Scope and Content Note: This collection documents the family history of Lees in Virginia, especially to the Lees related to Richard Lee the Emigrant. (There are extensive series of files by names of individuals with the surname of Lee, by surnames of other families which intermarried with the Lees, and by names of properties associated with these families. Other major series cover the English ancestry of the Lees, antique objects associated with the Lees, and the records of the Society of the Lees of Virginia. There are files on dozens of related families, but the Goldsborough and Boothe families are particularly well represented. The photograph collection provides portraits of many of the Lees as well as pictures of Lee homes and other related subjects. Other formats include: correspondence, letters, maps, genealogical charts, books, periodicals, newspaper and magazine clippings, business records, index cards, completed membership applications, brochures, booklets, prints, reports, court records, property records, histories)

Notes for Hugh De Mortimer Baron of Wigmore:

Name: Hugh De Mortimer Sex: M Birth: ABT 1125 in Wigmore, Herefordshire, England Death: 1180 in England Occupation: Lord of Wigmore Note: Note: Hugh de Mortimer, being a person of a proud and turbulentspirit, opposed strenuously the accession of King Henry II uponthe demise of Stephen, and induced Roger, Earl of Hereford, tofortify his castles of Gloucester and Hereford against the newmonarch, himself doing the same with his castles of Cleobury,Wigmore, and Brugges (commonly called Bridgenorth). WhereuponGilbert Foliot, at that time Bishop of Hereford, addressinghimself to the Earl of Hereford, his kinsman, by fairpersuasions soon brought him to peaceable submission. ButMortimer continuing obstinate, the king was forced to raise anarmy and, at the point of the sword, to being him to obedience.Between this rude baron and Joceas de Dynant, at that time Lord of Ludlow, existed a feud, carried to so fierce a pitch that Dynant could not pass safely out of his castle for fear of being taken by Mortimer's men, but it so happened that Mortimer, setting his spies to take all advantages of Dynant, was surprised himself and carried prisoner to Ludlow where he was detained until he paid a ransom of 3,000 marks of silver. He was oftentimes engaged against the Welsh and he erected some strong castles in Wales. He likewise finished the foundation of the abbey of Wigmore, begun by his father, and in his old age became a canon of that house. He m. and had issue, Roger, his successor; Hugh, who m. Felicia de Sancto Sydonio, and had, by her, by gift of his father, the manors of Sudbury and Chelmers; Ralph; and William. He d. in 1188 and was s. by his eldest son, Roger de Mortimer, Lord of Wigmore. Notes for William Walkelin de FERRIERES Earl of Derby:

There is substantial confusion over his name. See The Complete Peerage V4.p193 for an account. Personally, I feel there could have been two brothers, William and Robert. Robert being the Earl and when he died at Acre his nephew William son of his brother William succeeded, but no documents support this theory either!

Notes for Hamelin Plantagenet:

Hamiln was b 1130

Goeffrey 1113 (so only 17 at tie of Hamlin's borth)

Henry I was b 1068 died 1135 age 67 and 62 at time of Hamlin's birth

Henry was interesting old goat eaving children all over the place -by numerous women, i.e. sowed his wild oats here and there as he pleased (fringe benefit of Royalty), but none were wuite as late as 1130 - so probabliy son Goeffrey in his wild oats stage.

NOT paternity DNA test at this time and no plans to "dig up" any of principals- (we do know where they are - stone coffins in misc churches in France so it is theoretically possible) DO not think permission would be forth with coming and at this late date who cares anyhow?

Notes for Hugh de Lacy Lord Meath:

Hugh is possibly Gilbert's brother rather than son.

"Much more is known of the actions of Hugh II than of any previous member of the family. He paid no scutage in 1164-5, so that he was probably present in person on the campaign of 1165 from Shrewsbury into North Wales. He was in Ireland with the king from October 1171, and remained there after the king returned in April 1172. He was back in England by 29 December 1172, when he distinguished himself at the first public festival of St. Thomas at Canterbury. The archbishop was carried away by the occasion and expressed himself rather too strongly, only to be rebuked firmly by Hugh II. In the summer of 1173 he was in Normandy helping to quell the rising, and with Hugh de Beauchamp held the castle of Verneuil while it was being besieged by Louis VII in July. He spent some time during the year in Ireland, where he had acquired the old kingsom of Meath, so that from now onwards he spent a good deal of time on the west side of St. George's Channel. In the same year he had been given the city of Dublin and its castle, a grant followed five years later by his promotion to Viceroy. That post he held until 1184, although he had been deprived of Dublin castle for a short period in 1181-2 as a penalty for marrying the daughter of Rory O'Connor, the last king of Connaught. At Durrow in July 1186 he had his head cut off by an Irishman while he was showing him how to use a pick, according to the graphic description in the chronicle of St. Mary, Dublin -- a commentary on his restless nature, apparently intolerant of inefficiency to the end."

Notes for Miles de Ptres Earl of Hereford:

Excerpted from Les Seigneurs de Bohon by Jean LeMelletier, Coutances:

Arnaud-Bellee, 1978: Milo of Gloucester (Milon, Miles Fitz Walter) inherited the title of constable of England and later that of earl of Hereford. He was the grandson of Roger de Pitres, contemporary of William the Conqueror and sheriff of Gloucester, and the son of Walter (Gautier), constable of Henry I. Milo possessed a considerable honor from the inheritance of his father's lands in Gloucestershire and his marriage in 1121 to Sybil, sole heiress of Bernard de Neufmarch. Milo died of a hunting accident on 25 December 1143, leaving four sons: Roger, who died childless in 1155; Walter, Henry, and Mahel, who all died childless before 1166. His inheritance was split among his daughters: Margery; Bertha, who married Philip de Brause; and Lucy. Instigated his son in law Humphrey de Bohun III to rally with Mathilda and defend Trowbridge against King Steven.

Notes for Miles de Ptres Earl of Hereford:

Excerpted from Les Seigneurs de Bohon by Jean LeMelletier, Coutances: Arnaud-Bellee, 1978: Milo of Gloucester (Milon, Miles Fitz Walter) inherited the title of constable of England and later that of earl of Hereford. He was the grandson of Roger de Pitres, contemporary of William the Conqueror and sheriff of Gloucester, and the son of Walter (Gautier), constable of Henry I. Milo possessed a considerable honor from the inheritance of his father's lands in Gloucestershire and his marriage in 1121 to Sybil, sole heiress of Bernard de Newmarch. Milo died of a hunting accident on 25 December 1143, leaving four sons: Roger, who died childless in 1155; Walter, Henry, and Mahel, who all died childless before 1166. His inheritance was split among his daughters: Margery; Bertha, who married Philip de Brause; and Lucy. Instigated his son in law Humphrey de Bohun III to rally with Mathilda and defend Trowbridge against King Steven.

Notes for Hamelin Plantagenet:

Hamiln was b 1130

Goeffrey 1113 (so only 17 at tie of Hamlin's borth)

Henry I was b 1068 died 1135 age 67 and 62 at time of Hamlin's birth

Henry was interesting old goat eaving children all over the place -by numerous women, i.e.

sowed his wild oats here and there as he pleased (fringe benefit of Royalty), but none were wuite as late as 1130 - so probabliiy son Goeffrey in his wild oats stage.

NOT paternity DNA test at this time and no plans to "dig up" any of principals- (we do know where they are - stone coffins in misc churches in France so it is theoretically possible) DO not think permission would be forth with coming and at this late date who cares anyhow?

Notes for Waltheof of Huntington Earl of Huntington II:

In the Spring and Summer of 1075, the Earls of Norfolk and Hereford were conspiring to seize England for themselves, and they enticed Waltheof to join in. He quickly changed his mind, and reconciled with the King, who treated the matter lightly, but at Christmas 1075, Waltheof was brought to trial, his wife (the King's niece) being a witness against him. When the trial resumed in May Waltheof was found guilty and beheaded on St. Giles's Hill (I suppose this is in Winchester, which is where he was tried) on 31 May 1076.

Waltheof and Judith had no sons and two known daughters, (1) Maud, who married first Simon de Saint Liz (Senlis) and second David I King of Scots, and (2) Judith or Alice, who married Ralph de Toni the younger. There may have been a third daughter who married a Robert son of Richard, but this may be a confusion with a daughter of Maud and Simon.

Notes for Owain Fawr ap Gruffydd Prince of Gwynedd:

REF: "Yale Genealogy and History of Wales", 1908, Rodney Horace Yalep. 40: During King Stephen's reign of 17 years in England, he left Wales much to itself and Owain materially added to the resources of his country & re-occupied several districts, which the Welsh had lost in former years. In the meantime however, he and Cadwaladr quarrelled and the latter fled to England. Also during these years (C25) Rhys ap Gruffydd, a son of Gruffydd ap Rhun, who was son of Rhys ap Tewdwr, had won several comparatively important engagements and successes in the south.

Notes for Madoc ap Maredudd Prince of Powys:

When Madog died in 1160 there was a struggle for succession. In 1149 Madog had allowed his nephews, Owain and Meurig, to rule Cyfieliog as an appendage to the kingdom according to the custom of those times -never intending that the area should be separated from the kingdom of Powys. When Madog's son, Gruffudd, succeeded his father, Owain was able to keep Cyfieliog and some adjacent areas for himself, leaving only northern Powys for Gruffudd. This split the kingdom into two resulting in Powys' loss of generally equal status with the kingdoms of Gwynedd and Deheubarth.

Notes for Waltheof of Huntingdon Earl of Huntingdon II:

In the Spring and Summer of 1075, the Earls of Norfolk and Hereford were conspiring to seize England for themselves, and they enticed Waltheof to join in. He quickly changed his mind, and reconciled with the King, who treated the matter lightly, but at Christmas 1075, Waltheof was brought to trial, his wife (the King's niece) being a witness against him. When the trial resumed in May Waltheof was found guilty and beheaded on St. Giles's Hill (I suppose this is in Winchester, which is where he was tried) on 31 May 1076.

Waltheof and Judith had no sons and two known daughters, (1) Maud, whom married first Simon de Saint Liz (Senlis) and second David I King of Scots, and (2) Judith or Alice, who married Ralph de Toni the younger. There may have been a third daughter who married a Robert son of Richard, but this may be a confusion with a daughter of Maud and Simon.

Notes for Yaroslav I "the Wise" Vladimirovich Prince of:
Burke calls him Great Duke of Russia. Snorri Sturlasson call him Prince of Holmgarth and shows his children as Holti-Nimble, Vissivald, Ellisif.

Donald Lines Jacobus (1883-1970), the "Founder of Scientific Genealogy in America" wrote an article in The American Genealogist (TAG) 9:13-15 entitled "The House of Rurik." I quote: "To correct the many errors that have appeared in print, and to aid those who follow the pastime of tracing "royal ancestry," the following condensed account of the early Rurikides is here printed. It is based in large part on "Genealogies et Mariages Occidentaux des Rurikides Russes du Xe au XIIIe Siecle," published at Rome in 1927 as Vol. IX, No. 1, of Orientalia Christiana. The author, N. de Baumgarten, is probably the best living authority on early Russian history, and every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles."

I am not attacking Jacobus, who is a giant among genealogists and certainly needs no defenders. Neither am I disagreeing with Alexander Agamov, in Moscow, who has pointed out that there is no credible evidence that Rurik was ever "Prince of Kiev" and progenitor of the line beginning with Igor, Grand Prince of Kiev, who married Olga. I hope Alexander Agamov is reading this. Some historians and genealogists, Russians in particular, have taken sharp issue with the theory that the Kievan Rus was founded by a "Dane" rather than a "Slav"----and the evidence for "The Varangian Theory" seems fragmentary and inconclusive, at best.

G. Andrews Moriarty and Walter L. Sheppard in TAG 28:91-95 also quote the N. de Baumgarten material as authoritative [specifically "Orientalia Christiana, No. 119, N. de Baumgarten, "Aux Origines de la Russie," p. 79. Both Jacobus and Moriarty/Sheppard headline their charts with "Rurik (d. 879) Grand Prince of Kiev." Jacobus probably did not read 10th to 13th century Russian. But--- some of us may.

For anyone who might conceivably have access to the original, 1927, N. de Baumgarten source---is it provable that, "every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles?"

Or, is it possible that Jacobus and the other experts simply trusted in N. de Baumgarten's scholarship and professionalism---and did not really check out the facts themselves. The Editor of a journal, such as TAG, certainly cannot check out every fact and document himself. But, in this particular case, Jacobus gives the N. de Baumgarten material his personal imprimatur, as cited above [TAG 9:13, Paragraph 2]

So---has N. de Baumgarten in his "Orientalia Christiana"---dealing with "The House of Rurik"---been totally discredited by subsequent rigorous scholarship---or does his judgment still seem credible to some serious scholars---or are there alternate explanations?

This is an intriguing question of interest to many folks who are descended from Anne of Kiev (c. 1024-c.1066) [Anna Yaroslavna] whom married Henry I, King of France.

Notes for Miles de Ptres Earl of Hereford:

Excerpted from Les Seigneurs de Bohon by Jean LeMelletier, Coutances:

Arnaud-Bellee, 1978: Milo of Gloucester (Milon, Miles Fitz Walter) inherited the title of constable of England and later that of earl of Hereford. He was the grandson of Roger de Pitres, contemporary of William the Conqueror and sheriff of Gloucester, and the son of Walter (Gautier), constable of Henry I. Milo possessed a considerable honor from the inheritance of his father's lands in Gloucestershire and his marriage in 1121 to Sybil, sole heiress of Bernard de Neumarch. Milo died of a hunting accident on 25 December 1143, leaving four sons: Roger, who died childless in 1155; Walter, Henry, and Mahel, who all died childless before 1166. His inheritance was split among his daughters: Margery; Bertha, who married Philip de Brause; and Lucy. Instigated his son in law Humphrey de Bohun III to rally with Mathilda and defend Trowbridge against King Steven.

Notes for Yaroslav I "the Wise" Vladimirovich Prince of:
Burke calls him Great Duke of Russia. Snorri Sturlasson call him Prince of Holmgarth and shows his children as Holti-Nimble, Vissivald, Ellisif.

Donald Lines Jacobus (1883-1970), the "Founder of Scientific Genealogy in America" wrote an article in The American Genealogist (TAG) 9:13-15 entitled "The House of Rurik." I quote: "To correct the many errors that have appeared in print, and to aid those who follow the pastime of tracing "royal ancestry," the following condensed account of the early Rurikides is here printed. It is based in large part on "Genealogies et Mariages Occidentaux des Rurikides Russes du Xe au XIIIe Siecle," published at Rome in 1927 as Vol. IX, No. 1, of Orientalia Christiana. The author, N. de Baumgarten, is probably the best living authority on early Russian history, and every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles."

I am not attacking Jacobus, who is a giant among genealogists and certainly needs no defenders. Neither am I disagreeing with Alexander Agamov, in Moscow, who has pointed out that there is no credible evidence that Rurik was ever "Prince of Kiev" and progenitor of the line beginning with Igor, Grand Prince of Kiev, who married Olga. I hope Alexander Agamov is reading this. Some historians and genealogists, Russians in particular, have taken sharp issue with the theory that the Kievan Rus was founded by a "Dane" rather than a "Slav"----and the evidence for "The Varangian Theory" seems fragmentary and inconclusive, at best.

G. Andrews Moriarty and Walter L. Sheppard in TAG 28:91-95 also quote the N. de Baumgarten material as authoritative [specifically "Orientalia Christiana, No. 119, N. de Baumgarten, "Aux Origines de la Russie," p. 79. Both Jacobus and Moriarty/Sheppard headline their charts with "Rurik (d. 879) Grand Prince of Kiev." Jacobus probably did not read 10th to 13th century Russian. But--- some of us may.

For anyone who might conceivably have access to the original, 1927, N. de Baumgarten source---is it provable that, "every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles?"

Or, is it possible that Jacobus and the other experts simply trusted in N. de Baumgarten's scholarship and professionalism---and did not really check out the facts themselves. The Editor of a journal, such as TAG, certainly cannot check out every fact and document himself. But, in this particular case, Jacobus gives the N. de Baumgarten material his personal imprimatur, as cited above [TAG 9:13, Paragraph 2]

So---has N. de Baumgarten in his "Orientalia Christiana"---dealing with "The House of Rurik"---been totally discredited by subsequent rigorous scholarship---or does his judgment still seem credible to some serious scholars---or are there alternate explanations?

This is an intriguing question of interest to many folks who are descended from Anne of Kiev (c. 1024-c.1066) [Anna Yaroslavna] who married Henry I, King of France.

Notes for Waltheof of Huntington Earl of Huntington II:

In the Spring and Summer of 1075, the Earls of Norfolk and Hereford were conspiring to seize England for themselves, and they enticed Waltheof to join in. He quickly changed his mind, and reconciled with the King, who treated the matter lightly, but at Christmas 1075, Waltheof was brought to trial, his wife (the King's niece) being a witness against him. When the trial resumed in May Waltheof was found guilty and beheaded on St. Giles's Hill (I suppose this is in Winchester, which is where he was tried) on 31 May 1076.

Waltheof and Judith had no sons and two known daughters, (1) Maud, whom married first Simon de Saint Liz (Senlis) and second David I King of Scots, and (2) Judith or Alice, who married Ralph de Toni the younger. There may have been a third daughter who married a Robert son of Richard, but this may be a confusion with a daughter of Maud and Simon.

Notes for Yaroslav I "the Wise" Vladimirovich Prince of:

Burke calls him Great Duke of Russia. Snorri Sturlasson call him Prince of Holmgarth and shows his children as Holti-Nimble, Vissivald, Ellisif.

Donald Lines Jacobus (1883-1970), the "Founder of Scientific Genealogy in America" wrote an article in The American Genealogist (TAG) 9:13-15 entitled "The House of Rurik." I quote: "To correct the many errors that have appeared in print, and to aid those who follow the pastime of tracing "royal ancestry," the following condensed account of the early Rurikides is here printed. It is based in large part on "Genealogies et Mariages Occidentaux des Rurikides Russes du Xe au XIIIe Siecle," published at Rome in 1927 as Vol. IX, No. 1, of Orientalia Christiana. The author, N. de Baumgarten, is probably the best living authority on early Russian history, and every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles."

I am not attacking Jacobus, who is a giant among genealogists and certainly needs no defenders. Neither am I disagreeing with Alexander Agamov, in Moscow, who has pointed out that there is no credible evidence that Rurik was ever "Prince of Kiev" and progenitor of the line beginning with Igor, Grand Prince of Kiev, who married Olga. I hope Alexander Agamov is reading this. Some historians and genealogists, Russians in particular, have taken sharp issue with the theory that the Kievan Rus was founded by a "Dane" rather than a "Slav"----and the evidence for "The Varangian Theory" seems fragmentary and inconclusive, at best.

G. Andrews Moriarty and Walter L. Sheppard in TAG 28:91-95 also quote the N. de Baumgarten material as authoritative [specifically "Orientalia Christiana, No. 119, N. de Baumgarten, "Aux Origines de la Russie," p. 79. Both Jacobus and Moriarty/Sheppard headline their charts with "Rurik (d. 879) Grand Prince of Kiev." Jacobus probably did not read 10th to 13th century Russian. But--- some of us may.

For anyone who might conceivably have access to the original, 1927, N. de Baumgarten source---is it provable that, "every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles?"

Or, is it possible that Jacobus and the other experts simply trusted in N. de Baumgarten's scholarship and professionalism---and did not really check out the facts themselves. The Editor of a journal, such as TAG, certainly cannot check out every fact and document himself. But, in this particular case, Jacobus gives the N. de Baumgarten material his personal imprimatur, as cited above [TAG 9:13, Paragraph 2]

So---has N. de Baumgarten in his "Orientalia Christiana"---dealing with "The House of Rurik"---been totally discredited by subsequent rigorous scholarship---or does his judgment still seem credible to some serious scholars---or are there alternate explanations?

This is an intriguing question of interest to many folks who are descended from Anne of Kiev (c. 1024-c.1066) [Anna Yaroslavna] whom married Henry I, King of France.

Notes for Yaroslav I "the Wise" Vladimirovich Prince of:
Burke calls him Great Duke of Russia. Snorri Sturlasson call him Prince of Holmgarth and shows his children as Holti-Nimble, Vissivald, Ellisif.

Donald Lines Jacobus (1883-1970), the "Founder of Scientific Genealogy in America" wrote an article in The American Genealogist (TAG) 9:13-15 entitled "The House of Rurik." I quote: "To correct the many errors that have appeared in print, and to aid those who follow the pastime of tracing "royal ancestry," the following condensed account of the early Rurikides is here printed. It is based in large part on "Genealogies et Mariages Occidentaux des Rurikides Russes du Xe au XIIIe Siecle," published at Rome in 1927 as Vol. IX, No. 1, of Orientalia Christiana. The author, N. de Baumgarten, is probably the best living authority on early Russian history, and every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles."

I am not attacking Jacobus, who is a giant among genealogists and certainly needs no defenders. Neither am I disagreeing with Alexander Agamov, in Moscow, who has pointed out that there is no credible evidence that Rurik was ever "Prince of Kiev" and progenitor of the line beginning with Igor, Grand Prince of Kiev, who married Olga. I hope Alexander Agamov is reading this. Some historians and genealogists, Russians in particular, have taken sharp issue with the theory that the Kievan Rus was founded by a "Dane" rather than a "Slav"----and the evidence for "The Varangian Theory" seems fragmentary and inconclusive, at best.

G. Andrews Moriarty and Walter L. Sheppard in TAG 28:91-95 also quote the N. de Baumgarten material as authoritative [specifically "Orientalia Christiana, No. 119, N. de Baumgarten, "Aux Origines de la Russie," p. 79. Both Jacobus and Moriarty/Sheppard headline their charts with "Rurik (d. 879) Grand Prince of Kiev." Jacobus probably did not read 10th to 13th century Russian. But--- some of us may.

For anyone who might conceivably have access to the original, 1927, N. de Baumgarten source---is it provable that, "every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles?"

Or, is it possible that Jacobus and the other experts simply trusted in N. de Baumgarten's scholarship and professionalism---and did not really check out the facts themselves. The Editor of a journal, such as TAG, certainly cannot check out every fact and document himself. But, in this particular case, Jacobus gives the N. de Baumgarten material his personal imprimatur, as cited above [TAG 9:13, Paragraph 2]

So----has N. de Baumgarten in his "OrientaliaChristiana"---dealing with "The House of Rurik"---been totally discredited by subsequent rigorous scholarship---or does his judgment still seem credible to some serious scholars---or are there alternate explanations?

This is an intriguing question of interest to many folks who are descended from Anne of Kiev (c. 1024-c.1066) [Anna Yaroslavna] whom married Henry I, King of France.

Notes for Adele de Normandy:

The wife of William III (Towhead) was called Adela in his own charters (942 & 962). The Norman chroniclers Dudo of St. Quentin and William of Jumieges in the 11th century, say that Rollo had by Popadaughter of Berenger his son William Longsword and a daughter called Gerloc, who William III later married. I think a French historian suggested that Gerloc = Adela. (this is from William of Jumieges: I think Dudo has roughly the same thing). Ademar of Chabannes in III, 23 actually say that Ebles (manzer) married Adela daughter of Roso/Rollo and begat William Towhead from that marriage. He seems to have been quite confused about this, for in an earlier version of his work (the 'H' text) he says that Ramnulf II (Ebles father) married 'Adelina daughter of Ruin' (=Rollo).

8410573. Hedwige von Bavaria, daughter of Arnulf von Carinthia King of Germany and Oda von Bavaria, was born in 860 AD in Bavaria. She died on 24 Dec 903 AD.

Notes for Hedwige von Bavaria:

Stammtafeln says she is the daughter of Henry, Margrave of Mark (d886).

Current consensus (as summarised by E.Hlawitschka, in Rheinische Vierteljahrblätter, 1974, p141ff) is that she was a daughter of Margrave Henry who died at Paris against the Normans 28.8.886 (he also often appears with other titles: Duke of the Austrasians, is one of them). Her mother was according to the same author) was probably a grand-daughter of St. Ida (d.c.820) and the Saxon Count Egbert (fl.809-11).

I can only refer back to the same article: there was a family in Saxony at this time who historians call the Egbertiner or Cobbonen after their most distinguished members. The details about Ida and Egbert's family come from two sources: her Life (written 980/3) and the Translatio S. Puginnae (c.860/77). St. Ida was the founder of Herford, a convent in Saxony. Her Life calls Egbert duke of all Saxony between the Rhine and the Weser appointed by Charlemagne. A count Egbert appears in the Royal Frankish Annals in 809 and 811 concerned with the boundary between Saxony and Denmark. Their children included Warin abbot of Corvey 826-56, and Count Cobbo the Elder (d. fl. 845), and Addila abbess of Herford. This family continued to be important in Saxony in the 10th century.

Ida is said to be the daughter of a Frankish count (though Hlawitschkatries to make her a daughter of Carloman I d.771, wrongly I think). As Egbert of Wessex became king in 802 (?), it would seem unlikely that he could have two different careers in two different countries, at the same time. Unless the ASC date 802 is wrong.

PS: the Egbertiner are also mentioned in an article in English (about the revolt of the Stellinga in Saxony c.840-43), in Speculum 70, 1995, p488. Speculum is an American journal on Medieval History.

Dutch "Winkler Prins" encyclopedia says Henry was via his mother a grandson of Louis the German (who was a grandson of Charlemagne). The sources of this article are:

Notes for Hywel 'Dda' ap Cadell Prince of Deheubarth:

REF: MFHOWELLJR@aol.com (HOWELL-L@rootsweb.com, Howell readersgroup):

Present Welsh, English and American Howells derive from the old Welsh family of Abernert in Carmarthenshire, the lineage and namederiving from Hywel Dda the King of Wales from 943 to 950. He was grandson of Rhodri Mawr, the Great, who united almost all of ancient Wales under his supremacy. He (Hywel Dda I presume) was married to Ellen, daughter of the last of the Kings of Dyfed. The reign of Howel Dda was remarkable for its peacefulness, and is the only ruler of ancient Wales designated "The Good". He was also the only King ever to issue his own coinage. On a visit to Rome in 928, became a student of jurisprudence, and the code of laws he composed is his lasting claim to fame. Three parts of his code are still found in English Common Law. He was such a wise and just man that he was called "the head and glory of all the Britons." There is a place today in Wales called Crickhowell, which is considered to be either his home and/or pob.

Notes for Yaroslav I "the Wise" Vladimirovich Prince of:
Burke calls him Great Duke of Russia. Snorri Sturlason call him Prince of Holmgarth and shows his children as Holti-Nimble, Vissivald, Ellisif.

Donald Lines Jacobus (1883-1970), the "Founder of Scientific Genealogy in America" wrote an article in The American Genealogist (TAG) 9:13-15 entitled "The House of Rurik." I quote: "To correct the many errors that have appeared in print, and to aid those who follow the pastime of tracing "royal ancestry," the following condensed account of the early Rurikides is here printed. It is based in large part on "Genealogies et Mariages Occidentaux des Rurikides Russes du Xe au XIIIe Siecle," published at Rome in 1927 as Vol. IX, No. 1, of Orientalia Christiana. The author, N. de Baumgarten, is probably the best living authority on early Russian history, and every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles."

I am not attacking Jacobus, who is a giant among genealogists and certainly needs no defenders. Neither am I disagreeing with Alexander Agamov, in Moscow, who has pointed out that there is no credible evidence that Rurik was ever "Prince of Kiev" and progenitor of the line beginning with Igor, Grand Prince of Kiev, who married Olga. I hope Alexander Agamov is reading this. Some historians and genealogists, Russians in particular, have taken sharp issue with the theory that the Kievan Rus was founded by a "Dane" rather than a "Slav"----and the evidence for "The Varangian Theory" seems fragmentary and inconclusive, at best.

G. Andrews Moriarty and Walter L. Sheppard in TAG 28:91-95 also quote the N. de Baumgarten material as authoritative [specifically
"Orientalia Christiana, No. 119, N. de Baumgarten, "Aux Origines de la Russie," p. 79. Both Jacobus and Moriarty/Sheppard headline their charts with "Rurik (d. 879) Grand Prince of Kiev." Jacobus probably did not read 10th to 13th century Russian. But--- some of us may.

For anyone who might conceivably have access to the original, 1927, N. de Baumgarten source---is it provable that, "every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles?"

Or, is it possible that Jacobus and the other experts simply trusted in N. de Baumgarten's scholarship and professionalism---and did not really check out the facts themselves. The Editor of a journal, such as TAG, certainly cannot check out every fact and document himself. But, in this particular case, Jacobus gives the N. de Baumgarten material his personal imprimatur, as cited above [TAG 9:13, Paragraph 2]

So---has N. de Baumgarten in his "Orientalia Christiana"---dealing with "The House of Rurik"---been totally discredited by subsequent rigorous scholarship---or does his judgment still seem credible to some serious scholars---or are there alternate explanations?

This is an intriguing question of interest to many folks who are descended from Anne of Kiev (c. 1024-c.1066) [Anna Yaroslavna] whom married Henry I, King of France.

Notes for Adele de Normandy:

The wife of William III (Towhead) was called Adela in his own charters (942 & 962). The Norman chroniclers Dudo of St. Quentin and William of Jumieges in the 11th century, say that Rollo had by Popadaughter of Berenger his son William Longsword and a daughter called Gerloc, who William III later married. I think a French historians suggested that Gerloc = Adela. (this is from William of Jumieges: I think Dudo has roughly the same thing). Ademar of Chabannes in III,23 actually say that Ebles (manzer) married Adela daughter of Roso/Rollo and begat William Towhead from that marriage. He seems to have been quite confused about this, for in an earlier version of his work (the 'H' text) he says that Ramnulf II (Ebles father) married 'Adelina daughter of Ruin' (=Rollo).

Notes for Hedwige von Bavaria:

Stammtafeln says she is the daughter of Henry, Margrave of Mark (d886).

Current consensus (as summarised by E.Hlawitschka, in Rheinische Vierteljahrblätter, 1974, p141ff) is that she was a daughter of Margrave Henry who died at Paris against the Normans 28.8.886 (he also often appears with other titles: Duke of the Austrasians, is one of them). Her mother was according to the same author) was probably a grand-daughter of St. Ida (d.c.820) and the Saxon Count Egbert (fl.809-11).

I can only refer back to the same article: there was a family in Saxony at this time who historians call the Egbertiner or Cobbonen after their most distinguished members. The details about Ida and Egbert's family come from two sources: her Life (written 980/3) and the Translatio S. Pusinnae (c.860/77). St. Ida was the founder of Herford, a convent in Saxony. Her Life calls Egbert duke of all Saxony between the Rhine and the Weser appointed by Charlemagne. A count Egbert appears in the Royal Frankish Annals in 809 and 811 concerned with the boundary between Saxony and Denmark. Their children included Warin abbot of Corvey 826-56, and Count Cobbo the Elder (d. fl. 845), and Addila abbess of Herford. This family continued to be important in Saxony in the 10th century.

Ida is said to be the daughter of a Frankish count (though Hlawitschka tries to make her a daughter of Carloman I d.771, wrongly I think). As Egbert of Wessex became king in 802 (?), it would seem unlikely that he could have two different careers in two different countries, at the same time. Unless the ASC date 802 is wrong.

Matt

PS: the Egbertiner are also mentioned in an article in English (about the revolt of the Stellinga in Saxony c.840-43), in Speculum 70, 1995, p488. Speculum is an American journal on Medieval History.

Notes for Yaroslav I "the Wise" Vladimirovich Prince of:
 Burke calls him Great Duke of Russia. Snorri Sturlasson call him Prince of Holmgarth and shows his children as Holti-Nimble, Vissivald, Ellisif.

Donald Lines Jacobus (1883-1970), the "Founder of Scientific Genealogy in America" wrote an article in The American Genealogist (TAG) 9:13-15 entitled "The House of Rurik." I quote: "To correct the many errors that have appeared in print, and to aid those who follow the pastime of tracing "royal ancestry," the following condensed account of the early Rurikides is here printed. It is based in large part on "Genealogies et Mariages Occidentaux des Rurikides Russes du Xe au XIIIe Siecle," published at Rome in 1927 as Vol. IX, No. 1, of Orientalia Christiana. The author, N. de Baumgarten, is probably the best living authority on early Russian history, and every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the citation of contemporary documents and chronicles."

I am not attacking Jacobus, who is a giant among genealogists and certainly needs no defenders. Neither am I disagreeing with Alexander Agamov, in Moscow, who has pointed out that there is no credible evidence that Rurik was ever "Prince of Kiev" and progenitor of the line beginning with Igor, Grand Prince of Kiev, who married Olga. I hope Alexander Agamov is reading this. Some historians and genealogists, Russians in particular, have taken sharp issue with the theory that the Kievan Rus was founded by a "Dane" rather than a "Slav"----and the evidence for "The Varangian Theory" seems fragmentary and inconclusive, at best.

G. Andrews Moriarty and Walter L. Sheppard in TAG 28:91-95 also quote the N. de Baumgarten material as authoritative [specifically "Orientalia Christiana, No. 119, N. de Baumgarten, "Aux Origines de la Russie," p. 79. Both Jacobus and Moriarty/Sheppard headline their charts with "Rurik (d. 879) Grand Prince of Kiev." Jacobus probably did not read 10th to 13th century Russian. But--- some of us may.

For anyone who might conceivably have access to the original, 1927, N. de Baumgarten source---is it provable that, "every statement made on the fourteen genealogical tables of his monograph is fully supported by the

citation of contemporary documents and chronicles?"

Or, is it possible that Jacobus and the other experts simply trusted in N. de Baumgarten's scholarship and professionalism---and did not really check out the facts themselves. The Editor of a journal, such as TAG, certainly cannot check out every fact and document himself. But, in this particular case, Jacobus gives the N. de Baumgarten material his personal imprimatur, as cited above [TAG 9:13, Paragraph 2]

So---has N. de Baumgarten in his "Orientalia Christiana"---dealing with "The House of Rurik"---been totally discredited by subsequent rigorous scholarship---or does his judgment still seem credible to some serious scholars---or are there alternate explanations?

This is an intriguing question of interest to many folks who are descended from Anne of Kiev (c. 1024-c.1066) [Anna Yaroslavna] whom married Henry I, King of France.

16943049. Angharad verch Meurig, daughter of Meurig ap Dyfnwallon, was born in 825 AD in of Ceredigion, Wales.

Notes for Rhodri Mawr "the Great" ap Merfyn Prince of:

Rhodri Mawr, king of Gwynedd, died in 878. Although he was an important Welsh king, it is not really appropriate to call him the "first King of Wales", for there were large parts of Wales over which he did not rule. Most sources give the name of Rhodri's wife as Angharad, heiress of Ceredigion, and give his mother as Nest, heiress of Powys, but Patrick Sims-Williams [in the article "Historical Need and Literary Narrative: a Caveat from Ninth-Century Wales", Welsh History Review, vol. 17 (1994), pp. 1-40] has recently argued (conclusively, in my opinion) that neither Nest nor Angharad ever existed, and that they were inventions of later genealogists who wanted to give Rhodri's family a line of descent from the earlier kings of Powys and Ceredigion.

Notes for Angharad verch Meurig:

REF: MFHOWELLJR@aol.com (HOWELL-L@rootsweb.com, Howell readersgroup):

Present Welsh, English and American Howells derive from the old Welsh family of Abernent in Carmarthenshire, the lineage and namederiving from Hywel Dda the King of Wales from 943 to 950. He was grandson of Rhodri Mawr, the Great, who united almost all of ancient Wales under his supremacy. He (Hywel Dda I presume) was married to Ellen, daughter of the last of the Kings of Dyfed. The reign of Howel Dda was remarkable for its peacefulness, and is the only ruler of ancient Wales designated "The Good". He was also the only King ever to issue his own coinage. On a visit to Rome in 928, became a student of jurisprudence, and the code of laws he composed is his lasting claim to fame. Three parts of his code are still found in English Common Law. He was such a wise and just man that he was called "the head and glory of all the Britons." There is a place today in Wales called Crickhowell, which is considered to be either his home and/or pob.

Notes for Adele de Normandy:

The wife of William III (Towhead) was called Adela in his own charters (942 & 962). The Norman chroniclers Dudo of St. Quentin and William of Jumieges in the 11th century, say that Rollo had by Popadaughter of Berenger his son William Longsword and a daughter called Gerloc, who William III later married. I think a French historian suggested that Gerloc = Adela. (this is from William of Jumieges: I think Dudo has roughly the same thing). Ademar of Chabannes in III,23 actually say that Ebles (manzer) married Adela daughter of Roso/Rollo and begat William Towhead from that marriage. He seems to have been quite confused about this, for in an earlier version of his work (the 'H' text) he says that Ramnulf II (Ebles father) married 'Adelinadaughter of Ruin' (=Rollo).

- 9 Jacqueli Finley, PARENTS OF COL RICHARD LEE (Name: UK Parish Records;), Parents of Col Richard Lee. Thorndale used unsourced Family Search "DATA COLLECTION" linked to a personal GED (not sourced) as his sources in his section of research for these parents quoting UK Parish records that DO NOT EXIST. The parish records show Richardus Lee (husband of Elizabeth Bendy) as parent of Richard and present at baptism - I have listed the parish records on my website Col Richard Lee's baptism was dated as follows (as birth may have been 22 March 1617) Name:
Richard Lee
Gender:
Male
Baptism Date:
15 May 1617
Baptism Place:
St. Chad, Shrewsbury, Shropshire, England
Father:
Richard Lee
FHL Film Number:
1701330
As there may have been numerous reasons why the baptism record shows St Chads - 10 miles from Coton - instead of Aveley Chapel AT Coton, inclement weather, unavailable clergy, current plague conditions, etc. There are no parish records in all of UK Parishes of any John Leyes, Lees, etc., and a Jane Hancock associated with ANY of the records and documents mentioned in Thorndale's research and should be considered not valid parents of Col Richard Lee. Here is a link to the NEHS edition containing Thorndale's article:
