Joachim Steinberg is an associate in the Silicon Valley and New York Offices. His practice focuses on intellectual property and commercial litigation. Joachim uses creative problem solving to identify and pursue efficient solutions for his clients. He has experience in federal and state courts as well as administrative hearings, and believes in finding innovative and efficient ways to achieve a client's desired outcome.

Joachim clerked for both the Honorable Eric Clay in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit and the Honorable Theodore Katz in the U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York.

Joachim attended law school at New York University. While at NYU, Joachim was named best oralist in the final round of the Orison S. Marden Moot Court Competition. He was also a Robert McKay Scholar, development editor for the NYU Annual Survey of American Law, and a student advocate for the New York Civil Liberties Union.

After completing his J.D., Joachim attended the University of Oxford from 2010-2011, where he wrote a thesis on conflict of laws and international sales. Before attending law school, Joachim taught elementary school in the South Bronx.
