised by Daniel F. Allmendinger, also a native of Wurtemberg, living near Dansville, New York, who had visited Michigan a short time before, to go to Washtenaw County, where said Allmendinger had already purchased Government land in the Township of Lodi. As there was some good Government land in the Township of Scio, Frederick Schilling purchased 80 acres on section in said township. J. H. Mann, a tanner by trade, concluded to settle in the village of Ann Arbor, and to move his family the following spring. On his return to Pennsylvania, he wrote a letter to his brother-in-law, Emanuel Josenhans, in Stuttgart, giving a very favorable account of what he saw of the new Territory and the route by which it could be reached by immigrants from Germany, from New York via Erie Canal and Lake Erie. Mr. Josenhans circulated the letter amongst the peasantry in the neighborhood of Stuttgart. The consequence was that numerous immigration was started for Michigan by a class of small farmers and mechanics who had very limited means.

J. Henry Mann with his family arrived at Ann Arbor in the first days of June, 1830, where he purchased a tannery of Harvey Austin. Said tannery was situated at or near where the present depot of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad is situated. During the following summer and fall the families of Jacob Paul, Jacob Stollsteimer, Carl Horning, Jacob Gross, Christian Auch and Daniel F. Allmendinger settled in Scio. George Mayle, a shoemaker, and Emanuel G. Wildt settled in Ann Arbor. In the winter of 1830 to 1831, Professor Gottlob Nordmann from Berlin, Prussia, arrived with his family. Mr. Nordmann, was Professor of Mathematics in a military academy and lost his place on account of his liberal political views. Mr. Nordmann moved in the spring of 1831 to Lima and became a farmer. During the year 1832, the following Germans arrived: William F. Osius, from the Granddutchy of Hesse, who immigrated to Pennsylvania in 1825, settled in Freedom. Mr. Osius was born March 21, 1797, served in the Germany army against the First Napoleon. He was for nine years Supervisor for the Township of Freedom and Justice of the Peace for 20 years.

John Schneeberger, John Hoberger, Thomas Roth, Jacob Haab, Jacob Haas and Martin Grauer settled in Freedom. Andrew Beck, with his sons, Jacob and Godfrey, David Luick, Frederick Staebler, Michael Kaercher, Jacob April, Frederick Laubengaier and Ulrich Laubengaier, Johannes Stollsteimer, Jacob Wild, Conrad Bissinger, were some of the first settlers in Scio.

In the summer of 1833, the Evangelical Mission Institute of Bale, Switzerland, sent Rev. Frederick Schmid as a missionary to the German Protestants in Michigan. A Church was organized and incorporated as the First German Evangelical Society of Scio. The first church building which the Germans in the Territory erected, was built by this society on an acre of land donated by Daniel F. Allmendinger for this purpose and as a burying ground. This building is still standing about two miles west of Ann Arbor, on the so-called territorial road. Rev. Frederick Schmid was for many years the only German Protestant minister in Michigan. He organized Churches in Detroit, Monroe and Waterloo in Jackson County. The foregoing were the pioneers of the German element, which now constitutes at least 30 per cent, of the population of Washtenaw County. In point of intelligence, in wealth, in all that goes to make up good citizens, those representing this nationality will compare favorably with others. In every station of life, as business or professional men, as office-holders, none bear a better reputation.

Notes for Karolina Stollsteimer:

Died at her residence in Marion June 11, 1891, Mrs. Caroline Boyden, aged 75 years. The funeral service were held from the residence Sunday at 4 o'clock, Rev. Cope officiating. Caroline Stollsteimer was born in Germany 1a 1816; came to this country when 14 years of age, and at 19 she married Alexander Boyden, In Webster, Washtenaw County, Michigan. The same year, 1835, they removed to the farm in Marion where they both spent the rest of their lives. An energetic business woman, she met the privations of pioneer life with great courage and ability and did her full share in carving from the wild forest one of the finest farms in Livingston County.

She was the mother of eight children and they only know the earnestness and self-sacrifice which she threw into the duties of wife and mother. Her husband died in 1874, leaving her a widow nearly seventeen years, and her only son, William, died in 1877, since which time she has lived with her youngest daughter, Carrie, on a part of the old place.

Notes for Caroline (Carrie) Boyden:

Mrs. Carrie Davis, the beloved wife of Milo Davis, died at her home in Marion, Wednesday evening, Nov. 23, 1898, aged 38 years, 10 months and 2 days. Although confined to her bed but one week, she had been a very great but patient sufferer for many years, waiting the Lord's time and departed without a struggle when He called. All was done for her that loving hearts and willing hands could do, but of no avail. She was a loving and devoted wife and mother, and a good, kind neighbor, loved the most by those who knew her best.

The funeral services were held at her home, Saturday, Nov. 26th, conducted by Rev. G. L. Adams, of Fowlerville, and attended by a large concourse of sympathizing friends and neighbors. Her body was laid to rest in Lakeside cemetery, there to await the glorious resurrection morn. May God bind up the bleeding hearts of those who mourn and help them to realize that their loss is her gain.

Ann Arbor - Four men were injured, three seriously, in a crash tonight Nov. 10, 1931 on the Pleasant Lake Road, nine miles southwest of Ann Arbor, when cars driven by Julius Fritz, Route 2, Saline, and Manuel Stollsteimer, of Pittsfield, collided. Fritz, 59 years old; Charles Stollsteimer, 58, a passenger in Fritz's car, and Fred Gutekunst, 55, a passenger in Manuel Stollsteimer's machine, were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, while Manuel Stollsteimer was hurried to a physician in Saline. It was said at the hospital that Gutekunst and Charles Stollsteimer are suffering from possible skull fractures and the latter has a fractured knee. Mr. Fritz sustained lacerations and chest injuries. Deputies said Manuel Stollsteimer, coming toward Ann Arbor, was on the right side of the road, but were unable to account for Fritz's being on the wrong side. Manuel and Charles Stollsteimer are unrelated.

Ann Arbor, Nov. 11, 1931 - Three men were in St Joseph's hospital here today, two with possible skull fractures, as a result of the crash last night between automobiles driven by Julius Fritz, Saline, and Manuel Stollsteimer, of Pittsfield. Kimbrell v. Rogers. - Hill in Equity for Foreclosure of Mortgage.

1. Limitation of appeal.—When an appeal is claimed within the statutory period (Code, §3619), and security for the costs is lodged with the clerk or register, the right of appeal is perfected, without regard to the issue or service of a citation.

[Kimbrell v. Rogers.]

2. final decree.—Under a bill for the foreclosure of a mort is (toil gage, the existence of any indebtedness being denied, a decree which declares that the complainant is entitled to relief, and has a lien on the land for any balance that may be found due on a statement of the account by the register, which is ordered, is interlocutory only; and the decree which, on the coming in of the register's report ascertaining the balance due, confirms the report, and orders a sale of the land for the satisfaction of the indebtedness, is the final decree.

3. Assignments of error, on appeal from final decree.—On appeal from the final decree in a chancery cause, errors may be assigned on all previous interlocutory decrees, but not on orders or decrees subsequently rendered, such as awarding a writ of assistance, or confirming the register's report of sale.

4. Husband and wife as parties to bill.—Since the passage of the statute now in force, February 28th, 1887 (Code, §§2341-51), the husband is not a necessary party defendant to a bill which seeks to charge or subject property belonging to the wife's separate estate; but, when the bill seeks to foreclose a mortgage on lands, in which the wife joined with her husband, in the form required for her relinquishment of dower, she is properly joined as a defendant, in order to bar her rights.

5. Description of lands in mortgage.—A mortgage conveying "the following described tract or parcel of land, to wit, the property known as Kimbrell's grist and saw mill and gin, together with all the privileges and appurtenances belonging thereto, is sufficient to convey two acres of land, on which the mill and gin were situated, which had always been used in connection therewith, and shown to be necessary to the enjoyment thereof.

6. Adverse possession by widow, ax against heirs.—When a widow remains in possession of her husband s lands, her dower not having been assigned, holding in recognition of the title of the heirs, and claiming only as widow, she cannot assert a title by adverse possession against an alienee or grantee of the heirs.

7. Errors prejudicial to some of appellants only.—When the final decree in a chancery cause injuriously affects the rights or interests of some of the defendants only, but they all jointly appeal, and join in the assignment of errors, such errors are not available to work a reversal: the parties injured should assign errors separately as to those matters.

Appeal from the Chancery Court of Marengo.

Heard before the Hon. Tuos. W. Coleman.

The bill in this case was filed on the 26th March, 1887. by William I). Rogers against Roland Kimbrell and his wife, Mrs. Sallie Kimbrell; and against Edward B. Rentz, Riehani E. Rentz, and Mrs. Alice MetJehee, a married woman, who were the children of Mrs. Kimbrell by a former husband; and sought to foreclose a mortgage which said Kimbrell and wife had executed to the complainant. The mortgage was dated August 7th, 1883, and purported to secure an indebtedness of said Kimbrell and wife to Rogers, evidenced by several promissory notes, aggregating $700; and it was signed and re<sup>u</sup>larly acknowledged by Kimbrell and his wife. The property conveyed by the mortgage was therein described as follows: "The following described tract or parcel of land, to wit: the [Kimbrell v. Rogers.] property known as Kimbrell's grist and saw mill and gin, together with all the privileges and appurtenances belonging thereto, situate, lying and being in the county of Marengo." The bill sought to condemn, as the property conveyed, two acres of land on which the mill and gin were erected, particularly describ<sup>e</sup>d by metes and bounds, on the ground that they were "ordinarily used in connection therewith, and are necessary to its proper use."

The mill was built on a tract of land containing about 133 acres, which had belonged to Benjamin Rentz, who was the first husband of Mrs. Kimbrell, and who was killed at the battle of Chickamauga, in September, 1863; the other defendants being their children. At the time of the death of said Benjamin Rentz, his wife and infant children were living on the tract of land, and they continued afterwards to occupy it as a homestead; but there was no allotment of a homestead, nor any assignment of dower to the widow. In 18<>7 Mrs. Rentz married said Roland Kimbrell, and he built the mill and gin a year or two afterwards, occupying the land with his wife and her children. On the 12th April, 1880, the three children, E. B., R. E. and Alice Rentz, the latter being then a minor, conveyed their interest in the tract to said Roland Kimbrell, by deed duly acknowledged on the same day, which was in these words: "Know all men by these presents, that in consideration of the sum of $<><> to us in hand paid by R. Kimbrell, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, we do jrrant, bargain, sell and convey to said Roland Kimbrell, the following describ<sup>e</sup>d real estate, containing 133 J acres," describing it; "to have and to hold to the said R. Kimbrell, his heirs and assigns forever. Witness our hands and seals," &c. During the year 1880 Kimbrell formed a partnership with W. D. Rogers, the complainant, in carrying on the business of the mill and gin; and on the dissolution of the partnership in August, 1883, the notes and mortgage were given to secure the balance ascertained to be due to complainant.

The defendants jointly demurred to the bill, on the grounds, (1) that Mrs. Kimbrell was improperly joined as a defendant, and (~2) that the husband of Mrs. Alice McGehee was a necessary party; but the chancellor overruled the demurrer, on each ground. Separate answers were filed by the defendants. Kimbrell and wife denied any indebtedness to Rogers at the time the notes and mortgages were executed, and assailed their validity on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation on the part of Rogers; and each denied that the mortgage was intended to convey any part of the land. Kimbrell asserted that he had no interest in the land, and intended only to con [Kimbrell v. Rogers.] vey the mill and appurtenances which he had erected; and Mrs. Kimbrell alleged that she refused to sign the mortgage until assured by the justice of the peace, before whom it was acknowledged, that it did not convey any land whatever; "that no land was mentioned on it;" and she also alleged that she had been in possession of the land, under claim of ownership, since September, 1803; and pleaded her coverture in defense against any personal liability on the notes. The other defendants, in their answers, each asserted their mother's possession of the land, and claim of ownership, from their earliest recollection; and as to their said conveyance to R. Kimbrell, dated April 12th, 1880, alleged that it was without consideration, and that it was procured at the instance of the complainant, who was then scheming to get the property; and Mrs. Alice McGehee alleged that she was a minor when she signed the instrument.

On hearing on pleadings and proof, the chancellor rendered a decree, January 18th, 1888, " that the complainant is entitled to relief, and has a lien upon the property described and conveyed by the mortgage, and is entitled to have said property sold to satisfy his said debt, or the balance due thereon ;<sup>12</sup> and he ordered an account to be stated by the register, to ascertain the balance due. On the 28th March, 1888, the register having made his report, showing a balance of $(547.18 due to complainant, the chancellor confirmed the report, and rendered a decree for the sale of "the following parcel of land," describing it by metes and bounds, "containing two acres, more or less, with the mill located thereon, and all the privileges and appurtenances unto said mill belonging." From this decree the present appeal was prosecuted, by all of the defendants jointly, and they here assigned it as error, together with the decree on the demurrer to the bill, and the decree of January 18th, 1888. The appeal was sued out March 28th, 1889.

The record shows, also, that the register sold the land on the 4th June, 1888, the complainant becoming the purchaser, at the price of $500, which he paid to the register; that the complainant, as purchaser, made application for a writ of assistance, the defendants having refused to surrender the possession on demand; that the chancellor granted the writ, by order dated July 2d, 1888, against the objections of the defendants; and that on the 16th October, 1888, the register's report of the sale was confirmed, the defendants' exceptions thereto being overruled, and a personal decree was rendered against R. Kimball for $333.37, the balance due on the decree with costs, after deducting the proceeds of sale. Errors were assigned on each of these decrees; [Kimbrell v. Rogers.] but the appellee submitted a motion to strike them out, and also to strike out the assignments founded on the decree, of January 18th, 1888.

Eugene Mccaa, for appellants. Tayloe & Johnston, contra.

McCLELLAN, J.—The decree appealed from was rendered on the 28th day of March, 1888. The respondents below prayed the appeal, and executed security for the costs thereof, on the 28th day of March, 1881). The undertaking to secure costs was approved and tiled in the office of the register on that day. The citation of appeal was not issued, however, until the following day, March 29th, 1881); and not served until April 2d, 1880. Upon this state of facts, it is insisted that the appeal was not taken within a year from the rendition of the decree, is consequently barred by the statute, and that appellee's motion to strike out the assignment of errors should be granted.

We cannot concur in this view. An appeal is "taken," within the meaning of our statute, when the party desiring to prosecute it has complied with the conditions upon which the law gives the right. The only condition precedent in this case was the filing with the register, within one year from the rendition of the decree, a sufficient undertaking to secure costs. This was done, and the right fully perfected within the time limited. Whatever else remained to be done, in effectuating a review of the case by this court, depended upon the discharge of duty by a public officer, and not upon any act of the appellants. The appeal having been taken on March 28th, it became the register's duty to cite appellee to its defense in this court, and make out and file here a transcript in the cause. The citation is no part of, nor does it constitute any step in, taking the appeal. Section 3631 of the Code demonstrates that it issues only after the appeal has been taken, and accomplishes its office, if it carries notice of the appeal to the appellee ten days or more before the day on which the appeal is returnable. The duty of the officer is fully performed, if the citation is issued in time to accomplish this purpose, as was done in this case.—Moore v. Spier, 80 Ala. 12!).

The decree from which the appeal is prosecuted, was the final decree in the cause. That of January 18th, 1888, was interlocutory. It adjudged that complainant was entitled to relief; that he had a lien on the land for the payment of any sum still due on the note and mortgage: and that for the sat [Kimbrell v. Rogers.] satisfaction of such balance he was entitled to have the land sold. Whether there was anything due on the mortgage, was a disputed question in the case. The indebtedness claimed was denied by the answer of R. Kimbrell. The issue thus presented involved one of the equities upon which complainant's right to relief depended. This issue of indebtedness vel non was not determined by the decree of January 18th, but was by that decree referred to the register, and the essence of the relief prayed—the sale of the land for the satisfaction of the mortgage—could not be, and was not granted, until after the coming in of the register's report, ascertaining indebtedness under the mortgage; the confirmation thereof, and the decree of sale of March 28th, 1888.—Earner v. Pruitt, 32 Ala. 13. The January decree was, therefore, interlocutory—it did not settle all the equities between the parties, nor fully adjudge the relief for which complainant prayed. That of March was final, and the appeal brings it and all previously rendered interlocutory decrees up for review.—Walker v. Crawford, 70 Ala. 567.

There was no error in the decree overruling demurrers for non-joinder and misjoinder of parties.

Under the act of February 28, 1887, which was of force when the bill in this case was filed, the husband was not a necessary party defendant to a bill filed against a married woman, seeking to subject or charge her separate estate.—Marshall v. Marshall, 86 Ala. 38.3. The theory of the bill is, that the lands embraced in the mortgage belonged to Roland Kimbrell. The conveyance having been executed by his wife, in the manner prescribed by the statute for the relinquishment of her inchoate right of dower, she was a proper party defendant to the suit to foreclose the mortgage, and cut off that right by a sale of the fee. Sims v. Nat. Com. Bank, 73 Ala. 248; McGehee v. Lehman, Burr & Co., 65 Ala. 320.

The mortgage in terms conveys "the following described tract or parcel of land, to-wit: the property known as Kiuibrell's grist and saw mill and gin, together with all the privileges and appurtenances belonging thereto, lying in Marengo county," &c. It was in evidence, that two acres of land, upon which the mill and gin were situated, had always been used in connection therewith, and was necessary to the enjoyment thereof. This land, we think, is embraced in the descriptive words of the conveyance, as "the tract or parcel of land known as the Kimbrell grist and saw mill and gin property."* But, were this otherwise, the land manifestly is appurtenant to the mill and gin, and essential to their reasonable use; and while, ordinarily, land cannot be said to pass as appurtenant to land, [Kimbrell v. Rogers.] if the land expressly granted does not admit of reasonable enjoyment without certain adjacent land, which has been constantly used with the land granted, it will also pass.—Woodman v. Smith, 53 Me. 81; Biddle v. Littlefield, 53 N. H. 508; Voorhees v. Burchard, 55 N. Y. 102; Euty v. Currier, 98 Mass. 502; Allen v. Scott, 21 Pick. 25.

The contention of appellants, that the mortgage is void, proceeds upon the assumption, that the land in controversy belonged to the statutory separate estate of Mrs. Kimbrell. The proof fails to support this assumption. On the contrary, there is no dispute but that the property belonged to her first husband, and passed to his heirs, who are defendants to this bill. Her claim to have acquired title by adverse possession, cannot be allowed. The evidence is free from conflict, that she at no time claimed to hold otherwise than as the widow of Benjamin Rente, and in recognition of the title of his heirs. Her only right, therefore, was to have dower assigned out of the land, and to occupy it until that could be done. This right lies in action only, and constitutes no estate in the premises. Beeves v. Brooks, 80 Ala. 26.

Whether her right to dower was barred by the lapse of twenty years from the date at which it might have been asserted (Barksdale v. Garrett, 44 Ala. 280), or whether, if still subsisting, it was, or could have been made, available in resisting the present bill, are questions which are not presented by this record, as will be seen further on, in such way as that we can consider them.

The land in controversy was sold and conveyed, in April, 1880, by the heirs of Benjamin Rentz, deceased, to the respondent, Roland Kimbrell. Two of the three grantors in that conveyance were of full age at the date of its execution. The third, Alice Rentz, now Alice McGehee, was a minor. That part of the purchase-money which belonged to the adults was paid. This deed, it is very clear, vested all the right, title and interest of the adult heirs in the respondent, Roland Kimbrell. The mortgage executed by the latter and his wife, it is equally clear, passed all his estate in the land conditionally, into the complainant. The decree foreclosing the mortgage, and ordering a sale of the land for its satisfaction, is certainly free from any taint of error which could prejudice or impair any right or interest of the adult heirs or their grantee, the defendant, Kimbrell. The plaintiff was, beyond question, entitled to have their interests foreclosed, and their estates in the property subjected to the payment of his debt. It may be conceded, that the undivided one-third interest of Alice McGehee did not pass by the deed of 1880 to Roland Kimbrell, because [Kimbrell v. Rogers.] of her disability of infancy, which is pleaded in this case, and that, of consequence, this interest did not pass by the mortgage to the complainant. It may also be conceded, without affecting the result of this appeal, that there was some outstanding property right in Mrs. Kimbrell, resulting from her survivorship of her first husband, which the mortgage was not efficient to convey. And as a deduction from these concessions, the decree may be admitted to be erroneous, in that it forecloses and orders to be sold the property rights of Alice McGehee and Mrs. Kimbrell. Yet, manifestly, the error in this regard affect only these two respondents. They alone have a right to complain of it, and to ask this court to reverse the action of the Chancery Court by which their rights are prejudiced. The error, if any, is without injury to the other appellants, and no reversal on account of it can be had at their instance.—Norwood v. M. d C. R. R. Co., 72 Ala. 603; Gilman v. J'r. O. d S. R. R. Co., 1b. 566; Walker v. Jones, 23 Ala. 448.

This appeal is taken and prosecuted by all the defendants below. The assignments of error in this court are made by them jointly. The decree appealed from involves no error injurious to the appellants, E.

B. Rentz, R. E. Rentz, or Roland Kimbrell. If it involves error working injury to the rights of the other appellants—an inquiry which it is not necessary to enter upon—they should have severed in the assignment of it. The former adjudications and settled practice of this court impel us to disregard assignments of error, made jointly by all the appellants, as to matters which are available, if at all, to some of them only.—McGehee v. Lehman, Burr d Co., 65 Ala. 320.

Those assignments which are directed against the decrees of July 2d, 18S8 (ordering petition for writ of assistance), and October 16th, 1888 (confirming report of register), must lye stricken out in response to motion of appellee. The record shows that no appeal was taken from either of these decrees. Atkinson v. C. d N. Railway Co., 34 X. W. Rep. 63; Horn v. Volcano Wate?* Co., 18Cal. 142; Bortiheimer v. Baldwin, 38 Oal. 671.

Affirmed.

Notes for George Washington Rentz:

George W. Rentz Confederate Soldier was born Nov 28, 1838, he died Nov 13, 1921. He enlisted Mar-1862 Linden, Alabama as a private in Company B, 43rd Alabama Infantry. Widow Rhoda Ann Rentz is buried in the Confederate Memorial Park Cemetery Chilton County. He is buried in the Sweetwater Cemetery Marengo County.

Linden - Died at a Selma hospital on Sunday morning, November 13, 1921, after a lingering illness, Mr. G. W. Rentz, aged 83. Burial took place at his home, Sweet Water, Alabama, the funeral being held from the Methodist church, of which Mr. Rentz was a member. The attendance was perhaps' the largest ever seen in the community as numerous friends of the deceased came long distances to pay the last tribute of respect.

Surviving him are a widow; one son, Mr. G. A. Rentz, of Myrtlewood, Alabama; two daughters, Mrs. G. F. Nichols, of Nicholsville, and Mrs. W. E. Rhodes, of Linden, besides seven children of a deceased daughter, Mrs. M. H. Mayo, also an adopted daughter.

Mrs. McMurphy, of Mobile. The parents of Mr. Rentz were German immigrants who came to this country in pioneer days, settling among the stately pines of South Marengo, where they established a home and reared their family. George Washington grew up a man of sterling qualities who never compromised with wrong or indulged in even questionable transactions, but through a long career led an honest, upright and blameless life. In the Civil War he served in the Confederate army doing his duty as a soldier and sharing the dangers hardships and privations of the men who wore the gray. He was devoted to his church his Sunday school, and his preacher, and never failed to contribute liberally to their support. As a tangible evidence of the esteem in which he was held by the community, a beautiful window was erected as a background to the altar of the church and dedicated to his memory a touching tribute of appreciation tendered while he was yet alive to receive and cherish it. He was an ideal citizen. The world is better for his having lived in it. His works will live after him he is immortal.

Linden, Dec. 29, 1921 - George Washington Rentz was born Nov. 28, 1838, and departed this life Nov. 13, 1921, lacking only a few days of being 83 years old. He was married twice. His first wife was Miss Nancy Miller, to whom he was married on the October 11, 1859. To the union were born four children, his first wife preceded him to the grave several years ago. His second marriage was to Mrs. Rhoda Corgill, April 12, 1906, with whom he lived in perfect peace and harmony until his death on above date. His parents, George and Margarite Akkart Rentz, came from Germany in 1833.

Brother Rentz was converted and joined the church at the age of twelve. He lived a beautiful consistent member of the same ever afterward. He loved his church and her ministers. He was ever alert for the comfort and convenience of his pastor. From early young manhood he served in various official positions in his church, and when he died. He held the offices of Sunday school superintendent, steward, and trustee. He was faithful and efficient in these relations to the church. He never missed any service of his church unless providentially hindered. One sentence of his prayer was for a "gracious revival of true spiritual religion that would result in genuine conversion of sinners, and the building up of the saints in the most holy faith."

He lived to see the manifestation of God's grace to men demonstrated over and over again, and it was especially true last spring whence attended his last revival on earth and saw his church again quickened with revival fires. Brother Rentz lingered several months before the end came. The writer had several talks with him during his illness, always with the assurance that he was prepared for death and ready to meet his Lord. "He sleeps in Jesus that blessed sleep, From which none ever wakes to weep." Bro. Rentz served during the Civil War and was wounded in the battle of Chickamauga, the scar of which he carried with him to the grave.

Besides a number of grand and great-grandchildren, the following; children survive him: Mrs. Annie Nichols, of Nicholville, Alabama; G. A. Rentz, of Myrtlewood; Mrs. Ella Rhodes, of Linden; a third daughter; Mrs. Willie Mayo; preceded him to the other world. We laid him away in the Sweet Water cemetery beside his former wife to await the resurrection of the just. We said "Good-bye;" but we shall see him again. His Pastor, D. L. Folsom.

The Sweet Water Cotton Gin at Sweet Water, Alabama (ginning for over 140 years)

Sources: The Rentz Lewis Family & The Thomasville Times

Sweet Water, Alabama is a small community located on Highway 10 in the southern part of Marengo County. The Sweet Water Cotton Gin has been a large part of the landscape of downtown Sweet Water for many years. Traveling from the east on Highway 10, the cotton gin is the first thing that you see as you enter Sweet Water. There are several large cotton storage warehouses located on the left side of the road and the cotton gin is on the right.

This Sweet Water Cotton Gin has been in operation for over 140 years. William Jefferson Lewis began it on a nearby family farm in 1870. The operation was moved to its current location in 1927. The Lewis family still owns and operates the cotton gin. The ginner after William Jefferson was his son, Norman Lewis, and then his son, Rentz Lewis, and the current ginner is Rentz's son, Will Lewis. Today, the ginning process is a joint effort of the Rentz Lewis family. Will Lewis manages the cotton gin. Sim Lewis, manages the farming operation which includes the planting and picking of the cotton fields. Matt Lewis manages trucking which includes transporting the cotton from the fields to the gin and transporting the finished cotton bales to customers.

The Sweet Water Cotton Gin was upgraded in 1997. This upgrade included the installation of a new metal structure directly over the old 1927 traditional looking tin-covered gin building. A section of the old building extends from the north side of the new building.

Notes for Henry Kunkel:

Oregon, Missouri, Feb. 7, 1873 - Henry Kunkel, the discoverer and owner of the great Artesian Mineral Well, near Mound City, was in town some days this week. His well is still sending forth immense volumes of valuable water that flow into Davis Creek and the Little Tarkio River. Many persons afflicted with various complaints, have been attracted to this well by its wonderful medicinal properties, and have become well in a short time. Mr. Kunkel wants to dispose of his farm and well to some parties who will build up and establish a watering-place at that point. The well was visited recently by a German chemist, who pronounces its waters fully as valuable for medical purposes, as those of the healing wells at Ems, in Germany, a place so often frequented by the Emperors and Kings of Europe. Anyone having some capital can make a fortune by purchasing Mr. Kunkel's property and fitting up the place for entertaining guests, the same as is now done at Saratoga, New York, and other points of note.

Started building a mill and had it in operation in 1849. Put up a woolen mill in 1861. He invented and patented several items of tools and "two different improvements on washing machines. His washing machine has taken the premium at every fair (exhibit), including the highest award at the great Centennial exhibition, at Philadelphia, and is doubtless the best thing of the kind ever invented." Wife died September 1853. Married Elizabeth Hener of Holt Co, Missouri August 16, 1856. Had 6 children by each marriage. He has always been a strong Republican.

Washing Machine. No. 319,589. Patented June 9, 1885.

Daniel Kunkel, Sr., of Oregon, Missouri.

Washing-Machine. Specification forming part of Letters Patent No. 319,589, dated June 9, 1885.

Application filed May 13, 1884. (No model.)

To All whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, Daniel Kunkel, Sr., a citizen of the United States, residing at Oregon, in the county of Holt and State of Missouri, have invented a new and useful Washing-Machine, of which the following is a specification, reference being had to the accompanying drawings. This invention has relation to rocker washing-machines; and it consists in the construction and novel arrangement of parts, as will be hereinafter fully described, and particularly pointed out in the claims.

Figure 1 is a View in perspective of a washing-machine embodying my improvements in the position to be rocked to effect the operation of washing. Fig. 2 is a vertical longitudinal section on the line main Fig. 1. Fig. 3 is a side elevation taken from the side provided with the adjustable steadying-legs, and Fig. 4 is a bottom plan View of the machine. Referring by letter to the accompanying drawings, A designates the suds-box, which has vertical sides and ends B and G, and a flat zinc-lined bottom, D, provided at its middle with a stationary corrugated rubber, E. The top of the suds-box A is closed, and is provided at its middle portion with a removable lid, F, held in place at one end by a crossbar, G, and at the other end by a button, H. The cross-bar G also serves for attaching the wringer to the machine when wringing out the clothes, the suds-box serving as the tub.

The suds-box A is mounted on rockers I I, and is provided with handles K K, by which to impart the rocking motion to it. The rockers and suds-box are connected by vertical cleats L L on one side of their faces, and vertical cleats M M N N on their other faces. The cleats M N are arranged in pairs to form guides for the perforated and notched vertically-adjustable legs O O. The legs O O are kept in their respective grooves O O by cross strips P, secured to the outer faces of cleats M N. Screws Q Q, in the notches Q Q of the legs O O limit the vertical adjustment of the legs O O in their grooves, and pins R, passed through perforations R near their upper ends, hold the legs to either their projected or retracted adjustments, as may be desired. When the legs are retracted, the machine may be rocked; but when they are projected from their grooves or guides below the rockers the machine is held steady, as when wringing the clothes, or when for any reason it is desired that the machine should remain stationary.

To the outer face of the rocker, opposite the legs O O, is secured a spring-bar, S, which is intended to prevent the machine from rocking over on end, and to break the swing of the same. Between the rockers I I and pivoted on a shaft, I, having its bearings in said rockers, are two hangers or arms, T T, the lower ends of which form the bearings for a shaft, U, which forms the axle on which two small wheels, V V, revolve when they are let down in contact with the floor. Between these wheels V V is an arm fl V, pivoted to the shaft U and bifurcated at its other end and pivoted to the lower end of a lever, X, fulcrumed on a shaft, Y, in bearings Z Z on one end of the suds box. The lever X may be locked either against the end of the suds-box or away from it by a locking-rod, Z, passed through lateral perforations in the bearings Z Z near their upper ends. When the upper end of the lever X is locked in against the end of the suds box, the wheels V V will be up off the floor. When locked in the position away from the end of the suds-box, by inserting the locking bar Z between the suds-box and the upper end of the lever X the wheels will be on the floor and the machine may be rolled from the room.

In operation the goods are thrown from end to end of the machine over the rubber and through the water, thereby forcing the water contained in the suds-box through the goods and removing all of the dirt from the clothes. This machine is simple in construction, is easily operated, and is thoroughly effective in operation. Having thus fully described my invention, what I claim as new, and desire to secure by Letters Patent of the United States, is

1. The combination of the suds-box mounted on rockers, and having the corrugated rubber in its bottom, the spring-bar attached thereto, the handles, and the vertically-adjustable legs working in guides at one side of the machine, substantially as described.

2. The combination, with the sudsbox A, 1o perforations R, substantially as specified. I mounted on rockers I I, of the vertically-ad- In testimony that I claim the foregoing as justable legs working in guides at one side of my own I have hereto affixed my signature in the machine, substantially as specified. presence of two witnesses.

3. The combination, with the suds-box and rockers, provided with cleats M N, arranged in pairs on one side of the machine, the crossstrips 1?, and screws Q Q, of the legs O O, having notches Q Q and perforations 1%, working between the cleats M N, and the pins R for the DANIEL KUNKEL, SR.

Notes for Caroline Strouse:

Oregon, Missouri – Caroline Strouse-Kunkel was born in Seneca County, New York, October 12, 1826. In 1837 she moved with her parents to Seneca County, Ohio, where she was married to Noah Kunkel, November 13, 1844. Shortly after their marriage they moved to Holt County, Missouri, where they lived until June, 1867, at which time they settled on a homestead in Republic County, Kansas, where they resided until 1886, when they moved to their property in Wayne, Kansas. Mrs. Kunkel was converted when 16 years old: joined the Evangelical church at 20 years of age, and remained a faithful worker in church, missionary and temperance work until her health failed her in December, 1894. She departed this life November 7, 1896, at 12:45 o'clock at the age of 70 years and 25 days, entering upon her long desired and looked for eternal rest.

Her funeral sermon was preached by Rev. E. A. Bruner in the Evangelical church in Wayne, Kansas, from Second Corinthians, 5th Chapter, 1st verse. A large concourse of friends accompanied her remains to the Wayne cemetery where she was laid away. She leaves a husband and five children to mourn the loss of a faithful wife and kind mother.

Notes for Jordan Marbourg:

Alleged Infidelity of a Wife - Summary Vengeance by the Husband 1864, Cambria, Pennsylvania

On Friday morning a week, a shocking tragedy occurred in Johnstown, Cambria County, Pennsylvania, in which two old and influential citizens were the participants. The particulars, as given in the Pittsburg papers, are as follows:

Mr. Joseph Moore, an auctioneer, of Johnstown, on her recent return from nine months service in the army, ascertained that his domestic happiness had been destroyed, it is alleged by Mr. Jordan Marbourg, a wealthy merchant of the town.

On hearing of the intimacy said to exist during his absence between Marbourg and Mrs. Moore, who is represented as prepossessing in appearance and of a dashing disposition, Moore called upon the former, and after an explanation, told him he would shoot him. Mrs. Marbourg, hearing of Moore's threats, appealed to him not to take her husband's life, but the outraged husband would not listen to her.

On Friday morning, Moore arose early, and, leaving his house, visited a grocery store near the postoffice, where he remained between eight and nine o'clock, when Marbourg passed by Moore started out immediately and caught Marbourg by the collar, saying "Get down on your knees, I am going to kill you. My wife made a "clean breath of it last night. She told me all, and gave me a portion of the money which you paid her." Saying this, he drew a revolver and fired - the first shot taking effect in the region of the heart.

Marbourg fell forward, and Moore discharged two balls into his head, and then fired a fourth which took effect in the left arm. Marbourg fell over and almost instantly expired. Moore walked to a magistrate's office, surrendered himself, and was committed to jail to await the action of the authorities.

The deceased man leaves a most estimable wife and eight or nine children - the eldest, a son, about twenty years of age. The murderer has a wife and one child. He was personally popular with all classes, a perfect gentleman in his dress and manner, and was not without influence in the community. The deceased was a prominent citizen, a merchant of Johnstown for thirty years, and had accumulated a large fortune. Both of them were members of a church.

Mrs. Moore, has already been remarked, is a woman not wanting in personal charms. Of late years, her husband, although attentive to business, has not been pecuniarily a well-doer, and it may be the desire for more than her husband could furnish, her, coupled with the charms alluded to, has been the cause of her fall, if, fallen she has. Mrs. Marbourg, who is a most accomplished woman, is a native of Philadelphia.

INDICTMENT for murder. P. S. Noon, District Attorney, E. B. Foster, James Potts, and A. Kopelin, for the Commonwealth. John Scott, B. G. Childs, C. L. Pershing, B. McLaughlin, and R. L. Johnston, for the prisoner.

The facts are sufficiently detailed in the charge to the jury by TAYLOR, P. J.—Joseph Moore, the prisoner at the bar, is charged in the indictment which you have been sworn to try, with the murder of Jordon Marbourg. The case requires of this court, and of you, gentlemen of the jury, the discharge of the most solemn and responsible duty ever cast upon a court and jury. The life of this unfortunate prisoner, on the one hand, and, on the other, the maintenance of the law made and ordained to shield and protect life, are committed to us; and the discharge of our respective duties to the one and to the other, is required of us alike, according to our best judgment, under the solemn sanction of an oath. It is our duty to state to you the law, and to indicate the questions for your decision which arise in its application. It is your duty to apply the law, as you receive it from the court, to the facts in evidence, as you have received them from the witnesses, and heard them discussed by counsel, and so make up your verdict. We have written and pondered every word we have to say to you; and it is our earnest prayer that you may be guided to conclusions which will discharge the solemn obligations of the oath taken by you all when you entered that box, and result in "a true deliverance between the Commonwealth and the prisoner."

Murder, as defined by the common law, is committed, "when a person of sound memory and discretion, unlawfully killeth any reasonable creature in being, and in the peace of the Commonwealth, with malice prepense or aforethought, either express or implied." "A person of sound memory and discretion" is one who has sufficient knowledge to know and understand the nature of the act, and that it is a violation of his moral and social duty, and will subject him to punishment. But everyone is presumed by the law to be sane, and to possess this measure of understanding, and he is responsible for his acts, unless this presumption be overcome by facts and circumstances disclosed in the proof of the principal fact, or shown by affirmative evidence in the defense. Malice, in its legal, as distinguished from the popular sense of the word, does not mean spite or malevolence against the deceased in particular, but that the fact has been attended with such circumstances as the ordinary symptoms of a wicked, depraved and malignant spirit; a heart regardless of social duty, and fatally bent on mischief. It is either express or implied. Express malice is when the killing is with a sedate, deliberate mind, with formed design manifested by external circumstances, such as previous threats or menaces, former grudges, and concerted schemes to do the party bodily harm. Implied or legal malice means that the fact has been attended with such circumstances as carry with them the plain indication of a malevolent spirit. The law implies malice in every deliberate cruel act committed by one person against another, however sudden. Every unlawful killing is therefore murder, unless it be shown to be a less offence, or no offence at all.

This is murder at common law, and this is murder in Pennsylvania. Our statutes furnish no new definition of the crime. What was murder at common law is still murder; but our statute, for the purpose of more just punishment, distinguishes between different acts of malicious homicide, and divides murder into murder of the first and murder of the second degree. It is in the language of Act of 22d of April, 1794, re-enacted in the Act of 31st March 1860, that "all murder which shall be perpetrated by means of poison, or lying in wait, or by any other kind of willful, deliberate and premeditated killing, or which shall be committed in the perpetration of, or attempt to perpetrate any arson, rape, robbery or burglary, shall be deemed murder in the first degree, and all other kinds of murder shall be deemed murder in the second degree; and the jury before whom any person indicted for murder shall be tried shall, if they find such person guilty thereof, ascertain in their verdict whether it be murder of the first or second degree."

The duty is imposed on the jury, when they find the prisoner guilty, of discriminating between the two degrees of murder, in the verdict. It is not difficult, usually, to recognize the murders in the first degree, here specifically defined; but more difficulty has arisen in determining whether a particular murder is included in or described by "any other kind of willful, deliberate, and premeditated killing." This phraseology evidently means a degree of deliberation similar to that indicated in the defined cases of "murder perpetrated by means of poison or lying in wait; and from the case of Mulatto Bob, 4 Dallas 145, tried by Chief Justice McKean, soon after the passage of the Act of 1794, down to the present day, the uniform judicial construction has been, that whenever there plainly appears to have been a formed design, or a specific intent, however suddenly formed, to take life, it is murder of the first degree. When such design, or intent to kill, is not shown beyond a reasonable doubt, or when there is a reasonable doubt whether the murderer, when the mortal wound was inflicted, intended anything more than to do great bodily harm, it is murder in the second degree. The test inquiry is, did the prisoner, at the time, deliberately aim at life, and intend to kill?

A response to this inquiry must be given by the jury, from all the evidence. Such deliberation and design may be shown—and it is for the Commonwealth always to make it out beyond a reasonable doubt—by express evidence of such design, or by circumstances and conduct which necessarily imply it. It may be an irresistible inference from the weapon used, and the manner of its use. If, for example, he deliberately aim a loaded pistol at the head or breast of another, and discharge it; or if, with deliberate aim, he cleave the skull with an axe, it could not admit of a moment's doubt that he intended to kill. And if he had time to deliberate and form such design, though but for a minute, and did so, it is a "willful, deliberate, and premeditated killing," and murder of the first degree. This has been the uniform construction of our statute; and, with the report of the commissioners to revise the penal code before them, that they had made "no attempt to interfere with the law of murder as it has existed since the Act of 1794," for the reason that it had "been so thoroughly considered, and its construction and its meaning so entirely settled by a long course of judicial decisions," the legislature, in 1860, adopted, without the change of a word, the old statute.

A homicide, indicted as murder, may be reduced to manslaughter, by evidence which rebuts the presumption of malice; or to no offence at all, by evidence showing it to be justifiable or excusable.

Manslaughter is the unlawful killing of another without malice. It is a killing which usually happens in a sudden heat and quarrel, and upon sufficient provocation. The law, from tenderness to human infirmity, considers a homicide committed in passion, upon what it judges sufficient provocation, as committed without malice, and therefore, only manslaughter. Provocation, without passion, or passion without provocation, is not sufficient for the purpose. And provocation, such as will avail for the purpose, has a defined legal signification. No breach of a man's word, no trespass to his lands or goods, no insult by words, no matter how provoking or insulting they may be, will free a party killing from the guilt of murder. And this is especially true where the party killing upon such provocation, makes use of a deadly weapon. "This is most wisely settled," as Judge King remarks in The Commonwealth v. Green, 1 Ash. 297; "for dreadful would be the state of society in which the law would listen as an apology for taking human life, to such notions of insult or provocation as a licentious and ill-governed spirit would give rise to."

This is the law of homicide, so far as it is necessary to state it, at least at present, in this case; and we now turn to the evidence to which the law is to be applied. The testimony of the many witnesses proving the homicide, which is not denied, presents, as was properly remarked by one of the prisoner's counsel, no conflict, except that slight discrepancy in the statement of details which is always to be expected when several undertake to describe an exciting transaction. We learn from them, that on the morning of the 12th of February, about eight o'clock, the prisoner, who, as it appears by other evidence, had been informed by his niece, living with him, of a report in circulation about his wife and the deceased, the truth of which he had in the meantime been industriously engaged in investigating, was observed standing at Frazer's corner (in view of the house of Jordan Marbourg, the deceased, and the post-office, in Johnstown), looking one way, and the other, and noticeably excited. From there he walked to Mr. Wehn's store, and upon Mr. Wehn's invitation, went in and sat down, and remained there about half an hour. During that time, Mr. Wehn was reading or talking to him, though he appeared to pay no attention, but seemed to be steadily looking towards the street through the glass door. He then rose up and went out. Mr. Wehn, who had seen Marbourg, pass, followed to the door, and says that when he came to the door, he saw Marbourg coming out of the post-office, and saw the prisoner catch hold of his coat collar. About this time the noise attracted the attention of a number of other witnesses, who all give substantially the same account of the horrid occurrence which followed, with some discrepancy respecting the expressions used, the order and turn in which they were made, and perhaps, some other unimportant details. We gather from all their statements that the prisoner caught and held the deceased by the collar with his left hand, brandishing a pistol which he held in his right hand, over his head, and pushing him back against the building, and drawing him out from it, at one time striking him on the forehead a slight tap with the pistol. Before he took the pistol out of his pocket and afterward, he accused the deceased with having seduced his wife when he was in the army fighting for his country; with having ruined his family; that his wife had confessed all that morning; told him to get down on his knees and confess, or repent; said that he would be justified in shooting him, but hated to have his blood on his soul. His appearance is described as wild and excited, his manner violent and boisterous, and his language profane. During this time, the deceased made no resistance, seemed to be paralyzed, and in a subdued or low tone was denying the charge. At length, at some expression made by the deceased, the prisoner became more excited, let go his hold, stepped back, brought the pistol down to a level with the head of Marbourg, aimed, and fired the pistol. Five shots were fired all of which took effect, one of them, which lodged in the brain, being sufficient, as Dr. Lowman testifies, to have produced instant death. This altercation lasted about one and a-half or two minutes. The prisoner, after the shooting, put the pistol in his pocket, took off his hat and walked away some distance, talking aloud, and to no one in particular. Dr. Jackson said to him, "Joe, that's a terrible revenge;" he replied "he had ruined him and his family." To another, at the same time, he stated that he could not help it. Soon afterwards he went to the office of Irvin Rutledge, Esq., and said he had come to surrender himself into the hands of the law. This is an outline of the evidence as it describes the homicide. You have heard it all from the stand, and heard much of it read and frequently referred to in the argument. Your recollection will supply the various and varied expressions of the prisoner and the deceased during the altercation, and the language used by the witnesses in describing their appearance and manner. It will be remembered that Levi B. Cohick, testifies that on Saturday, the prisoner, when engaged in ferreting out the report, made the remark that if it was true, he could settle the matter between him and Marbourg in a very few minutes, and on Monday " he told me that if the report was true, he would shoot Marbourg in one or two minutes." Thompson Kimmell testifies that about the 6th of February the prisoner remarked to him that it was bad enough, and that if it was true, he could settle with Marbourg in a minute. He turned to Marbourg and said "if this report was true, he would kill him in two minutes—he would come Sickles over him." Captain Hite testifies that on Friday, 5th February, the prisoner, in a conversation with him, said ".if he found they were guilty—he was rather under the impression it was a slander upon his wife—but if he found Marbourg guilty, by the eternal God he would kill them dead in their tracks." The witness understood him to say in this connection, that if he found it to be a slander, or that they were guilty, he would kill either.

This simple statement of the undisputed facts, in view of the law as we have given it to you, gentlemen of the jury, discloses, beyond any room for reasonable doubt, if the prisoner was at the time responsible, a willful, deliberate, premeditated killing.

The defense, as stated in the opening argument for the prisoner, is two-fold:

"First, that the homicide was justifiable, under all the circumstances.

"Second, that the defendant was not a responsible agent."

1. Upon the first proposition here stated, it is surely unnecessary to dwell a minute. We are surprised, indeed, to hear it asserted or hinted even, here, whatever might be said elsewhere, that, if the prisoner was at the time a responsible agent, this is, or in any possible view of it could be, a justifiable homicide. Justifiable! There is no ground for a reasonable doubt that the prisoner acted at the time under the belief that the deceased had committed adultery with his wife; or that he had sufficient reason for that belief. Judging from his terrible earnestness when he uttered it, added to the evidence of the guilty intimacy which he had discovered, and of course involving her, it is no doubt true, as he said, that she had "confessed it." But if he had caught them in the very act, and instantly killed Marbourg, it will not be claimed surely, that our law would hold him guiltless. It would not have been justifiable homicide. That would have such a provocation as would have reduced the killing to manslaughter. That is all. But he would still be guilty of manslaughter. We are told that the Jewish law punished adultery with death; but that is not the law of Pennsylvania. This court, and you, gentlemen, have not been sworn to administer the municipal law of the Jews. Our law has not made adultery a capital offence; how could it justify the infliction of that penalty? Or, if that were the penalty, how could it justify any injured party in taking the law into his own hands; becoming the prosecutor, court, jury, and executioner, and in sending, without a trial, or an hour's warning, the accused culprit into the presence of his God? To come to such a state of things would, we submit, be "progressing" backwards. "There would be exceedingly wild work taking place in the world," Judge Park well remarks, "if every man were to be allowed to judge in his own case." If he may claim to do it in one case, why not in another? As a remedy, too (as the facts in this unfortunate case afford the most touching illustration), it is absurd almost to madness. Without any resulting good, without restoring anything lost, it gives one hundred-fold more publicity to the family disgrace under which he smarts, beside bringing upon himself the indelible stain of blood. And while, as a remedy for his wrongs, he brings these aggravated evils upon himself, by his lawless act, he inflicts the deepest injury upon others who are as innocent as himself of the crime he would punish, and as much injured by it. Mrs. Marbourg, as, with true Christian philosophy, she reminded the prisoner, was as much injured (since a woman must be allowed as keen sensibilities as a man) by the criminal conduct of his wife and her husband, as he was by the guilty conduct of her husband and his wife, and each one of her nine children was as innocent as his son, and yet his act visited her with the desolation of widowhood, and made her children orphans. There are persons, we know, who ignorantly and thoughtlessly, or wickedly, proclaim that the adulterer should be shot down, and who busy themselves in propagating that morbid and mischievous sentiment; but it requires very little discernment to see how much wiser the law is, than the reckless impulses of human passions.

We repeat, gentlemen, the homicide was not justifiable under all or any of the circumstances. Nor have we been able to arrive at the conclusion that the prisoner had legal provocation such as would extenuate it. We do not find the law to be so. Besides, to say nothing of the evidence of express malice, dating back a week, could it admit of a reasonable doubt that there was more than sufficient time for passion to cool? We turn, therefore, to the other ground of defense.

2. Was the prisoner, at the time of the homicide, a responsible agent? or, in other words, was he insane?

The just principle upon which this defense rests, is, that one whose perception of right is perverted or destroyed by mental malady, is not responsible for his actions, any more than an infant. The law imputes to them no guilt whatever; and, when such a state of mind at the time of the commission of an act sought to be punished as a crime, is shown to have existed, it is the duty of the jury to find the defendant not guilty. And by a recent statute of this Commonwealth, the Act of 31st March, 1860, known as "the revised Penal Code," it is enacted that "in every case in which it shall be given in evidence upon the trial of any person charged with any crime or misdemeanor, that such person was insane at the time of the commission of such offence, and shall be acquitted, the jury shall be required to find specially whether such person was insane at the time of the commission of such offence, and to declare whether he was acquitted by them on the ground of such insanity." This, as it is indicated in the statute, so that he shall be treated and provided for as his unhappy situation and the safety of the community in which it is thus ascertained to be unsafe to let him go at large, may require; and such, should the defense set up in this case prevail, will be your duty.

The law, gentlemen, which must govern your inquiries, and to which you must apply, and by which you must judge of and pass upon the facts relied upon to establish the defense of insanity, as declared by all the judges in England, in Mr. Naghten's Case, and by the English courts ever since, and by almost every American court, including the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and by the most able and eminent judges, among them Chief Justice Shaw of Massachusetts, and the late distinguished Chief Justice Gibson of Pennsylvania, and in the words which we have felt it to be our duty heretofore to state it to a jury in a capital case, is this?

"Every man is presumed to be sane, and to possess a sufficient degree of reason to be responsible for his crimes, until the contrary be proved to the satisfaction of the jury; and to establish a defense on the ground of insanity, it must be clearly proved, that at the time of committing the act, the party accused was laboring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or if he did know it, did not know that he was doing what was wrong." However others may speculate, it is the duty of a jury to bring the evidence to this test.

Upon this general subject, we state to you the law as applied to a case before the judges of our own Supreme Court (three of them present), in the language of Chief Justice Gibson:

"Insanity is mental or moral; the latter being sometimes called homicidal mania, and properly so. It is my purpose to deliver to you the law on this ground of defense, and not to press upon your consideration, at least to an unusual degree, the circumstances of the present case on which the law acts.

"A man may be mad upon all subjects; and then, though he may have glimmerings of reason, he is not a responsible agent. This is general insanity; but, if it is not so great in its extent or degree, as to blind him to the nature and extent of his moral duty, it is no defense to an accusation. It must be so great as entirely to destroy his perception of right and wrong; and it is not until that perception is thus destroyed that he ceases to be responsible. It must amount to delusion or hallucination, controlling his will, and making the commission of the act, in his apprehension, a duty of overruling necessity. The most apt illustration of the latter is, the perverted state of religious obligation which has caused men sometime to sacrifice their wives and children.

"Partial insanity is confined to a particular subject, the man being sane on every other. In that species of insanity, it is plain that he is a responsible agent, if he were not instigated by his madness to perpetrate the act. He continues to be a legitimate subject of punishment, although he may have been laboring under a moral obliquity of perception, as much as if he were laboring under an obliquity of vision. A man whose mind squints, unless impelled to crime by this very mental obliquity, is as much amenable to punishment as one whose eye squints. On this point there has been a mistake as melancholy as it is popular. It has been announced by learned doctors, that if a man has the least taint of insanity entering into his mental structure, it discharges him of all responsibility to the laws. To this monstrous error may be traced both the fecundity in homicides, which has dishonored this country, and the immunity which has attended them. The law is, that whether insanity be general or partial, the degree of it must be so great as to have controlled the will of its subject, and to have taken from him the freedom of moral action.

"But there is a moral or homicidal insanity, consisting of an irresistible inclination to kill, or to commit some other particular offence. There may be an unseen ligament pressing on the mind, drawing it to consequences which it sees but cannot avoid, and placing it under a coercion which, while its results are clearly perceived, is incapable of resistance. The doctrine which acknowledges this mania is dangerous in its relations, and can be recognized only in the clearest cases. It ought to be shown to have been habitual or at least to have shown itself in more than a single instance. It is seldom directed against a particular individual; but that it may be so is proved by the case of the young woman who was deluded by an irresistible impulse to kill her child, though aware of the heinous nature of the act. The frequency of this constitutional malady is fortunately small, and it is better to confine it within the strictest limits. If juries were to allow it as a general motive operating in cases of this character, its recognition would destroy social order as well as personal safety. To establish it as a justification in any particular case, it is necessary either to show by clear proof its contemporaneous existence evidenced by present circumstances, or the existence of a particular tendency developed in previous cases, becoming in itself a second nature."

We introduce here, and answer, the written points submitted by the prisoner's counsel:

1. "The court are requested to instruct the jury that if they believe that at the time of the killing the defendant was in such a state of mind as to be unable to apply the test of right and wrong to the particular case, he is not a responsible agent, and the verdict should be, not guilty."

This is the test or criterion, in passing upon evidence of the existence of insanity, in its common and usual forms, to a degree that will relieve from responsibility; and we answer the point in the affirmative.

2. "The court are requested to instruct the jury that if they believe the prisoner to have been governed by an uncontrollable impulse; his will no longer in subjection to his reason, owing to the excited and continued impetuosity of his thoughts, and the tumultuous and confused condition of his mind; that, goaded by a sense of grievous wrong, he was wrought to a phrensy bordering upon madness, which, for the time being, rendered him unable to control his actions or to direct his movements, their verdict should be not guilty."

We are at some loss to understand what is here meant. If the point is predicated of moral insanity, which is recognized in Mosler's Case, 4 Barr 264, and which we recognize, we affirm it. We recognize moral insanity, however, as they did, as of uncommon occurrence, and evidence of the existence and operation of which, since it cannot be tested by the general rule applicable to the common and usual forms of insanity, is to be received and passed upon in view of the cautions suggested in the case referred to. If the point means more or less than we have supposed, we refuse our assent.

You will inquire, then, gentlemen, whether the prisoner was laboring under moral insanity, and in doing so, you will remember the cautions suggested in the case read. The general test here fails, for in this mania, it seems, one may be drawn on to consequences which "he sees, but cannot avoid," and "be aware of the heinous nature of the act." There is little, in such case, to distinguish it from an ordinary criminal act. "To the eye of reason, every murderer is a madman." In the commission of every crime, the judgment and conscience are overborne for the time by temptation to evil, acting upon the wickedness of the heart and exciting the evil passions to overmastering strength; but to allow that to excuse, would be to make crime its own justification and evidence of its own innocence, and to strike at the foundation of all accountability. It is well said, therefore, that "the doctrine which acknowledges this mania is dangerous in its relations, and can be recognized only in the clearest cases." The evidence adduced to establish it should be subjected to the strictest scrutiny. "It ought to be shown to have been habitual, or at least to have shown itself in more than one instance." "To establish it as a justification in any particular case, it is necessary either to show by clear proofs its contemporaneous existence, evidenced by present circumstances, or the existence of a particular tendency developed in previous cases." Is there such proof here? Were the shots fired at the deceased without discrimination or without a motive? Had a tendency to such acts been developed in a single instance in the whole life of the prisoner before this act of homicide, or has it been since?

If the prisoner was not laboring under moral insanity, you will inquire whether, upon the evidence here, he was laboring under mental malady of any kind, so as not to know and understand the nature of the act he was doing, and that it was wrong and would subject him to punishment. And we propose to detain you but a short time longer, with a few observations upon the evidence in this part of the case.

It is claimed on the part of the prisoner that his appearance and conduct, on that occasion, explained and accounted for by other evidence heard in his behalf, evidenced insanity. The witnesses state that he was wild and excited in his appearance, violent in his gestures, his voice raised to a high and unnatural pitch and heard in a crying tone, and his expressions, some of the witnesses say, were incoherent. The witnesses themselves were of course more or less excited, and they use their own words to describe his conduct and to express their own impressions. Some express his manner and appearance as "excited" and "wild;" some of them say he was in "a phrensy." They testify that he swore profanely, and used also low and vulgar expressions.

The question here is, was this the incoherent raving and phrensied conduct of a maniac or one at the time insane, or was it the violence of one excited by passion and seeking revenge? Was it insanity, or was it anger? You will judge. Violent gestures, loud tones and excited looks are the natural expressions of anger, varying in degree with the temperament of the person and the intensity of his passion. Profanity seems also to be the natural language of angry passion. The witnesses say that his appearance was different from what they had ever noticed it; but none of them had ever seen him angry. Was his conduct natural or otherwise, supposing him to have been sane and to have sought out Marbourg and shot him down, in revenge for an injury? If, calm and unexcited, and as the witnesses had always before seen him, or with a smile on his face, instead of the fire of anger in his eye, he had met Marbourg and shot him down, without any assigned or known motive, and then turned around and walked calmly away, without manifesting any excitement or concern, what would have been the conclusion, that he was sane or insane?

It is claimed also that his appearance and conduct, on that occasion, wore in such striking contrast with his habits and character through his whole life, as to exhibit a complete transformation, which is only reasonably explained on the supposition that the sad calamity that had befallen him, the evidence of which he had confirmed that morning by the confession of his wife, acting upon an excitable temperament for a week, during which he had ate and slept but little, had dethroned his reason. And it is true that he has shown, by all the witnesses, not merely a good, but a very good, an excellent character. It has been shown, too, that he has long been a regular, punctual and an exemplary member of a church; an elder, occasionally officiating for the preacher in his absence; that no one had ever heard him use a profane or vulgar word, or any expression which might not have been used in any company. All this is entitled to your consideration, and to such weight as you think it deserves, in determining the question of his sanity.

Is it probable, the inquiry naturally arises, that if his reason had not for the time been overthrown, he would have acted and talked in a manner so inconsistent with his whole previous life, and so contrary, apparently, to his very nature, as exhibited in the proof of his excellent character as a man and a Christian? And yet it is not to be forgotten that men of the most exalted personal and religious character have fallen into crime. David, who was a man after God's own heart, was guilty of adultery, and, to hide it, of murder. And we read that when the mob had taken his Divine Master before the high priest, "Peter sat without in the palace, and a damsel came unto him saying, thou also wast with Jesus; but he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest." He was accused by another, "and again he denied with an oath, saying, I know not the man." And "after a while they that stood by accosted him with the same accusation; then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man." He soon afterwards "went out and wept bitterly." Peter 'was guilty of lying and profanity. It was conduct grossly inconsistent with his religious character; but it is not intimated that he was insane. The Saviour, "who knew what was in the heart of man," said to his followers, "watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." And an apostle said, "let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Such is human nature, that a good character is no certain guaranty that its possessor may not fall into sin, and but feeble evidence against clear proof of guilt. Still we commend this evidence to your consideration upon this question of insanity, and you will allow it all the weight you think it merits in the prisoner's behalf.

It has also been shown that one of the prisoner's brothers is insane, and has been a raving maniac for twenty-eight or thirty years; and that he has a sister, who, as some of the witnesses expressed it, is a weak-minded woman. She is married and has children, but, in the opinion of some of the witnesses, is not capable of giving proper attention to her children and her domestic affairs. This evidence was offered and received to show a hereditary taint. Insanity is, no doubt, a hereditary disease, which may appear and re-appear, overleaping sometimes a generation; and proof of its existence in a family is pertinent evidence on a question like this. The evidence here, however, going no further than we have stated, is very slight. It does not appear that his parents or any of his ancestors have been insane, or any of the family, except one brother. But, if such proof were made, the force of it would only be to show a liability, or a predisposition at most, to the disease. That is not the disease. If a hereditary taint were established, it might aid in solving the question, whether his unusual conduct is most reasonably ascribable to insanity or anger. You will judge whether this evidence sheds any light on the question.

We all remember, too, that the prisoner became suddenly ill here in this room on last Friday, and it has been shown that, after he was taken to the jail, he was laboring under delirium, and was, for a short time, phrensied and raving. He imagined there were persons there trying to injure him, and he wanted the sheriff sent for to protect him, when the sheriff was there, trying to calm him. He wanted to see his son, when his son was present. He fancied they wanted to shoot him, and that he saw blood on his breast. He continued in that state near half an hour, when he fell asleep and awoke rational. This was delirium, "resulting," as Dr. Bunn testifies, "from depression following high nervous excitement, and resembling mania a potu." During its continuance, there can be no doubt he would not have been responsible for any act done by him. But the question is not what was his condition on Friday, but on the 12th of February, when he shot Marbourg. The evidence has no other bearing on this question than as it may tend to show the existence of some predisposition to delirium or mania, under like circumstances, and from a similar cause, and of the same character. He had been under excitement a week before the homicide. This fact, with the evidence now under consideration, it is argued, explains and accounts for his conduct at that time. It is not made to appear, however, that he labored under any delusion then. He was dealing with a real character, and for a reason then given. To the excitement up to that time was added that of the terrible tragedy, of everything that has followed to him, and of this trial, and yet we do not learn that he had any mania or delirium during the intervening month. That mania, too, results from and follows excitement; while he was under high excitement at the time of the homicide. It is to be remarked, also, that in mania a potu, with which Dr. Bunn classes it, the patient is not fierce, but fearful; his delusion being apprehended danger to himself, which he is trying to escape; and so it was with him on Friday.

On the other hand, it is urged that the prisoner, during the whole of the week before the homicide, was ferreting out and trying to ascertain the truth of the reports concerning his wife and the deceased; going from one person to another, and from place to place, as he discovered some new source of information; comparing statements and noticing discrepancies, in his efforts to get at the truth, as counsel would prepare a cause; that, after having satisfied himself of the truth of the reports, he provided the loaded pistol and went to the vicinity of the post-office, where, as it is alleged, he expected to find the deceased; waited and watched, lying in wait for him in Wehn's store, as it is also alleged, till he passed; followed him to the post-office, and shot him down—what he declared a week before he would do, if he found the report to be true, and giving that reason for it at the time and afterwards. In all this, it is argued against the prisoner, he was following out and executing a deliberately formed and repeatedly declared purpose, reasoning at every step, and knowing and understanding what he was about. It is urged, also, that he afterwards went to the office of Irwin Rutledge, Esq., knowing where it was, and that he was a magistrate; stating to him that he had shot Marbourg, and had come to surrender himself into the hands of the law, expressing at the same time his belief that God would forgive him, and his willingness to be tried by a jury of his country. This, it is argued, all clearly shows that he knew at the time the nature and consequences of the deed, and knew and understood before what tribunal he was answerable for it.

You, gentlemen of the jury, will take into careful consideration the whole evidence, and determine the prisoner's responsibility. This is all we have to say to you.

If you find the prisoner guilty, you will state in your verdict the degree of his crime, or of what you find him guilty. If you find him not guilty on the ground of insanity, the only ground on which you can acquit him, it will be your duty to state that you find he was insane at the time of the commission of the act, and that you acquit him on that ground.

And now, gentlemen, we have discharged our duty. We have dealt faithfully with this case. We sit here, as you sit in that box, to discharge our duty, as you must discharge yours, under the solemn obligations of an oath. Having done so, according to our best judgment, no conscious self-reproach, which we should of all consequences most dread, will ever rise up within us to disturb us in the future. For other consequences, we are not responsible. It is not our province, nor yours, to make the law, but to administer it. It is not for us or for you to remit its penalties; the pardoning power is lodged in other hands. Whatever the result may be, to the prisoner or to the public; whether it be a result which will convict the prisoner, or acquit him; that will vindicate the law, or strike it down; whatever the result may be, we are acquitted at the bar of our own conscience.

The case, and the responsibility of its decision, are now with you.

Notes for Edmond S. (Edward) Marbourg:

Bedford, Pennsylvania - Last week our townsman, A. B. Egolf, received word of the death of Edward Marbourg of Elyria, Ohio, who died in that city at the home of his brother-in-law, H. J. Egolf, on Tuesday, February 2, 1915. Mr. Marbourg was formerly from Schellsburg, and was a brother of the late Dr. Frank Marbourg.

Elyria – Edward S. Marburg, agent for the Berkshire Life Insurance company, passed peacefully from this life, Tuesday afternoon Feb. 2, 1915, at his apartments on East Avenue, having been ill for the past few months, due to Bright's disease. The deceased was a native of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, until 20 years ago, the opening of the steel plant at Lorain, attracted many Johnstown people to this city. The deceased would have been 65 years of age had he lived until but the active life he led, combined with his simple manner of living, led one to believe him a much younger man than he really was. For many years, Marbourg, by hard work, enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most successful agents in the employment of the Berkshire Life company and he prized the success attained by him along that line.

His devotion to his niece, Miss Anna Egolf, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Egolf, of Middle Avenue, was remarkable in this, age and generation and served to bring out one of the chief characteristics of the deceased, who devoted the greater part of his life to make others happy. The deceased was one of the most respected members of the Masonic and B.P.O.E. lodges of this city and his departure from life of activity and social relations, will be regretted in fraternal circles as well as in the hearts his many personal friends. The funeral will be held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Egolf, Thursday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, the burial to be private.

Notes for Webster Lewis Stabler:

History of Washington: The Evergreen State, from Early Dawn to ..., Volume 2. By Julian Hawthorne.

Webster L. Stabler, farmer and stockman on the Atahnam, near North Yakima, Washigan, was born in Pennsylvania in 1835, being the fourth child in a family of eight born to John and Catherine Stabler, both of whom were natives of the Keystone State. Young Stabler had the misfortune to lose his father when but eight years of age, and after receiving a common school education left home at fourteen, went to Illinois, and remained there until 1852, when he crossed the plains with a train of only four ox-teams. They had no trouble with the Indians, but counted no less than five hundred and twenty-two new-made graves beside the trail, victims of the cholera then scourging that whole section of country. After much difficulty they succeeded in crossing Green River, and reached Portland, Oregon, safely late in the year, having been eight months on the road. Mr. Stabler went to Yakima, returned to Clark County, Washington, thence to Puget Sound, tried the timber business, than stock-raising on the Columbia, and finally in 1870 settled down in Yakima County upon the farm of two hundred acres, which he owns and still continues to cultivate. Here he has a fine orchard, good buildings, garden, and all other agricultural conveniences, and raises blooded stock, both horses and cattle. He was married in 1882 to Miss Harriet Millican. They have two children, both boys. Mr. Stabler is a Republican.

An Illustrated History of Klickitat, Yakima and Kittitas Counties: With an outline of the Early History of the State of Washington; Interstate Publishing Company, 1904:

Webster L. Stabler - Among the early pioneers of Yakima County, Washington who have had a hand in the experiences of those primitive days as well as in the later developments and progress of this now populous county, the name of Webster L. Stabler should appear. Born in 1832 in the Keystone state, his parents moved with him at the age of five to the then wild western country of Illinois. Here he was reared amid the border scenes of that state until he had reached the age of twenty, acquiring his education in the log cabin schoolhouse and developing muscle and hardihood in the various duties required about the home. In 1852, when but twenty, he started from Morgan County, Illinois with ox teams to cross the wide expanse of prairie desert and mountains a path beset with dangers of floods and Indians on the one hand and privation and exposure on the other. He reached Portland his destination on October 8, 1852 at the end of a six months' journey, and, after wintering there he took a pre-emption claim in the spring, just across from Vancouver on the Oregon side of the line, where he engaged in farming and stock raising until 1864, when he went to the Salmon River mines in Idaho, where he mined and ran a pack-train into the Boise mines, in partnership with A. J. Bean. He later returned to his ranch near Vancouver and was married to Miss Melinda S. Hayden February 22, 1864. In 1868, he bought a bunch of cattle and drove them to Yakima County, taking up a claim in the Ahtanum valley and putting up hay for his stock. He then returned to his place in Oregon, leaving a man in charge of the new ranch. In the spring of 1869, he returned and filed on the land, which has never since changed hands nor had a mortgage on it. His wife died in Vancouver, Washington August 7, 1869, before he got his effects moved to his present home. Her father, Gay Hayden, was a native of New York and crossed the Plains to Oregon in 1850, settling near Vancouver.

In 1882 Mr. Stabler was united in marriage to Mrs. Harriet Millican: to which union were born two children: Gay, born September 17, 1883, and Lewis, August 17, 1887. Mr. Stabler is an active Republican and in 1890 was appointed Indian agent at Fort Simcoe, but resigned after holding the position for a year and a half preferring to attend to his ranch and stock rather than pose as an office holder. He owns a fine ranch of one hundred and sixty acres, and makes a specialty of breeding Shorthorn and Holstein cattle, of which he owns some fine specimens. Mr. Stabler is recognized as an enterprising public spirited citizen and a good neighbor.

Ida Catherine Snyder 1873 1959. She lived at 35 Henrietta Street Red Lion, Pennsylvania. She and Uncle Aaron had no children and she lived alone during my time. My cousins and I loved to visit her. She always seemed to have sugar cakes on hand and had luxuries we didn't have at home. Like a furnace, bathroom and a refrigerator. She also drove an automobile which was unusual for her era. Had a row of tea roses in back yard. I think she and Uncle Aaron built the house. I inherited her photo albums. Virginia Beck

Notes for John Seitz:

York, March 14, 2000 - Before the invention of the automobile, before tractors replaced horses in the fields, the Seitz family produced hames wooden curved supports that attach to the collar of a draft horse. The traveler or fanner would fasten the traces to the hames to pull a load. John Seitz started the business in the 1850s in a little village along the Susquehanna Trail just north of Shrewsbury that became known for the production of hames. Hence the village earned the name, Hametown. It is said that Seitz contributed to the war effort during the Civil War when the U.S. Army asked for 16,000 pairs of hames, according to the book "Made in York" and descendants of the Seitz family. He used an anvil and forge, a boring tool, some paint and brushes in manufacturing the white oak hames. He sold them under the name of Seitz Loudon Patent Hames. Seitz's son and grandson, both named Benjamin Franklin Seitz, continued the family business until the early 1930s when cars and tractors grew in use. The barn and hame factory disappeared over the years. Only the farmhouse where the hame-makers lived served as a reminder of the once-prosperous business. Now that piece of history will disappear this spring.

Shrewsbury Township, which has owned the Seitz house since the mid-1970s, plans to tear it down later this month. The house and land, which the township building and a park now sit on, had been donated to the township by a former owner. For years the township rented out the home to families. When the last one moved out last year, the supervisors needed to decide the fate of the home. The old house, which dates back to at least the late 1800s, needs repairs. The septic system on the property is failing, Supervisor Joyce Easton said. The supervisors had looked at a variety of options, including repairing the home or even moving it. But nothing seemed feasible. It would take too much money to put in it, she said.

The supervisors voted unanimously in January to dismantle the house. They are allowing Historic York Inc. to salvage old doors, a claw-foot bathtub, mantles, wainscoting and other old fixtures in the home. Those items will be sold through Historic York's architectural warehouse. The proceeds benefit the agency, said Bryan Mundy, warehouse manager. Steve Saubel, a descendant of the Seitz family, plans to contact the state about placing a historical marker on the property. "It's a lot of history there," he said. Saubel doesn't question the township's decision to tear down the house. He understands that it probably has been a burden on the township. His brother, Greg Saubel, is tearing down a log-front house just down the road in Hametown. The ceiling caved in on the old home and it, too, needed extensive repairs. So, he sold the old, interlocking log section of the home to a man who will be reassembling it for a house in Bel Air, Maryland.

Greg Saubel thinks the home may have dated back to at least the early 1800s. He found a 12-foot cave that apparently served as an underground cellar. There also was a 47-foot deep well on the property. Robert Shaub, a Railroad resident interested in local history, said it's a shame to see York County lose two more pieces of its heritage. I hate to see a lot of these places go by the wayside, he said.

- 4800 vi. Dr. Elizabeth Gable, born 20 Feb 1854 in York Co, Pennsylvania; died 07 May 1897 in Stewartstown, York Co, Pennsylvania.

Notes for Dr. Elizabeth Gable:

Dr. Elizabeth Gable died at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Israel Gable, Stewartstown, yesterday May 7, 1897. After a lingering illness from consumption. The deceased, after having been educated in the Stewartstown academy, began her career as a teacher at the early age of fifteen. Her numerous friends in York will especially recall her as a faithful teacher of the Orphan's Home some years ago, which position she filled with much credit during a period of three years. About eleven years ago she began the study of medicine with Dr. J.D. Martin, of Stewartstown, and in the fall of 1887 matriculated in the Women's Medical College, in Philadelphia, from which institution she received her degree in medicine in 1890. After having undergone a successful competitive examination, she was appointed resident physician to Staten Island Hospital, New York. After serving her time of appointment at Staten Island, she was chosen physician at the Children's Hospital, at Palmer, Massachusetts, from which institution she resigned in 1894 and accepted the position as physician in chief of the female department in the Philadelphia Hospital, to which she was unanimously chosen three years ago. While rendering faithful hospital service to the inmates of the institution, Dr. Gable contracted that dread malady consumption, and was advised to relinquish her professional work and seek a needed rest and change away from the confines of the city. She came to York and for nearly two months, was the patient of her cousin, Dr. I.C. Gable, at his residence on South Beaver Street. She subsequently returned to her former home in Stewartstown, where death ended her protracted suffering, which she bore with Christian patience and great fortitude. Dr. Gable was the first female resident of this county upon whom was conferred the degree of M.D. She was a woman of more than ordinary talents and attainments, who was ever ready to relieve suffering, in whatever form it came under her observation, with the true spirit of loving kindness and Christian friendship.

She married John Wesley (Shaffer) Sheffer 22 Apr 1886 in York Co, Pennsylvania; born 22 Aug 1862 in Hopewell Twp, York Co, Pennsylvania; died 05 Dec 1929 in Red Lion, York Co, Pennsylvania.

Notes for Amanda Brenneman:

Two persons were asphyxiated and another was overcome, when coal gas filled their Red Lion RD 3 home, about a mile north of Winterstown, early yesterday morning Dec. 22, 1953. Dead are: Mrs. Amanda Brenneman Sheffer, 91, and her son-in-law, Emory Roy Shaffer, 59. The latter's wife, Lola, 58, was overcome by the fumes but is recuperating at home. Coroner Lester J. Sell listed the deaths as accidental.

Members of the family, quoting from the story told them by Mrs. Emory Shaffer, said the three were overcome as they were getting up yesterday morning. Shaffer arose about 6 a.m. but his wife remained in bed, saying she was "too sick" to get up. Members of the family said they have not determined whether Mrs. Shaffer was suffering from the effects of the gas at that time or was ill from a gall bladder condition, which she has. About 8 a.m., Mrs. Shaffer. noticed the light on in the hallway of the two-story brick house and managed to make her way down to the living room. There, she found her husband dead, sitting in a rocking chair, fully clothed except for his shoes. Mrs. Shaffer tried to reach a door but collapsed across her husband's feet.

Meanwhile, Charles Seitz, a neighbor living across the Red Lion-Stewartstown highway along which the Shaffer home is situated, came to the residence to deliver a Christmas present. Hearing some noises, believed to be Mrs. Shaffer struggling to reach the door in her semi-conscious state, when he knocked on the back door, Seitz went to get help. Seitz returned with his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Charlotte Seitz. Mrs. Shaffer by that time had revived and crawled to the back door, opening it as the Seitzes arrived. They found the aged Mrs. Sheffer in her second-floor bedroom, fully dressed, "overcome by the gas. Dr. Grover Artman, Red Lion, and the resuscitator squad from Leo Fire company, Red Lion were called. Dr. Artman pronounced Shaffer dead. After the aged Mrs. Sheffer was revived by the resuscitator crew, she was taken to West Side Osteopathic hospital, York, in the Burg ambulance but died enroute. Mrs. Shaffer was treated at home by Dr. Artman and was reported yesterday as apparently having suffered no ill effects.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaffer and Mrs. Sheffer were the only occupants of the house, located between Red Lion and Winterstown, just south of Pleasant. Hill park. Relatives said the house was heated by a hand-fired furnace, generally fired with anthracite coal. The front door of the furnace was found open and the cellar of the house was filled with gas, members of the family asserted. Seitz was quoted as saying that gas fumes were noticeable throughout the house when the tragedy was discovered. Dallastown - Rev. John F. Stabley, retired Lutheran minister, died Saturday afternoon Sept. 24, 1949 at 4 o'clock at the home of his nephew, Purd E. Douglass, 62 West Main Street. Death was attributed to a heart condition and followed a short illness. He was 78 years old. Rev. Stabley was born in Felton, attended the old York County Academy, and was ordained in 1899 following graduation from Susquehanna University and seminary. He served near Johnstown, and Fisherville, Dauphin County, where he last served before retiring about 16 years ago due to a voice condition. He moved to Dallastown after his retirement.

Oct. 6, 1950 - A retired Lutheran minister, Rev. John F. Stabley, 78, who died about a year ago in Dallastown, left a $39,127.64 estate, all but $500 of which was left in public bequests to Lutheran organizations. Judge Harvey A. Gross, in Orphans' court, yesterday handed down an adjudication in the minister's estate which determines the amounts to be distributed through terms of Rev. Stabley's will.

Rev. Stabley, who had served in Lutheran churches in Fisherville and Johnstown, retired in 1933 to live in Dallastown. He lived there at the time of his death, Sept. 24, 1949. Judge Gross authorized $19,313.82, half the estate, to be distributed to the Board of Pensions and Relief of the United Lutheran Church of America. Other beneficiaries were as follows: $9,656.91, one-quarter of the total, to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Lutheran church and $4,828.46 each, or one-eighth of the estate each, to the Good Shepherd Home, Allen town, and the Board of American Missions of the Lutheran church. Rev. Stabley left $200 to his sister, Annie E. Livingston, and $300 to the Lebanon Lutheran Cemetery association, North Hopewell township, for maintenance of the burial plot of his parents. Judge Gross' adjudication becomes effective in 10 days unless exceptions are filed.

Notes for John Shenberger:

In 1949, John Shenberger, age 80, was still going strong in his blacksmith shop in Yoe, Pennsylvania. John did not, at first glance, appear to be the might man of Longfellow's poem, Village Blacksmith. He was slight of built, but his arm and shoulder muscles are more powerful than those of men half his age.

He was located in Yoe since 1902. His one room shop was well stocked with nails, rivets, various types of iron and machinery. His shop was heated by an old pot-bellied coal stove.

In 1948, his business consisted of repairing farm equipment, tools, toys, household items, or anything made of iron. Cars have long replaced the horse as a means of transportation. He gave up shoeing horses in 1928 when a particularly nervous animal kicked him in the chest. It was four years before he completely recovered. He then sold all his horse shoes so he would not be asked to do any more of that kind of work. At 80, his hearing was still excellent and his sight was good. He had given up sharpening saws. He found it difficult to tell which of the saw's teeth had been filed and which ones had not.

Farmers used to gather at the blacksmith shop to exchange the news in bad weather or to pitch horse shoes when work was slack. The shop was no longer the clearing house for news and the gathering place for men.

John received his early education in the country schools near Winterstown and Peach Bottom. He learned his trade during a three year apprenticeship under his older brother, Adam. Another brother, Albert, was his partner for many years in the Yoe shop. John and Albert used to make all the iron work for six-horse farm wagons. He remembers the covered wagons and folks moving to the west. The canvas-topped Conestoga wagons were used in his youth to haul produce from York county farms to Baltimore. Each spring the farmers drove the wagons to Havre de Grace, Maryland. They would bring them back loaded with fish which they dried and stored for winter.

John never married. He has made his home with his brother, Adam. He lived a simple life. He preferred to eat vegetables over meats. He was a religious man, seldom missing a Sunday at church; but he did not have any strong denominational ties. He went to the closet church. His formula for his good health at an advanced age was simple. According to John, hard work, never drinking intoxicating beverages, smoking a cigar occasionally, and a little chewing tobacco never hurt anyone. He didn't think that never being married had anything to do with it. He appeared on the census of 1900 at Windsor Twp and in 1910 at Yoe, Pennsylvania.

Notes for Capt. George Washington Stabler:

William G. Cutler's History of the State of Kansas; Chicago, by A. T. Andreas in 1883, page 410:

G. W. Stabler, farmer and stock-raiser, Lancaster Township, Atchison County, Kansas, was one of the oldest settlers of this township; was born in Stablersville, Baltimore County, Maryland, in 1839, where his ancestors had lived for 200 years. In 1852, he moved to Ohio, where he remained until 1854, when he moved to Adams County, Illinois, where he learned the carpenter's trade. In the fall of 1858, he moved to Kansas, settling in Lancaster Township. In 1859-60, he worked in a quartz mill in Colorado. In the spring of 1861, returned to Kansas and enlisted as a private in Company D, Second Kansas Infantry, for 100 days; at the expiration of that time, he re-enlisted in the Second Kansas Cavalry, and was made Sergeant; was in the battles of Prairie Grove, Cane Hill, Van Buren and all the battles of his regiment. In June, 1863, he was commissioned First Lieutenant, and in 1865 was promoted to Captain of Company C, and was mustered out at Leavenworth in August, 1865, when he returned to his farm and has followed that pursuit ever since. The farm comprises 230 acres; 140 under cultivation.

He was married at Huron, September 21, 1865, to Mrs. Nancy Wilson, who died in October, 1878, leaving four children, Gale C., John P., James H. and Mark O. He was again married January 14, 1880, at Huron, Kansas, to Mrs. Anna Berger, of Nodaway County, Missouri. Capt. Stabler has always taken an active part in the politics, both in county and State issues. In 1870, he was census taker for the western part of Atchison County. In 1871-72, served as Deputy United States Marshall. In 1866, was elected to the Legislature, and served his constituents faithfully. He has been Justice of the Peace for the past twelve years. He is an active member of the Huron Lodge, No. 72, A., F. & A. M.

May 11, 1911 - Captain G. W. Stabler was stricken with paralysis Sunday afternoon May 7, 1911 and is in a serious condition. He was in his usual good health and spirits Sunday and had gone out to feed his chickens when the stroke came and Mrs. Stabler found him in the poultry yard unconscious. She called in some of the neighbors who carried him into the house and summoned medical assistance. His right side is paralyzed and he is unable to speak but appears to be conscious of everything. His children were called and some of them have already arrived. Captain Stabler is probably the best-known citizen of Huron and his affliction will be widely deplored.

Atchison, Kansas - Captain G. W. Stabler died at his home in Huron last night May 11, 1911, death following a stroke of paralysis. Had he lived until July 4, he would have been 70 years of age. He leaves a widow and five children as follows: Mrs. Roert Grimes, Good Intent; James Stabler, Coebin, Montana; M. C. Stabler, Fort Collins, Colorado; E. G. Stabler, Atchison; Mrs. G. E. Brooks, Branman, Oklahoma.

The funeral will occur Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late residence, the interment being in the old Huron cemetery. Captain Stabler was born in Stablerville, Maryland, July 4, 1841. He came to Kansas in 1857. In 1861 he enlisted as a private in Company D, Second Kansas Cavalry, and served until August 10, 1865, after having risen to the rank of captain and being assigned to Co. C, Veteran Battalion of Second regiment.

On his return he settled on a farm at Huron. He was a member of the slate legislature for twenty years and also served as a justice of the pence of Lancaster Township. He was the first mayor of Huron, being elected three successive terms. He was a member of the Atchison bar association, having been admitted several years ago. He was postmaster under the Harrison administration. Captain Stabler was for a number of years the Huron correspondent for The Champion. He was a man whose home record, war record and political record was stainless, a man universally esteemed and a man who will be missed in his home town and in the state.

Notes for John Henry Cline:

John Henry Cline educational advantages were somewhat limited, for he began helping his father, farming and lumbering, at an early age. After attaining his majority he "cropped" on his father's farm for five years, and then bought the Jacob Sides farm (later selling it to his son Harry A. Cline). Buying the Robinson gristmill in W. Wheatfield he also operated that for a time, and then bought 800 acres of timber land, embarking in the lumber business quite extensively in his own and surrounding townships. During this time he made his home wherever it was convenient, mostly in Burrell and W. Wheatfield Townships.

He has continued to deal in timber lands ever since, buying the land, cutting off the timber, and reselling, and has also dealt largely in other real estate, being notable shrewd buyer. He assisted in laying out the borough of Farrell, in Hickory Township, Mercer County, Pennsylvania, built many houses there and had his own home there for a while, but he preferred his native township. And in 1890 returned to W. Wheatfield Township, buying a farm of 135 acres where he resumed agricultural pursuits. He still manages the cultivation of that place in addition to looking after his real estate and timber interests. There are two rich veins of coal underlying the property. Mr. Cline is a self-made man, and all the success that has come to him is well deserved, for he has worked hard to make his ventures profitable, and all his advancement is due to his own efforts.

Indiana County, Pennsylvania, Her People, Past and Present" by Prof. J. T. Stewart:

John Henry Cline is one of the notable successful men of his section, engaged in farming, lumbering, milling, dealing, in timber land and general real estate transactions, and though he has now relinquished arduous labor he retains many important interests and continues his business activities.
