

Shared Adventure Tours No-decompression Diving Policy

On Shared Adventure Tours trips, we do not encourage decompression diving. Our trips are for the recreational diver only. We do require all our divers to have their own dive computer or rent one. We ask that our divers, acknowledge the following:

- I acknowledge that I understand how to use my dive computer
- I agree to stay within the no-deco limits of my dive computer and agree to follow the dive computer profile parameters
- I agree to follow all dive computer warnings and comply with all stops (deco and safety stops) the dive computer displays while I am diving
- I agree that at any time and for any reason the dive computer locks out of safe diving mode (i.e. locked in no-dive mode), it is understood that Shared Adventure Tours cannot issue any diving recommendations inclusive of permitting diving that may supersede the dive computer manufacturers specifications for a return to safe diving mode. Should the dive computer lock out of safe of safe diving mode (i.e. locked in no-dive mode), I will refrain from diving as long as the dive computer indicates it requires to return to safe dive mode
- I understand that I am fully responsible for planning my dive with the dive computer and will not hold Shared Adventure Tours or any member of staff, responsible for any injury that mat occur
