The IIBEC So Cal Chapter is seeking abstracts for presentations at the 24th Annual Hawaii Winter Workshop.

The theme of Hawaii workshop 2025 is: Designing for Value. What does value mean to you and the various stakeholders in the project? The current market is putting a lot of focus on value engineering to reduce costs. But when does that cost reduction begin to reduce the performance of the project and what is considered acceptable. Value can also be found in long service life, durability, maintenance reduction, environmental benefits, and many other factors.

The primary workshop goal aims to provide attendees with valuable insight into the building enclosure industry including the areas of design, consulting, manufacturing, and construction. Professionals from the roofing/waterproofing consulting, architecture, engineering, manufacturing and construction community are invited to submit abstracts for presentations. Submitted abstracts should pertain to modern developments in building enclosure design and construction, including but not limited to the following:

- Roofing, horizontal or below-grade waterproofing, air barriers, fenestration systems, exterior cladding
- Industry trends or hot topics
- Emerging technologies, construction methods and building materials
- Advances in investigation and testing techniques
- Building sustainability and resiliency
- Constructability

The deadline for submitting presentation proposals for consideration is Saturday September 7, 2024. Proposals should be submitted as a 250-word (maximum) abstract. Presentations to include project examples.

Any questions about presentation submissions should be sent to hawaii2025@socaliibec.org .
