This report is intentionally short. It focuses on what changed for the people we work with, why that change matters, and what we still need to learn.

02 — THE PROBLEM WE AIM TO SOLVE

A Crisis That Has Not Eased

Cox's Bazar hosts the largest refugee settlement in the world. Most families have now lived in the camps for eight years with no resolution in sight — and conditions remain severe.

1.2M+	Rohingya refugees live across 33 densely congested camps in Cox's Bazar, almost entirely dependent on humanitarian aid. UNHCR, 2026
1 in 5	children aged 3–18 in the camps have no access to any learning facility at all — and 2025 funding cuts put hundreds of thousands more at risk of losing school access. Inter-Sector Needs Assessment, Feb 2025; Save the Children, Jun 2025
50%+	of camp residents are under 18, growing up with limited education, protection, and livelihood opportunities. UNHCR
Elevated	overcrowding and gaps in services leave women and girls at heightened risk of gender-based violence and child marriage. UNFPA

Peace-building Workshop in Collaboration with IEP

NAIR, in collaboration with the Institute for Economics and Peace (IEP), conducted a peace-building workshop designed to strengthen young people's understanding of peace, conflict prevention, and positive community engagement. The sessions introduced participants to practical concepts of positive peace and encouraged them to identify ways they can contribute to safer, more peaceful, and resilient communities.

Through interactive discussions and activities, participants explored the role of dialogue, inclusion, trust, and cooperation in addressing community challenges. The workshop also strengthened participants' confidence to promote peaceful relationships and positive change within their communities.

10 — OUR APPROACH TO DATA & EVALUATION

Building Trust through Rigor

The figures in this report come from NAIR's own project and beneficiary records for 2024–2026.

As We Grow, We Are Committed To

- Validated tools — Adopting validated assessment tools — for example, WHO- and CDC-aligned indicators for psychosocial wellbeing, WASH, and protection outcomes — to strengthen how we measure change.
- Third-party evaluation — engaging an independent third-party evaluator to review and consolidate our impact data before future reports, adding a layer of transparency for our donors and partners.
- Consistent reporting — Closing the beneficiary-data gaps noted in this report so every project has a verified, comparable figure.

> IMPACT
>
> Transparency is a practice, not a one-time report. We welcome donor and partner feedback on how to make our data more rigorous and accessible.

11 — CHALLENGES AND LESSONS LEARNED

Working in Protracted Displacement

Rohingya communities face a complex environment: prolonged displacement, limited education, restricted livelihoods, protection risks, and declining humanitarian resources. Effective programs require flexibility, trust, and meaningful participation.

What We Have Learned

- Community leadership matters. Rohingya communities have knowledge and skills that should be central to any response.
- Education requires more than classrooms. Children also need materials, supportive teachers, and safe environments — not just classrooms.
- Protection starts with awareness. Communities prevent trafficking and child marriage more effectively when they understand the risks.
- Young people are partners. Youth can be volunteers, peer educators, and community leaders — not only beneficiaries.
- Local organizations need investment. Rohingya-led organizations need sustained funding and organizational support to deliver accountable programs.

12 — PARTNERS & LOOKING AHEAD

With Gratitude, and What's Next

NAIR is grateful to the donors, partners, volunteers, and individual supporters who made this work possible: grants from INGOs, John Godfrey & Associates, Global Refugee Youth Network (GRYN), Women for Women International, Zeenath Azmi, and individual donors.

Looking Ahead

- Education — Expand learning opportunities and strengthen teacher capacity.
- Protection — Increase community-based prevention of trafficking, child marriage, and GBV.
- Livelihoods — Support more households with livelihood skills and income-generating activities.
- Youth Leadership — Create more opportunities for Rohingya youth to lead community initiatives.
- Evaluation — Adopt validated tools and third-party evaluation to strengthen our data.
