About Umandu Ande and the lodging center

Umandu Ande is identified as the organizer of Spiritual Gathering in the Jungle 2027. This guide focuses on the gathering, its stated policies, and the preparation expected of participants.

The lodging center is the base for the gathering and the place where participants stay and take part in the program. Please use the center with care, respect shared spaces, and follow the organizers' directions.

Location and the Cofán people

Santa Rosa de Sucumbíos, Colombia

Santa Rosa de Sucumbíos is identified in the supplied material as an Indigenous community in Colombia. It is the location reference used for this guide.

Cofán / Ingi A'i cultural context

The gathering also refers to a Cofán/Ingi A'i cultural context. This cultural context is distinct from the reference to the Santa Rosa de Sucumbíos Indigenous community in Colombia; the two should not be treated as interchangeable labels.

Please approach the people, place, and cultural context with humility and respect. This guide does not romanticize, generalize about, or speak for Cofán people. It preserves the distinction between the location and the cultural context named in the source material.

> Respectful orientation
> Come prepared to listen, observe, and participate thoughtfully. Avoid assumptions about Indigenous communities or about the meaning of cultural practices.

Spiritual gathering overview and its three pillars 🔥

Spiritual Gathering in the Jungle 2027 is presented as a six-day spiritual gathering organized by Umandu Ande. Participants are asked to approach the experience with attention, respect, voluntary participation, and personal responsibility.

The three pillars

The gathering is organized around three pillars. The supplied source text identifies the three-pillar structure but does not include individual titles or descriptions for the pillars. Their distinct place in the program is therefore preserved without adding interpretations or invented explanations.

Pillar	Guidance
Pillar One	Follow the organizers' stated description and instructions.
Pillar Two	Engage respectfully with the gathering and its cultural context.
Pillar Three	Participate voluntarily and take personal responsibility for your choices.

The gathering should be understood on its own terms and is not a substitute for professional medical or psychological attention.

Lodging Center facilities 🏡

The lodging center is the shared base for participants during the gathering. The available source material does not provide an itemized facilities list, so please rely only on facilities and arrangements specifically communicated by the organizers.

- Shared setting — Treat the lodging center and its common areas with care.
- Respectful use — Follow the organizers' directions for using spaces during the gathering.
- Clear expectations — Do not assume that services, equipment, transportation, or emergency resources are available unless the organizers have stated so.

Recommendations Before the Retreat 🌿

- Read the guidance. Before traveling, review the schedule and all attendance, health, conduct, responsibility, and informed consent information.
- Declare conditions honestly. Inform the organizers truthfully about medical, psychological, and emotional conditions that may affect participation.
- Review medications. Declare relevant medications and any known medication incompatibilities before participating.
- Understand first aid limits. Be aware of the organizers' stated first aid limitations and do not assume that the retreat provides professional medical or psychological care.
- Choose freely. Participation is voluntary. Attend and take part only through your own informed decision.
- Prepare responsibly. Understand that each participant remains responsible for personal choices, disclosures, and well-being.

Activities

The gathering's activities are those set out by the organizers across the six-day program. The available source text identifies the spiritual gathering, the lodging center setting, and the three-pillar structure, but does not include a fuller itemized activity list. Please follow the detailed instructions and schedule supplied by Umandu Ande.

- Gathering participation — Take part voluntarily and respectfully in the activities included by the organizers.
- Cultural awareness — Keep the distinction between Santa Rosa de Sucumbíos and the Cofán/Ingi A'i cultural context clear.
- Shared responsibility — Respect the lodging center, other participants, confidentiality, and image authorization requirements.

Attendance Policy and Rules

The following health and participation information is presented as the organizers' stated policy. Please read it carefully before deciding to attend.

Participation Rules

- Voluntary participation. Participation in the gathering and its activities is voluntary. No participant should take part in anything against their will.
- Informed choice. Each participant is responsible for deciding whether attendance and participation are appropriate for them.
- Respectful participation. Follow the organizers' instructions and approach the gathering, the setting, and its cultural context respectfully.

Health and Well-being Policy

- Honest declaration. Participants must declare medical, psychological, and emotional conditions honestly before participating.
- Medication incompatibilities. Participants must disclose relevant medications and any medication incompatibilities that may affect participation.
- First aid limitations. Participants must understand the organizers' stated limitations regarding first aid and available support.
- Professional care. The retreat does not substitute for professional medical or psychological attention.

Conduct Policy

- Respect and boundaries. Conduct yourself respectfully toward other participants, the lodging center, the community, and the cultural context of the gathering.
- Confidentiality. Respect the confidentiality of personal information and experiences shared by other participants.
- Image authorization. Follow the organizers' image authorization requirements and respect the privacy of people who have not authorized images.
- Removal. A participant may be removed from the gathering without reimbursement if the organizers determine that removal is necessary under their policy.

Responsibility Policy

- Personal responsibility. Each participant is responsible for their own decisions, disclosures, participation, and well-being throughout the gathering.
- Truthful information. Participants are responsible for providing honest information about medical, psychological, and emotional conditions and about relevant medications or incompatibilities.
- Understanding limits. Participants are responsible for recognizing that first aid may be limited and that the retreat does not substitute for professional medical or psychological attention.
- Voluntary decisions. Participants remain responsible for choosing whether and how to participate in activities.

Informed Consent

Participation is based on informed consent. Before attending, participants should understand that the gathering is voluntary, that honest disclosure of medical, psychological, and emotional conditions is required, and that relevant medication incompatibilities must be declared.

Participants should also understand the organizers' stated first aid limitations, the requirement to respect confidentiality and image authorization, the responsibility each person carries for their own choices and well-being, and the possibility of removal without reimbursement.

By choosing to attend, participants acknowledge these conditions and agree to participate with care, respect, and personal responsibility.

Thank you for preparing thoughtfully and for bringing patience, honesty, and respect to the gathering. We hope this guide supports a clear and grounded approach before travel and throughout the six-day experience.
