Improved nervous system function

Since yoga is based on breathing, parts of the nervous system are affected when you lengthen the amount of time you exhale, and control your breathing. This is cued throughout particular yoga sequences. Specifically, yoga can help lower the fight-or-flight response and improve the body's "rest-and-digest" response.

Practicing slow, controlled breathing stimulates the body's vagus nerve, which takes information about the current state of relaxation and relays it to the rest of the body, including the brain. One area affected when the vagal nerve is stimulated is the parasympathetic nervous system, which controls the body's rest and digestion functions.

The mindful breathing practiced in yoga increases the activity of the parasympathetic nervous system. As a result, yoga lowers the heart rate, improves digestion and quality of sleep, and strengthens the immune system. Another benefit is reduced stress

"Connie has been a terrific coach. I've been working out with her consistently twice a week since June 2, 2017. She is completely reliable and punctual. Also always friendly and upbeat without being intrusive. She is supportive, nonjudgmental, and responsive to my physical status. She is eager to provide the specific type of training and any particular accommodations that I may need. In terms of the training itself, she has a huge repertoire and is always mixing it up to keep things fresh and keep my muscles working their hardest. Her knowledge is impressive. I recommend her most highly!"

"Connie is a very professional trainer. She trains based on your own abilities without pressure to do what a person is not capable or ready to do. Very kind, calm and easy to talk with. Does not judge what a person looks like whatever size that might be. Very educated in many different styles of training."

"Connie is an excellent trainer who always changes it up on each visit, which is really important to me. She is a great person, friendly, motivating and committed to your fitness goals and if you're having trouble with any particular area in regards to pain or weakness, she's very tuned to that. You cannot go wrong hiring her"
