Falling into Grace

There is something wonderfully Presbyterian about fall.

The weather becomes more reasonable. Committees return from summer hiatus. We drink coffee without sweating. And somewhere, someone is already asking, "Have we started planning Advent yet?"

October has arrived.

The leaves are changing, the air is cooler, and pumpkin spice has once again achieved its annual goal of taking over absolutely everything.

But underneath all of that, fall offers us a wonderful picture of faith because fall is a season of change.

And, yes, I realize that "change" and "Presbyterian" are not always words we like to put in the same sentence.

There's an old joke: "How many Presbyterians does it take to change a light bulb?"

Change?! My grandmother donated that light bulb!

Yet change is actually part of our Reformed tradition. One of its great ideas is that the church is "reformed and always being reformed according to the Word of God."

In other words, God isn't finished with us yet.

That is true of the Church, and it is true of each of us.

Faith isn't about reaching a point where we finally have God completely figured out. Faith is a lifelong journey of discovering, questioning, growing, changing, and trusting.

Scripture is filled with people doing exactly that. Abraham follows without knowing where he is going. Moses repeatedly suggests that God has chosen the wrong guy. The Psalms ask difficult questions. The disciples spend a remarkable amount of time misunderstanding Jesus.

And somehow God keeps working through all of them.

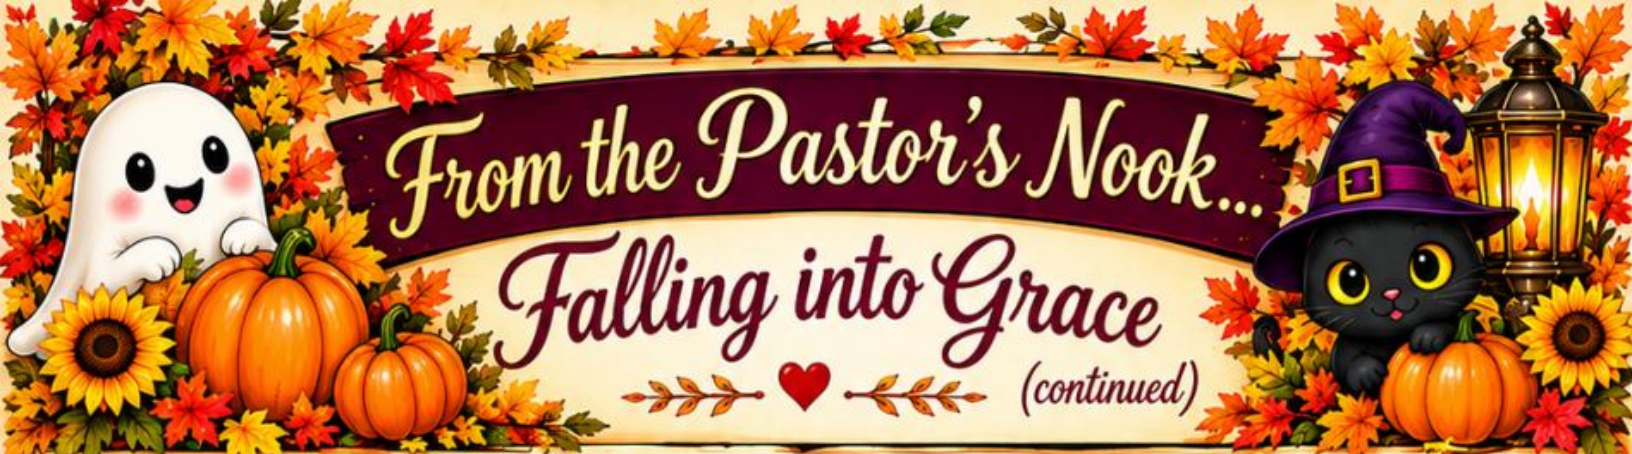

That's grace.

Grace means our relationship with God doesn't depend upon getting everything right. God comes looking for us first. God loves first. Goes first.

And because of that grace, we are free to grow.

Falling into Grace

Maybe October's trees can teach us something about that.

Every autumn, they put on one spectacular show—and then let the whole thing go.

Imagine if trees behaved like people:

*"Nope. I'm keeping these leaves. I've had them since April.
We've always done leaves this way."*

Eventually, the tree lets go—not because everything before was bad, but because another season is coming.

Our lives have seasons, too. So do churches.

Sometimes faith means holding tightly to what matters most: grace, love, compassion, justice, community, hope, and Jesus Christ.

Sometimes faith means releasing what no longer helps us follow Christ where Christ is leading.

Thankfully, we don't discern that alone. We worship, pray, study, serve, question, laugh, and gather around Christ's Table together.

So this October, pay attention.

- What is God growing in you?
- What might you need to release?
- Where are you noticing grace?

The seasons change. Churches change. We change.

But through every season, this promise remains:

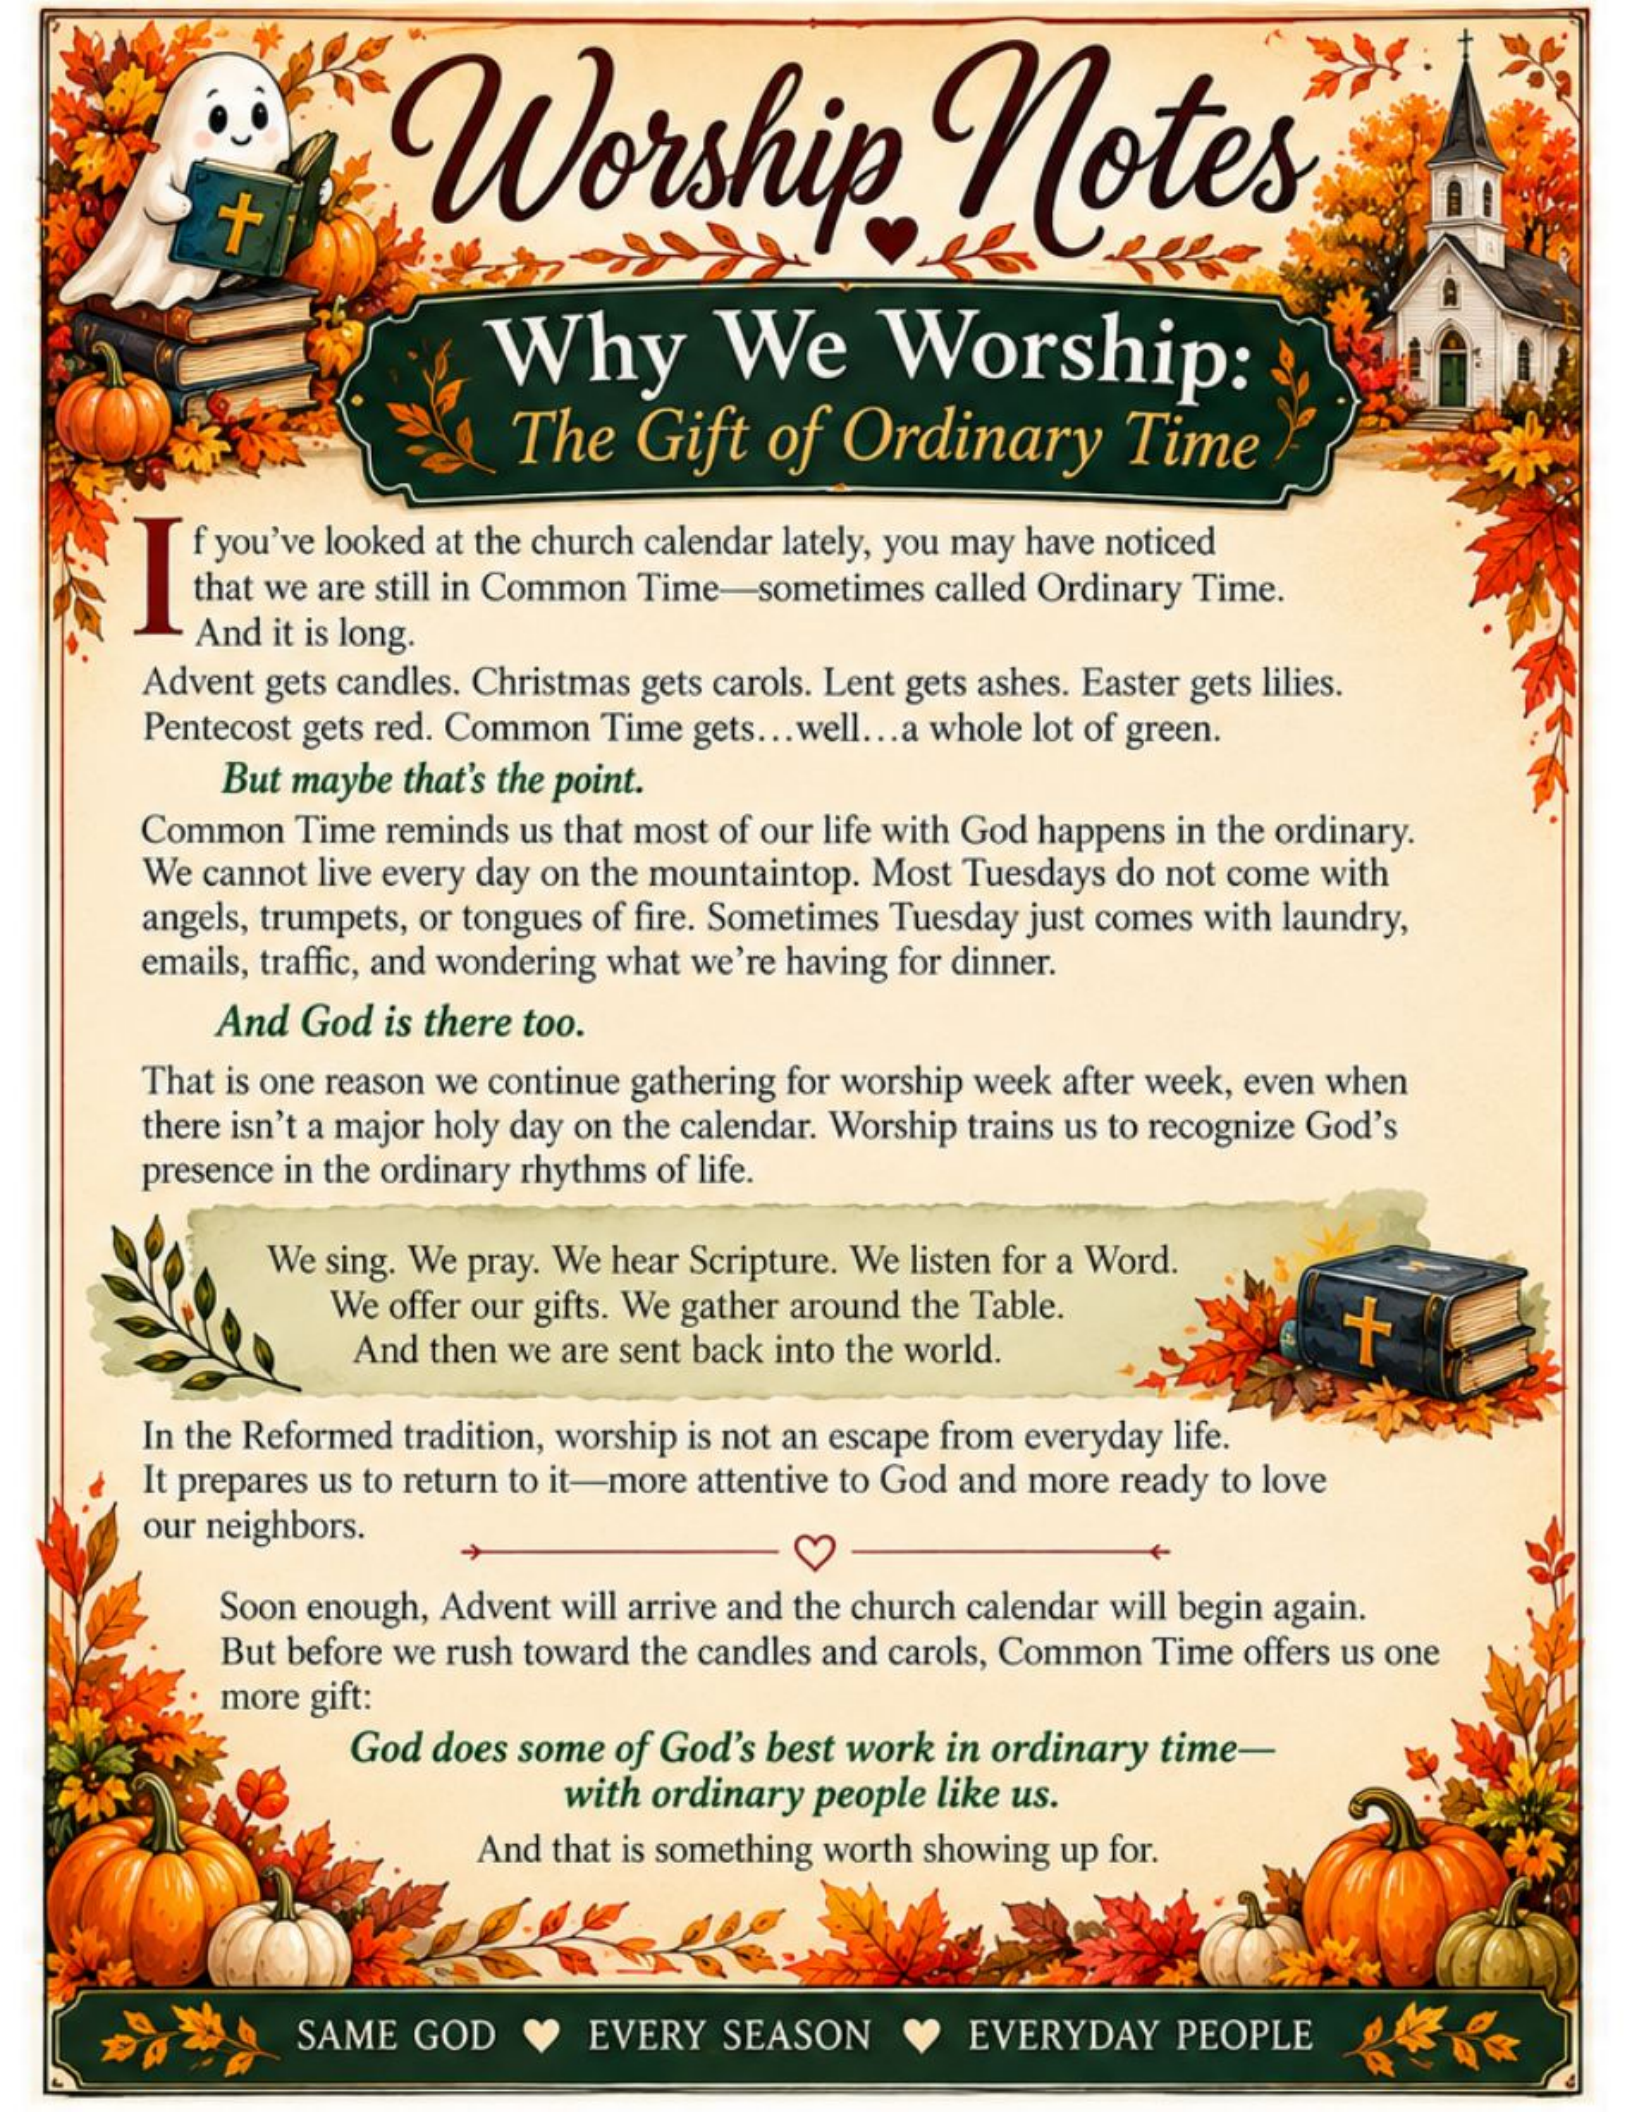

We belong to God.

And that is a pretty good thing to remember when everything else seems to be changing.

Grace and peace,

PW

Worship Notes

Why We Worship: The Gift of Ordinary Time

If you've looked at the church calendar lately, you may have noticed that we are still in Common Time—sometimes called Ordinary Time. And it is long.

Advent gets candles. Christmas gets carols. Lent gets ashes. Easter gets lilies. Pentecost gets red. Common Time gets...well...a whole lot of green.

But maybe that's the point.

Common Time reminds us that most of our life with God happens in the ordinary. We cannot live every day on the mountaintop. Most Tuesdays do not come with angels, trumpets, or tongues of fire. Sometimes Tuesday just comes with laundry, emails, traffic, and wondering what we're having for dinner.

And God is there too.

That is one reason we continue gathering for worship week after week, even when there isn't a major holy day on the calendar. Worship trains us to recognize God's presence in the ordinary rhythms of life.

We sing. We pray. We hear Scripture. We listen for a Word.
We offer our gifts. We gather around the Table.
And then we are sent back into the world.

In the Reformed tradition, worship is not an escape from everyday life. It prepares us to return to it—more attentive to God and more ready to love our neighbors.

Soon enough, Advent will arrive and the church calendar will begin again. But before we rush toward the candles and carols, Common Time offers us one more gift:

God does some of God's best work in ordinary time—with ordinary people like us.

And that is something worth showing up for.

Building Relationships

Sharing Our Sacred Space

Our church building has always been more than bricks and mortar. It is a place where faith is nurtured, relationships are formed, and people come together in community. As we continue to explore meaningful ways to utilize our church property, we are pleased to welcome a Life Group from Jesus Christ Tabernacle, which now gathers in our sanctuary on Sunday afternoons.

Sharing our worship space is another opportunity to extend the use of our building beyond Sunday morning worship and to foster connections within the broader faith community. While each congregation brings its own traditions and expressions of faith, we share a common understanding of the importance of gathering together, building relationships, and creating spaces where people can grow spiritually.

This new arrangement reflects our ongoing commitment to being good stewards of the space entrusted to us and to finding ways our church property can serve others. By opening our doors, we allow our sanctuary to continue its purpose as a place of worship, fellowship, and spiritual growth throughout the week.

As we welcome our new neighbors in faith, may we remember that a church is not defined solely by the people who gather within its walls, but also by the ways those walls can create opportunities for connection, understanding, and community.

We extend a warm welcome to the Life Group from Jesus Christ Tabernacle and look forward to the relationships and possibilities that may grow from sharing this sacred space.

May our doors remain open, our hearts welcoming, and our building a blessing to all who gather within it.

A Season of Letting Go

Finding grace in the changing seasons of life

"For everything there is a season, and a time for every matter under heaven."

— Ecclesiastes 3:1 (NRSVUE) —

October arrives with a gentle reminder that change is woven into the very fabric of creation. The days grow shorter, the air turns crisp, and the trees begin their beautiful transformation. Leaves that once provided shade and shelter loosen their hold, drifting quietly to the ground.

There is something sacred in this letting go.

We spend so much of our lives holding on. We hold on to worries about tomorrow, disappointments from yesterday, expectations of ourselves and others, and sometimes even the pain of things we cannot change. We hold tightly to familiar routines, old hurts, and the hope that if we just try a little harder, we can somehow make everything turn out the way we planned.

Yet autumn reminds us that letting go is not necessarily giving up. Sometimes, it is an act of faith.

In the Presbyterian tradition, we understand that God's grace is not something we earn through perfection, nor is it dependent upon our ability to keep every part of our lives in order. Grace is a gift, freely given, meeting us wherever we find ourselves. We are invited to trust that even when life feels uncertain, God's love remains steadfast.

Jesus invites the weary to come and find rest, reminding us that we do not have to carry every burden alone. Prayer offers us a place to lay down what weighs heavily on our hearts—not because every problem will immediately disappear, but because we are reminded that we are held in love, surrounded by a community of faith, and never beyond the reach of God's grace.

Letting go can mean releasing the need to be perfect, forgiving ourselves for what we wish we had done differently, or making peace with circumstances beyond our control. It may mean opening our hearts to a new understanding, allowing ourselves to ask for help, or making room for someone whose experiences differ from our own.

And sometimes, letting go means recognizing that we cannot do everything, fix everyone, or carry the struggles of the entire world on our shoulders. We can, however, continue to show up for one another, to work for justice, to extend compassion, and to be instruments of God's love in the places where we live and serve.

As the leaves fall, may we remember that the branches are not empty of purpose. They are resting, preparing for what is yet to come. In the same way, seasons of uncertainty, grief, or change do not mean that our lives have lost their meaning or that God has abandoned us. Even in the quiet and unfamiliar spaces, new possibilities are taking root.

Perhaps this October, we might offer ourselves the simple gift of releasing one burden. We might spend a few quiet moments in prayer, take a walk beneath the changing trees, or reach out to someone who needs to know they are not alone.

May we learn to trust the changing seasons of our lives, knowing that we do not need to have all the answers to take the next faithful step.

A Prayer for Letting Go

Gracious and loving God,
As the leaves begin to fall and the world around us changes, remind us that there is beauty in every season and grace in every new beginning.

Help us loosen our grip on the worries that consume us, the disappointments we carry, and the expectations that leave us feeling weary. Give us courage to release what no longer serves love, healing, or hope, and wisdom to recognize what we are called to nurture and protect.

For those among us who are grieving, bring comfort. For those who are anxious or uncertain, offer peace. For those who feel forgotten or alone, surround them with a community that welcomes, listens, and cares.

Teach us to let go without turning away, to forgive without forgetting the work of justice, and to trust without demanding that every question be answered.

May we make room in our hearts for compassion, in our lives for meaningful connection, and in our community for all who seek a place of belonging.

As the trees release their leaves, may we release our burdens into the care of your enduring love, trusting that even in seasons of change, your Spirit is at work within us and among us.

In the name of Jesus Christ, who walks with us through every season, we pray.

Amen.

Going Deeper: The Bible in Depth

Explore
Question
Learn
Grow
Together

Have you ever read a passage from the Bible and thought, "I have absolutely no idea what to do with that"?

Good. You're probably paying attention.

The Bible is filled with beautiful poetry, unforgettable stories, challenging teachings, strange customs, difficult questions, and more than a few passages that leave us scratching our heads. And yet, these ancient words continue to speak into our lives, our faith, and the way we understand God and one another.

This fall, we're inviting you to go deeper through Kerygma: The Bible in Depth, an opportunity to explore the Bible not simply as a collection of individual stories, but as a larger story of God and God's people.

This isn't about becoming a biblical expert or memorizing names, dates, and obscure kings. You don't need to know the difference between Leviticus and Lamentations before you walk through the door! Instead, this study is about learning how to read Scripture thoughtfully—asking questions, exploring historical and theological context, noticing connections, and discovering some of the great themes that run throughout the biblical story.

And questions are welcome. In fact, they're encouraged.

One of the gifts of studying Scripture together is discovering that we don't all see exactly the same thing when we read a passage. Our experiences, backgrounds, doubts, insights, and questions become part of the conversation. In the Reformed tradition, we trust that Scripture is best encountered not in isolation, but within a community of faith—with open minds, open Bibles, and room for the Spirit to surprise us.

Whether you have been studying the Bible for fifty years or are still trying to figure out where Habakkuk is, there is a place for you in this study.

*Bring your Bible.
Bring your questions.
Bring your curiosity.
Let's go deeper together.*

Kerygma: The Bible in Depth

The study is scheduled to begin in late October or early November.

The cost of the Kerygma resource book is $52.

If you've been looking for an opportunity to deepen your understanding of Scripture, strengthen your faith, or simply ask some of the questions you've always wondered about, this may be the perfect next step.

Let's Finish Strong

I want to speak plainly with you this month. Our church needs a strong financial finish to the year.

Right now, our giving is behind where we anticipated it would be based on the commitments we made together. That matters because our budget isn't simply a collection of numbers on a spreadsheet. Our budget represents ministry.

Your giving helps us welcome people searching for a church home. It supports our children and faith formation. It allows us to worship, care for one another, serve our neighbors, maintain our church home, support mission, and proclaim the good news of God's grace.

That's what we're funding. And right now, we need everyone's help.

If you made a financial commitment this year and have fallen behind, please consider catching up as soon as you are able. If you are current and have the ability to give something additional, please prayerfully consider an extra gift. And if you haven't begun giving regularly, this is a wonderful time to start.

I know everyone's circumstances are different. For some households, money is tight. There is no shame in that, and our church will never measure someone's faithfulness by the size of a check.

But stewardship does ask each of us a simple question:

What part will I play?

The church is something we do together. We worship together. We serve together. We dream together. And we financially support this ministry together.

So I'm asking you—not vaguely, not someday, but now—to help us close the gap.

Take a look at your giving. If you're behind and able, catch up. If you can give a little extra, please do. Every gift matters.

There is still ministry to do, people to welcome, children to teach, neighbors to serve, and a Gospel of extravagant grace to share.

Let's finish strong—not because we're afraid of what happens if we don't, but because we believe in what God can do when we do.

With gratitude and hope,

Pastor Wade

Take a Bite Out of Holiday Hunger

October Mission Focus:
Helping Hand Rescue Mission

The Mission Team is once again partnering with Helping Hand Rescue Mission to help local families enjoy a happy and blessed Thanksgiving. Our October/November mission will focus on filling Holiday Food Boxes to provide families in need with everything necessary for a full Thanksgiving meal, including dessert and a special breakfast.

Unfortunately, more families in our communities are facing financial challenges, making this outreach more important than ever. Thanks to the generosity and continued support of our congregation, we can help bring stability, nourishment, and a little extra holiday joy to our neighbors in need.

♥ How Can You Help?

An item signup sheet will be available in the sanctuary. We welcome all food donations, and any surplus items will be used to fill additional boxes for other families. Holiday decorations are also welcome!

Would you like to fill an entire Feed a Family Box on your own?

Jane Beller is coordinating the collection of boxes for the church and would be delighted to include additional boxes from families who wish to go the extra mile. Simply contact Jane at looneychick36@yahoo.com or leave a message for Lori on the church phone at 631-367-9249.

Important Dates:

November 15: Feed a Family Boxes are due at the church.

Mid-November: All boxes must be ready for distribution.

Our congregation has always done a fabulous job helping to "Take a Bite Out of Holiday Hunger," and the heartfelt gratitude received from Helping Hand Rescue Mission is truly priceless.

Thank you for once again sharing your blessings, opening your hearts, and helping our neighbors experience a Thanksgiving filled with food, love, and the support of a caring church family!

Weathering the Storm: A Message of Gratitude and Reassurance

The recent storms brought an unexpected visitor to the grounds of the Presbyterian Church of Sweet Hollow—two fallen trees that left quite a mess in their wake! While the damage to our beautiful grounds is certainly concerning, we are grateful that the incident has provided an opportunity to reflect on what matters most: the safety of our congregation, the strength of our community, and the blessings we continue to share.

As these photographs show, the fallen trees left branches and debris across portions of our property, including near the church buildings. Cleanup and assessment will take time, but we are thankful for the care and attention being given to the situation.

In the midst of the inconvenience and uncertainty, we are reminded that our church is so much more than its buildings and grounds. It is the people who gather here, the friendships we nurture, the faith we share, and the love we extend to our neighbors. Those things remain firmly rooted, even when the storms come.

Thank you to everyone who has reached out with concern, offered assistance, and kept our church family in your prayers. We will continue to share updates as more information becomes available.

For now, let us give thanks for the another, for our continued blessings, and for the enduring spirit of our church community. The trees may have fallen, but our roots run deep!

With gratitude and faith,
Property and Ground Committee
