

Valentine's Day 2025

Lasts

I wish I could buy you a Valentine's Day card
Like the rest of the fellas
When I see couples out on their dates
I must admit, I get jealous

You know why I never run out of things to write?
What prevents me from getting sadder?
Because you were endlessly fascinating
You are the greatest subject matter

So today I remember our good times
I don't wallow in what could have been
Being strong doesn't mean perfection
After all, cracks are how the light gets in

You gave us all you had
Because you knew we wouldn't have you for long
So you would have to love us right
In order to make us strong

The kids remain on their journey
It can be bumpy along the way
I'm not always sure how to guide them
So I think, what would Lana say?

We are a little spread out now
But we are as loyal as we can be
You learn why that's important
When four becomes three

The tears have been replaced by smiles
When we say your name out loud
When we start telling stories about you
We are sure to draw a crowd

We are going to be ok without you
Memory of you sustains
I carry you everywhere I go
It's like you're still flowing through my veins

When people see me today
They will be surprised by my smiles and laughs
But God shared you with me
And Love done right, lasts!

Beloved Lana,
Again, As Always & Forever
Happy Valentine's Day
I Love You, Always!
