The foundation of Aiken's winter colony was built by a handful of seasonal residents who were passionate and active sportsmen. They built polo fields, tennis courts, a golf club, reserved land for fox hunting, a gun club for shooting, and just about every outdoor athletic activity suitable to the sandy soil and pine tree forests of Aiken, South Carolina. Many could regularly boast that their ideal "Aiken Day" was a three-sport day, thanks to their fortunate circumstances. Exercising polo ponies before breakfast, 18 holes of golf before lunch, six chukkers in the afternoon, and all before cocktail hour!

While Aiken's mosaic has changed tiles over the years, and most people today fit their sports around business obligations and work schedules, all those sports remain entrenched in the fabric of our community. Undoubtedly, the magnetic attraction of golf and horses remains strong for us all.

Aiken is incredibly lucky to have benefited from the opening of Old Barnwell last spring, just a few short miles from Bruce's Field. The two organizations share a similar mission and vision to build an exceptionally welcoming and inclusive experience, whether it be golf rounds or horse shows, while also giving back to our shared community.

We are so pleased to host our first annual Charity Golf Tournament at one of the country's most talked-about new National Golf Clubs.

Are you not a golfer but interested in supporting this event? We have several sponsorship levels that will fit your budget.
