Pos for AFS

Project with Placement Optimization Software for Apollo Formwork System that helps engineers increase form work calculations' speed

About app

The utilization of concrete structures is pervasive across construction endeavors, spanning from low-rise buildings to towering skyscrapers, encompassing foundations, bridges, piers, and beyond. Formwork is an indispensable element for concrete pouring, delineating the pour's boundaries and containing the liquid concrete until it achieves stability.

Determining the formwork's configuration and the quantity of its components constitutes a laborious and time-consuming task, demanding meticulous attention and expertise from skilled engineers

What we did

To automate the process of formwork calculation we have developed software for Autodesk AutoCAD. The software analyzes the outline drawings of future concrete structures and performs formwork calculations according to a special algorithm.

The algorithm performs the calculation of the necessary number of formwork for every pouring stage. The main criterion of the algorithm operation is the minimization of the number of panels - the maximum possible reuse of formwork panels for the next stages of concrete

Results

70%

reducing the cost of calculating the panels
for the formwork

85%

higher turnaround time

The application is widely used in the calculation of formwork panels, which has significantly reduced the turnaround time from several weeks to a few hours. The increase in speed has resulted in a reduction in the use of the engineer's resources, resulting in a significant reduction in costs
