

Benefits

Competing in a horse show is a great way to benchmark and test a rider's progress. It inspires riders and motivates them to achieve their personal best by competing against riders in the same experience level and age groups.

Showing a horse competitively requires problem-solving, goal-setting and organizational skills. It requires riders to develop incredible attention to detail, down to tack, appearance and performance. The ability to prioritize and execute — often under pressure — are vital and have lifelong benefits.

Parent's Role

Your participation is important to making the day run smoothly

1. Helping your rider prepare the day before by helping bathe their horse, clean their tack, and load the trailer for the next day.
2. Prepare to come to the barn early the morning of to help do any last minute cleaning, lunging if needed, and load horses into the trailer.
3. Throughout the day of the show, parents should expect to be part of the process of mental preparation, getting their rider dressed, helping clean up at the end of the day, and load horses to go home.
4. Meet us at the barn following the show to help unload and provide final care to their horse.
