Musician

E. Travers creates the Sheridan Nash Mystery Series: fast-paced crime fiction set deep in Nashville's music scene, where a working bass player plummets into danger between gigs.

Travers brings an insider's view to every page. A long-time Nashville musician, songwriter, and touring bass player, she has performed internationally as both an independent artist and a sideman, well acquainted with the hit-making machine and the dark side of Music City's neon rainbows.

The series includes two published titles, Sing Crazy and The Older The Violin, The Sweeter The Music, with a third, Redneck Yacht Club, due fall 2026. Each title is named for a classic country song, weaving the music theme deep into the series.

Jump in and join Sheridan Nash on her adventures.

The Sheridan Nash Mystery Series

Two books out now. A third on the way. Each title named for a classic country song, because in Music City the music is never just background noise.

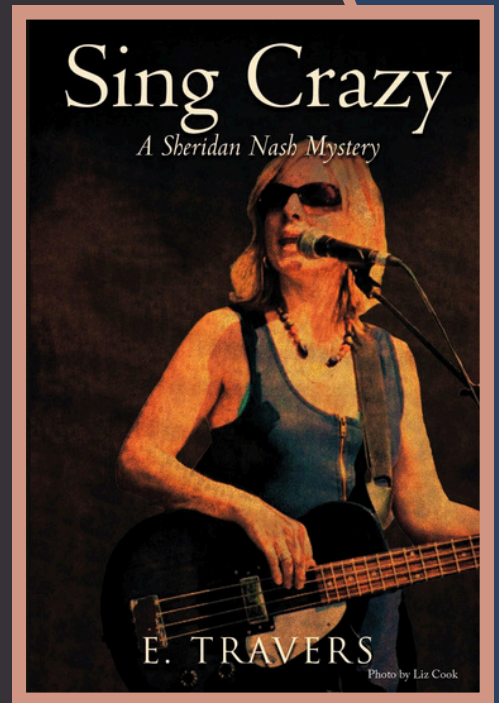

Sing Crazy

Sheridan Nash arrived on the scene with a bass guitar and a dream. When gigs run dry, she supplements her income with secretive investigative work, and her latest case drops her into a race against time. In a sinister abduction plot with two young victims in danger, Sheridan controls her pounding heart and pushes through the terror.

Conversation Starters

Suggested questions for interviews, podcasts, and event introductions

01

Your protagonist is a working musician who solves crimes. How much of Sheridan Nash is autobiographical?

02

Each title in the series is named for a classic country song. How do you choose the song for each book?

03

Sing Crazy is a period piece. What does Nashville in the post-Y2K era give you as a mystery writer that the city today wouldn't?

04

The music business is full of colorful characters. Have any real people found their way into the books?

05 Sheridan supplements her income with investigative work. What draws you to that particular character setup?

06

How does being a musician and a performer shape the way you communicate with your readers?

07

Your settings are very specific: Old Hickory Lake, Lower Broadway, Music Row. Is that intentional?

08

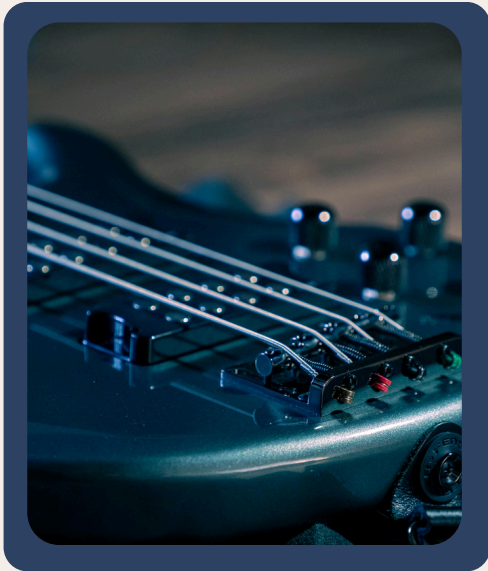

What inherent traits do Sheridan Nash's bass playing skills contribute to her competence as a sluth?

09

Redneck Yacht Club is coming fall 2026. Without giving too much away what can fans expect?
