What Is Your Path

I am part of a group in which someone asked "What is your path to christopagan?" here is my response in relation to my journey as of this date.

I was born and raised in a protestant/evangelical church and school. I always felt there was something more to spirituality. There was something missing. I was never against it all; I had/have really great parents who raised me to think for myself.

All-Father was protecting me way back then too...

I have always been and felt different, didn't fit in, was and still am a loner, sensed things more strongly than others and was and still am, affected by others emotions and energy. I also had and still have visions. I am very odd as I am an artist yet have a very scientific and mathematical mind. I believe that is using both sides of the brain, correct? Anyway, the visions then became, "I have a photographic memory". More garbage we fall for. Don't get me wrong, I DO believe in having a photographic memory lol, but that's the physical/scientific part of the world. In the spiritual world, it is in actuality, visions.

I have always been searching for more, mainly to be a better person and better "Christian". All-Father has always directed my paths. Things just happen. It is true when you ask you will receive, when you search you will find.

I have been fervently studying for the past 7 years now, on my own, without a church, group, body, class, meeting or whatever one would call a spiritual gathering. This season started when I moved to another area of the country in which there are churches on literally every block but I had no place to go, no place to fit in... I gather if I had stayed where I was, I may have ended up not fitting in there as well.

All-Father was working on me again, and he has brought me out of what I would like to call a slavery that I had no idea I was in. This is beyond "cult"!

It has become now a search for truth in a way that I never imagined yet, maybe I did.

This 7 year season has come full circle. After the move I had started DNA for genealogy as my grandfather was adopted. I had always been into genealogy and DNA research, and was the one on the family that took on all the genealogy, but because I enjoyed it. I had also planned on going to university for genetics, but in most common themes, life happened, literally, we had a baby! I believe at the end of the day most everyone inherently wants to know who they are where they come from. Yet in this season, I realized, who are we without our history? Heritage? I'm talking ancient. We are all searching but we don't even really understand who or where we come from... even the grandest of pedigrees - beyond that - we are ____ "what?" ____.

This past winter we found our biological family... 7 years it took. I am all about the numbers and if you are reading this, you probably are too. I had already known our ethnicities, heritages, etc.

from the first day of the test results, but it still doesn't mean anything until you start to research your truest roots. Reading history, myth and legend that yes are based on fact and fiction, if not all fact... then how those migrations took us all over the world. We are all one. All-Father made us LOOK differently as an art! If not, we'd all look the same...hummm. Granted yes we all have more of one ethnicity than another, but we are still all mixed. There's no 100%'s. If there is, the lab's will be knocking...

The next phase was inevitable in my journey: language.

So to arrive at an answer to the above question. you must learn the true languages of the ancients, the original writings of the Bible (not the one you run down to buy at walmart yet it will be handy), the people who walked before, during and after Yehoshua (Jesus the Messiah).

All of them.

The first thing that caught my attention was the fact that even in our protestant churches, we still use the bibles that the holy catholic church [the only church around back then] in c. 325 put together and decided what we should have (yes some gnostics were there too thank god or we may not have had ANY positive news at all). All others were discarded, burned and or kept away from us. Even then, in early 1600 the King James Bible again was shortened, cleaned out. Until the last few hundred years (give or take a few exceptions) with technology and media growing, these items cannot be kept secret any longer.

Also know, like from one of my first posts, I will repeat, how serious are you for an answer? Just know that this is not easy. It takes a lot of time and effort to get all of these books, manuscripts, documents and answers but you can and should. And don't worry about having to have an answer for everything - another lie... One of the most liberating things is finally saying "I don't know".

Philippians 2:12 "...work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."
