GROWING INTO THE WORLD

Every child has a destiny to find their place in the world.

The Children's Museum of Atlanta is here to teach them that the world is open to their possibility.

This is where children embark on a self-guided tour of discovery.
Of how the world works. Of things they may never have considered.

In a free-flowing space without walls or restrictions, they explore.
Play. And latch on to what is fun and interesting.
They can be painters, sculptors, and dancers. Or engineers, builders, and chemists. They can engage in the business of our food supply.
Or manipulate effects of natural forces.

Wheels turn. Balls roll. Ideas flow and grow.

They won't want to leave. They'll always come back. And when they do, they'll be different. And so will their experience.

What was uninteresting at 3 is irresistible at 8.
Here, children are free to expand into the world at their pace.

And just maybe, in some random morning or afternoon,
your child will discover a glimmer,
a spark of his or her destiny for who they want to become.
